NOTES

Notes on the History of the County of York, 1791-1800

By the Hon. Mr. Justice of the Supreme Court of the Province of New Brunswick

It is with great pleasure that I have been enabled to publish this volume, which contains a full and complete history of the County of York, from its first settlement to the present time.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been appointed to the office of Justice of the Peace for the County of York, from the year 1791 to the present time. The names are given in alphabetical order, and the year of their appointment is given in parentheses.

The author has been asked many times during the progress of research for this work: "Why this family history?" At first the question was rather embarrassing, for it seemed that everyone should have a desire to know his forefathers and mothers. So we set about thinking if we did have a good reason for the undertaking.

A quotation used by the Hon. H. Franklin Andrews, genealogist of Iowa, is a fitting answer in many instances. It reads thus:

"He that careth not whence he came, careth little whither he goeth."

But the true answer is otherwise. Plants, animals and mankind battle constantly for existence. The struggle is never abandoned until that spark called life deserts its assigned organism.

Man with his high intelligence struggles with every conceivable means to make himself immortal. Activities and devices almost without number have been resorted to in his effort to achieve this inherent desire. He always has debated his status after his demise. His most certain understanding is what he sees of this world, and the more intelligent strive to perpetuate their memory therein.

Hence, this work. Not so much for personal aggrandizement, yet we, the author, can not altogether escape the general laws of the universe, but that law of divinity which inculcates parental love and reverence has been the dominating factor.

That our ancestors, who were fathers and mothers possessing as many noble characteristics as any other chain of progenitors on this earth, should not sink into obliviousness stirred this effort into action.

Possibly some who have asked the "why" referred to, felt a tremor of uneasiness that we might follow that unfortunate trait of human imperfection that too often interests itself with the "spoiler that is among the works of the Almighty."

If there be, they need have no fear. Sanitation teaches ridding the premises of unsightly and obnoxious elements. So in our work, let the unfortunate circumstances pass and decay. Perpetuate only those qualities that may elevate those that are to follow. In the words of the song writer, "If you can't say, 'she is a good little girl,' say nothing at all."

The chief aim of this work has been to make genealogical record of George Hamblen, 1725, the Maryland progenitor, in detail, male and female lines alike.

We have recorded every descendant of this forefather in his or her proper line without favor, that it has been possible to do. Whether they were rich or poor, whether fortunate or unfortunate has in no way influenced our actions as far as human instincts permitted.

In the Hamblen Family as in all others, some individuals have ac-accomplished more than others. Those that have accomplished most require most space to tell of their doings. Many whose activities fill considerable space accomplished but little. Yet, many a good soul writes but few lines under his or her name, fate we may say, but their worthiness possibly may bud forth a genius in some descendant further on in his or her line.

Co-operation by the relatives has been good to a highly satisfactory degree. Only a small percent of the family chain has failed to respond to our correspondence. This small percent has of course left vacant spaces, much to our regret, and will no doubt be the cause of lamentation in many instances.

But we can truly say that our letters of enquiry have been sent to every descendant of the George Hamblen line, no difference how remote, wherever and whenever a new name has been found. If data of any one is lacking it is because all our efforts to obtain it have failed.

Our most appreciative thanks go out to every individual who has in any way contributed toward making this work an assured fact.

To our mother, Eunice Lorena Collins-Hamblen, rightfully belongs the germ idea of this work, for she, although entering the family only by marriage, kept an accurate record of many and many of the Hamblen families, as well as those of her own direct kinsmen, furnished and worked out much of the data submitted herein. You who peruse this volume will do honor to yourself to salute her memory.

Hundreds of sources have been appealed to while gathering the information, United States, state and county officials, Canada and England included, state, county and city libraries consulted, and county records searched for days to collect many of the details.

A search during sixteen years was required to establish the facts relating to the army service of one kinsman who gave his life during the War of 1812.

Many an effort revealed nothing. Very thankful we are that we are permitted to present what we do and our reward shall be ample with the thought that when this work is scattered into the many localities that we hope may result, that the life's work of many a deserving kinsman may be preserved into a far distant day and perused by descendants that may be permitted to occupy elevated positions in human endeavor which were denied to our more humble foreparents.

I am very truly,

Armeanous Porter Hamblen.

Many efforts have been made to write a history of the Hamblen Family. Genealogist in England have included the name among their writings and given it consideration in the same manner that was given the hundreds of names that originated in that country.

Charles Worthy, Esquire, published in London in 1892 in a "History of the Suburbs of Exeter, Devonshire, England," a chapter on the Hamlyn Family and traces it back to the time of William the Conqueror, 1066 A. D.

One David Hamblen, a merchant of Boston, Massachusetts, was perhaps the first to make an extended search for the family history about 1845, and continuing till his death in 1855. He collected and compiled a manuscript of many families down to his time.

He employed a Mr. H. G. Sumerby of London who furnished him quite a quantity of records of the name dating back as far as 1226 A. D. However, he died before he completed his work and it was never published, except that some of it was published in the New England Genealogy, Boston.

Professor Charles E. Hamlin*, late of Harvard College visited England in 1882 and did some research work upon the name while there.

The greatest effort and most successful, was by the Hon. H. Franklin Andrews of Exira, Iowa, attorney-at-law and judge of the court. His researches began during the 1880s. He published his first work in 1894 which contained much of the English data gathered by the foregoing searchers.

In 1900, he published a genealogy of the line of Captain Giles Hamlin, 1654, progenitor of Middletown, Connecticut, a work of 480 pages and enumerated 3867 of his descendants.

The climax of his work was a stupendous royal octave volume, published, 1902, with 1411 pages enumerating 16,311 descendants of James Hamblen, Puritan settler of Barnstable, Massachusetts, 1639.

The author of this work had the pleasure of considerable correspondence with Mr. Andrews before his death in 1919 and by his generous permission much of the early history of the different branches of the family in America has been copied.

When the idea of this work was conceived, 1910, the author was living in extreme western Oklahoma far away from books and libraries and had no idea that any one had ever investigated or written any kind of a work on the history of the Hamblen Family.

In collecting the material for the two works of family history referred to above, Mr. Andrews naturally came into correspondence with a great many other branches of the family name that did not come within the branches that he had under consideration. The manuscripts were loaned to the author of this work and furnished valuable data.

*Note 1. Mr. Hamlin, himself, states that he dropped the "b" from his name, considering Hamlin the more Anglosized form of spelling the name.

However only two papers out of several score bore any reference to that branch that we were investigating. Yet, one of these furnished conclusive evidence where the progenitor, George Hamblen had lived and what his christian name was, facts heretofore in doubt.

A tradition, common among many of the older members of the family, held that Eleanor Mullings, wife of the forefather, Job Hamblen was a descendant of the Washington family of Virginia.

In making research to confirm this story the writer procured a Genealogy of the Washington Family, compiled by the Honorable Albert Well, published in New York City in 1879.

Mr. Wells, assisted by his correspondent, James Phillippe of London, England in a wonderful work while tracing the Washington ancestry gives a comprehensive history of the Scandinavian people, one branch of which was the Norsemen of Old.

From what the writer considers a very reliable source is taken the information given by the English historian Coxe that "Due-de-Paladun or Balure, a great Norman Chieftain," was the father of Hamelin De Balon and other authority stating that Hameline et Hareville was a brother of De Balon.

Mr. Wells' works enable us to trace the origin of the Norse people and learn much of their history to a period 70 years before Christ. Many other historians of note were consulted by the writer and corroborated Mr. Wells' writings conclusively.

Among those consulted were:—Snorri Sturluson, Icelandic historian who lived 1179 to 1241 A. D., David Hume, English historian, lived, 1711 to 1776; Guizot, French, 1869; Wolfgang Menzel, German and Paul C. Sinding, Danish, all historians noteworthy.

By accepting the statements that the followers of Sigge, ruler, leader and founder of Scandinavia, were descendants of the giant Anakims of Bible times open the way to trace further this interesting people's history.

The different Biblical chapters relative to the Anakims furnish their history back to the forefather Canaan. Josephus, the Jewish historian who lived about the time of Christ gives interesting corroboration to Bible history of the different Canaanitish tribes. His writings take up the rehabilitation, beginning at the time of the Deluge and agree with the Bible's story to a remarkable degree.

To begin a family history in Bible times, yea! at the time of the Flood, when the venerable, Patriarch Noah left the much heralded Ark on Mount Ararat, 2348 B. C. would seem more like the work for a theologian than could be expected from the scion of a humble race of ordinary men.

Be that as it may, your servant, the writer, has by extraordinary chance had access to works on genealogy and history by authors whose prestige stands unchallenged.

INTRODUCTION

does at a time when the Holy Book is the final resort, without fear of contradiction and with all the assurance that goes with the Book of Books.

After we leave the accounts as recorded in this Storehouse of Knowledge we can only resort to works upon the subject of the development of the human race in its struggle toward civilization, such as historians have been able to glean from the few records left from the remote ages.

Records that will withstand the ravages of the destroying elements are hard and costly to make. That inherent trait in man to live for himself is so firmly fixed that he takes not a great deal of pains to record his doings in form that his posterity may know how and where he lived.

Of course in his more primitive state he had a lesser means and opportunity to leave enduring records. A hundred years is a long time, a thousand years is time almost inconceivable, so what are we to say of five thousand years?

The best records are governmental records. Absolute monarchies by kings were the first governments. These kings strove hard with the means at hand to perpetuate their names and accomplishments.

The primitive kings made less enduring records than did their more enlightened successors. Hence we may say that a king who lived five thousand years ago must have been a great king indeed if he left records that have reached this remote age. So, what may we expect in way of records of his lesser subjects? Say, even his best general in his army when his own name is barely visible on time's record book, much less those of his private soldiers who carried the humble spear?

We must rely upon the principle that when a king recruited his army for some important expedition that he selected his men with much the same degree of care that governments of today make up an army. Loyalty to the cause is a great essential in a soldier, and there is no such loyalty as that which derives in men of the same race or clan.

Hence we may assume that these ancient kings took with them on their expeditions soldiers of their own race. We are then entitled to draw the assumption that we who are descendants of common men may trace our ancestors along with the accomplishments of these kings and rulers with fair assurance that our forefathers shared to a certain degree the accomplishments of their leaders and know that they lived the lives of the ordinary citizen under the sway of these kings.

Mingled among the turmoils of the centuries were associated the forefathers of our Hamblen Family. Not till progress of the race had advanced in what we call civilization are we able to distinguish in historical records the names that these individuals bore. However they shared the lot of their associates be that high or low.

A strange coincidence to imagine is, that our forefather should always escape with his life from a battle or personal conflict, at least until he had handed an offspring to the next generation.

THE HAMBLÉN FAMILY

ORIGIN OF THE RACE

It is written that a great flood called the Deluge took place on the earth in the year 2,348 before Christ and that all mankind, except Noah and his family, was destroyed.

Noah had three sons who were born about 100 years before the deluge. They were Shem, Japheth and Ham*. After the flood they dwelt on a plain called Shinar.

Shem had five sons.

Japheth had seven sons.

Ham had four sons; Cush, Mizraim, Phut and Canaan. Cush had eight sons, Mizraim had seven sons, and Canaan had eleven sons. Phut, no account of his family given.

Cush occupied the country north of the Persian Gulf and on as far as the eastern part of India. Descendants of Cush also settled south of Egypt on the headquarters of the Nile River. From this tribe the Ethiopian (Negro) race is said to have originated.

Mizraim settled in Egypt and founded the Egyptian Nation. Canaan occupied that part of the country east of the River Jordan to which his name was given, the land of Canaan, and was the founder of the Canaanite nation of which so much is written in the Bible.

Canaan's oldest son was (1) Sidon or Sidonius, born about 2218 B. C. He founded the city of Sidon and his descendants occupied a large portion of the country adjacent.

(2) Sinite settled that portion of the country adjoining next to

*Note 2. Among some of the first things that Noah did after he was permitted to occupy dry land again was to plant a vineyard. Wine was made, "And he drank the wine and was drunken and he was uncovered within his tent." (Genesis 9:21.)

Ham came along and saw the nakedness of his father and told his two brethren without. Shem and Japheth took a garment, walked backward and covered the nakedness of their father. When Noah awoke and knew what Ham had done he was angry. He wished to punish Ham, but because he was his own son and he loved him he would not do so. But he did put a curse on Canaan.

Particular attention is called to the son Canaan, for from him the Scandinavian ancestors of the Hamblén Family are said to have been derived.

the north and his posterity were called Sinites. (3) Arkite or Arucas occupied the country still on north of Sinite and founded the city Area.

(4) Heth was assigned a section of the country north of the Mountains of Lebanon and the country of Sidon and lying east of Sinite and Arkite. (5) Amorite settled the lands along the west and north shores of the Dead Sea and extended his domain across to the east of the River Jordan. Their capital city was Hebron, 1913 to 1421 B. C.

Anak is mentioned as an Amorite and as living some time prior to the year 1490 B. C. when Moses sent his spies into the lands of his three sons, Abinam, Sheshai and Talmai at their capital city Hebron.

The other six sons of Canaan were, Jubsite, Gargasite, Hivite, Aradite, Zemarite and Hamathite, who were assigned lands within the boundries of Canaan, except Hamathite who probably founded the great city of Hamath far to the north of Heth's possessions.

All these tribes of Canaan's sons prospered to a marked degree. They multiplied rapidly and built great cities within their borders. However the tribe of Amorite, called Amorites and the tribe of Heth called Hittites assumed a greater degree of prominence than the other tribes and to them we are able to trace with the most reasonable degree of certainty the races from which the Hamblen Family generate.

The Hittites climbed to a greater prominence than any of the ancient nationalities. The Hittite Empire is said to have begun about the time of the decline of Babylonian. In fact they invaded that country between the years 2000 and 1600 B. C.

While to the Amorites we lay claim as the progenitor of our race yet we must give the Hittite pronounced consideration from the fact that he served as the ally and protector of his less powerful kinsmen. Very ancient chronicles tell us that the Hittites, after establishing a magnificent empire in their north country known as Kappadokia drifted a branch tribe into the land of the Amorite and established themselves in the regions west of the Dead Sea. Their chief city being Hebron.

Quoting from the Rev. A. H. Sayce, L. L. D. of Oxford University, England, in his treatise upon the Hittite; he says: "The Egyptian monuments show that the two nations were confederated together at Kadesh on the Orontes River. Kadesh was an Hittite stronghold; far to the north of the modern Palestine, never-the-less it is described as being in the land of Amaur or Amorites and its king is depicted with the physical characteristics of the Amorite and not the Hittite. Further north in the country which the Hittites had made particularly their own, cities existed which bore names, it would seem, compounded with that of the Amorite, and the common Assyrian title of the district in which the city of Damascus stood.

Gar-emeris is best explained as the Gar of the Amorites * * *
The Hittites and the Amorites were therefore mingled together in the mountains of Palestine like the races which ethnologists tell us go to form the modern Kelt."

In describing the two races the Rev. Sayce says; "The Hittites were a people of yellow skins, receding foreheads, oblique eyes and protruding upper jaws, are represented as faithfully on their own monuments as they are on those of Egypt * * * *. The Amorites on the contrary, were as tall and handsome people. They are depicted with white skins, blue eyes and reddish hair, all the characteristics, in fact, of the white race."

These people are designed to occupy a very prominent place in the history of affairs as they transpired for several centuries. They came into prominence when Moses and Aaron advanced with their followers to a position in the Wilderness of Paran, 1490 B. C. and sent a detachment of their numbers to spy on the Amorites in land of Canaan.

The report of these spies was that a mighty people lived there. They were men of great stature, in fact giants, their cities walled and very great. The Rev. Sayce says, that they were descendants of Anak the Amorite. The spies reported that three sons of Anak, Ahiman, Sheshai and Talmai dwelt at Hebron.

The Israelites were dismayed and refused to go among such a people. A band of the Canaanites did give them battle and the Israelites fled. Moses was much displeased and the Israelites were severely punished for their actions.

Peace again reigned for the Amorites and Hittites till after the death of Moses, and Joshua became his successor. Joshua and Caleb immediately organized the Israelites into a great army and begun war against the Canaanites, or in other words, Amorites and Hittites.

Joshua with his army crossed the River Jordan, 1451 B. C., and captured the city of Jerico. This victory aroused all the different tribes of the Canaanites. The kings of five different cities, among them the king of Hebron, banded themselves together for an attack upon Joshua before he reached their country with his vast army.

Joshua heard of their coming and advanced to meet them. The two armies came together at Gibeon not far from Jerusalem. One of the greatest battles of all time was fought. It was here that Joshua commanded the sun to stand still. The fight was continued with great slaughter to the Canaanites. Their five kings were captured and put to death. Among them was the king of Hebron, king of the Anakims. What soldiers that escaped death fled to their native cities.

Joshua with his army of Israelites continued to advance and took city after city till the city of Hebron was reached. Here dwelt the giant Anakims, who as Josephus records, "had bodies so large and countenances so entirely different from other men that they were surprising to the sight and terrible to the hearing."

However they could not withstand the onslaughts of the Israelites and were defeated on every hand and driven entirely from their native land. Those that escaped from being killed took refuge in the neighboring land of the Philistines in the cities of Gaza, Gath and Ashdod. Their country was allotted to Caleb who took possession, 1444 B. C. He expelled at that time the three sons of Anak, She-shai, Ahiman and Tal-mai.

What the fate of these Anakims was after taking up their residence among the Philistines is only a matter of conjecture. Their fortunes waivered, no doubt with those of their protectors, the Philistines. These people seemed to be able to hold at bay the Israelites and in fact made successful war against them.

In a battle fought, 1141 B. C., the Israelites under the leadership of Samuel were defeated with a loss of 30,000 footmen, but in the next year the Philistines met reverses and were forced to give up the territory which they had gained from the Israelites and there was peace for some time between them.

War again broke out between them while Saul was king of Israel, 1063 B. C. The famous duel between David and Goliath* which took place at this time, created a stampede within the Philistine army which fled and was pursued by the Israelites to the very gates of Ekron and Gath. The Philistines seem to have successfully resisted the Israelites till the reign of the Judean king, Uzziah, who succeeded in taking their strongly fortified cities of Gath and Ashdod, 810, B. C.

At this time their power as a nation seems to have vanished to be revived no more. They are spoken of as a remanent tribe at other dates down as late as 487 B. C. If we are to believe that the giant Anakims survived their identity through all these years of residence among the Philistines they most likely made their escape and emigrated when their safety was threatened by the Israelite aggression against their adopted country when the Philistine power of defense declined.

It is probable that they moved on to the country of their kinsmen, the Hittites and other Amorite tribes who in the meantime had established a great and powerful nation on the north of Palestine. This included the lands inhabited by the other six Canaanitish tribes, the Arkites, Sinites, Aradites, Zemarites, Hivites and Hamathites as well as the other tribes of Amorites whom we are told had established themselves within the territory where the famous city of Damascus flourished.

The Hittites who resided north of the Lebanon Mountains seem to have been the dominating tribe for to them is accredited the greatest achievements. They had a language and literature of their own which spread over the greater part of Palestine. Many are the inscriptions left by them, found of late years which have shed much light upon historical events of that period.

*Note 3. That Goliath the giant, 9 feet, 9 inches in height, slain by David was a descendant of these Anakim refugees, is the impresston left by the Rev. Sayce, quoted above in his writings upon the Amorite Anakims, 1888; altho Goliath was rated as a Phillistine from the city of Gath.

Kadesh was one of their chief cities, as was also Aleppo, Carehemish on the upper Euphrates river, Boghaz-Keni and Eyuk. The latter two cities being named as their northern limit of power, were situated far to the north and within a hundred miles of the Black Sea.

They are known to have invaded Babylonia about 1650 B. C. One of Egypt's most famous Pharaohs, Rameses II who extended his empire over Palestine warred with them unsuccessfully near the middle of the 13th century before Christ (1250 B. C.). An alliance was made with the great king of the Hittites. The treaty between them was inscribed on the walls of a temple at Thebes where it may be read today. An excavation made at the Hittite capitol, Bog az-Keni, in 1907 also revealed a copy of this famous treaty.

Another Hittite city was Hamath. It may have been the chief city of the Canaanish tribe of Hamathite and later absorbed by the more powerful Hittites, for it is mentioned as a Hittite city. It is mentioned as early as the sixteenth century B. C. and is a populous city yet today. Hamath is known to have had a king as late as 740 B. C. when it was captured by the Assyrians.

It may be well to mention the petty state of Geshur which lay not a great distance from Damascus in the locality of Mt. Hermon. King David's wife, Maacah was a daughter of Tal-mai, king of Geshur, 1055 B. C. Her son Absalom, third son of David, then dwelling in Geshur, in the year 1027 B. C., made his famous expedition against his father at Hebron.

Whether this King Tal-mai was a descendant of the King Tal-mai himself who was one of the three sons of Anak who was banished, 1490 B. C. from Hebron by Caleb is not definitely known. However, it may be considered as a clew as to the relocation of the Anakims after their ejection from Hebron. Thus ends the Bible story of the Amorites and their branch tribe, the Anakims.

THROUGH ANCIENT HISTORY

To further trace the destinies of the Hittites, and when we say Hittites it must be borne in mind that the Amorites are considered as having been associated as resident among them and that we are assuming that the giant Anakims have taken refuge within their boundaries.

It may be said that their country being an easily accessible land, became the great highway of the ancient world. As the Babylonians and Egyptians grew powerful they pushed over into Syria, the region occupied by them, there to engage in many long struggles with the Hittites.

The Syrian people who at this period were made up chiefly of the different Canaanitish tribes were not able to preserve their independence because their country was broken up by rivers and mountains into a number of small communities. It was when their neighboring countries were weak that their small states could play a leading part on the stage of Oriental politics. However they are accredited by historians as being the connecting link between Asia and Europe.

They spread themselves throughout the whole peninsula of Asia Minor. They learned much from their neighboring countries, Babylonians, Israelites and Egyptians, and afterward communicated their learning to the Lydians who lived in the extreme western part of Asia Minor and who then in turn passed their learning over to the Greeks.

By 1100 B. C., the Hittites no longer ruled in Syria. Their power was broken by the aggression of the Assyrians. Hard was the struggle, for they waged war with all their ability in defence of their country but the Assyrians were too much for them. No doubt the remnant of their tribes drifted on farther into the less occupied country to the north.

While the Assyrian Empire is said to have covered the whole of Asia Minor it is found that the country bordering on the Euxian or Black Sea escaped their furious attention. It was into this region that the Hittite remnants, including the Anakims sought a dwelling place, for it is here that we are to learn of their relocation later on.

The Assyrian reign lasted till about the year 606 B. C., when the Empire of Media arose. Coming as they did from the country south of the Caspian Sea, the Medes pushed their power westward over the region supposed to have been occupied by these Canaanitish tribes which included the Anakims.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of the growth of a nation from a small colony to a great power. It is a story of the struggles of the people to secure their rights and liberties, and of the efforts of the government to maintain order and justice.

At first, the United States was a collection of small, separate colonies. Each colony had its own laws and customs, and they were all subject to the control of Great Britain. But as the colonies grew in size and number, they began to assert their independence and to demand more rights for themselves.

The first step towards independence was the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. This document declared that the colonies were no longer part of Great Britain, and that they were now free and independent states. This was a bold move, and it led to a war with Great Britain that lasted for eight years.

After the war, the colonies were united into a single nation under the Constitution of 1787. This document established the framework for the government of the United States, and it has since been amended several times to reflect the needs of the people.

The history of the United States is a story of progress and achievement. It is a story of the people who have built this nation, and of the challenges they have overcome. It is a story of hope and faith, and of the belief that a better future is possible for all.

With the American people, it is a story of the struggle for equality and justice. It is a story of the people who have fought for the rights of the oppressed, and of the efforts of the government to create a more perfect union.

The American people have built a nation that is free and democratic. They have created a society in which every person has the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. They have shown the world that a better way of life is possible, and that the future is bright for all.

This territory was ruled by the Medes till about the year 553 B. C. when another world power, the Persian Empire arose under the leadership of the famous monarch Cyrus the Great. The Medes were swept from power over the country under consideration. Under the rule of the Persians which lasted for about 220 years or over two centuries, this country lay at peace.

The country prospered as never before, the countless wars came to an end. Agriculture and industry flourished. From their capitol at Susa the Persian monarchs, whose sovereignty was the least cruel and the least unjust that Asia had ever known, brought law and order into this Oriental world.

Greece by this time had become a wonderful power. She looked with wishful eyes upon the richness of this Oriental country. Finally the great Macedonian general, Alexander the Great undertook its conquest. In the spring of 334 B. C. he began his famous expedition into Asia Minor. The Persian army put up a brave resistance but was no match for the masterful Greek soldiers.

So be it, Asia Minor became a Macedonian possession within a year. Alexander's reign was short, for he died in June, 323 B. C. His empire soon went to pieces and the result was numerous independent states, each with a royal dynasty, capital city, customs and laws. It seems certain that the Canaanite people whom we are seeking to keep trace of, lived by this time within the independent state of Pontus on the southern shores of the Euxine, or Black Sea.

This state retained its existence till the era of Roman conquest in the East. The most famous ruler of Pontus was Mithridates VI. He came into prominence about the year 88 B. C., when he made a successful campaign into the rich Roman provinces of western Asia Minor and even carried his power across the Hellespont and occupied the provinces of Thrace and Macedonia, important Roman states and even occupied Athens.

Rome found herself confronted by a formidable enemy and in danger of losing all her eastern possessions. She sent her great general Sulla against Mithridates. He had little trouble in driving this invader out of the Grecian states and pursued him into Asia Minor where further defeat was heaped upon him. Mithridates was compelled to pay a huge indemnity as well as give up his conquered territory.

Mithridates was allowed peace till he again rose in arms against Rome. The famous Roman General Pompey was sent against him this time, about 65 B. C. Within a year Mithridates' armies were completely crushed and he with the remnant of his followers fled across the Black Sea to the Crimean Kingdom of Bosphorus where he ended his life in despair two years later, 60 B. C.

At this period, the genealogist, Albert Wells of New York, states that among the subjects of Mithridates were alleged to have been a remnant of the Canaanitish Anakim. (Descendants of Anak, derived from Canaan, the son of Ham, the son of Noah).

The Hon. Albert Wells affords the information that after the downfall of the ruler Mithridates and the occupation of his kingdom by the Romans, this remnant Anakim tribe fled beyond the Caucasus Mountains. Their leader was Sigge, son of Fidulph. In the country to the north of the Caucasuses lived a people known as Seythians who were an inferior race. They were easily overcome by Sigge and his followers.

After establishing himself here he became high ruler of the land which was known as Asaland or Asaheim. It lay between the Euxine, or Black sea and the Caspian sea in Asia. The Tanais river now called the Don flows through it. He assumed the name Odin, the Supreme Deity of the Seythians, of whose religion he became the chief priest.

His genius was designed for more adventure and greater accomplishments. Hence he delegated his high official role to his two brothers and made off into the vast little known regions to the north, leaving his two brothers to rule in Asaland or Asaheim.

The first of these was the discovery of gold in California in 1848. This discovery led to a great influx of people to California and to the establishment of many new settlements. The discovery of gold was also a great source of wealth for the people of California and for the United States.

Another important event in the history of the United States was the discovery of oil in Texas in 1859. This discovery led to the development of the oil industry and to the establishment of many new settlements. The discovery of oil was also a great source of wealth for the people of Texas and for the United States.

IMMIGRATION OF AND COLONIZATION OF SCANDINAVIA

The Prince Sigge or High Priest Odin, proceeded with his pontiffs and a vast concourse of followers through Gardarike or Russia to Saxland (northern Europe) subduing nations as he passed, bestowing their dominions as kingdoms upon his sons.

By his superior military talents, Odin had endeared himself to his Asiatic subjects. He was successful in every combat, whence his warriors believed that victory hung on his arm. Coming as he did from ancient Pontus, a region where the arts of war were highly developed, it is easily seen that these faroff heathens were no match for his well trained warriors.

So great was his success and so much superior was his accomplishments that he was looked upon as of divine origin, and as time magnified his doings, he was more and more looked upon in such light till at last his name was accepted as a Supreme Ruler of the universe.

So obscure is the history of that period that some authors regard the name, Odin, as a myth and do not accept it as applying to a real human leader, and it is an established fact that the name, Odin, as handed down through the centuries till Christianity was introduced, was used as the Supreme Deity in all the Northland, by which is meant Denmark, Norway and Sweden, where the race that followed Sigge, established themselves. However, many historians of note do accept Odin as the real human founder of Scandinavia. *

This migration took place about the year 70 B. C. All the ancient traditions of the North agree in describing the first inhabitants of Scandinavia and the regions south of the Baltic Sea as men of colossal stature and incredible strength and were alleged to be a remnant of the Canaanitish Anakin.†

* Note 4. The account of the historical Odin as narrated by Snorri Sturluson, the Icelandic poet and historian in Ynglinga Saga (his historical works) states that he came from Asaland or Asaheim, a district eastward of the river Tanais (Don) the capital of which was called Asgard and the people Asen or Aesir.

† Note 5. They were evidently the Sviar or Suiones, a people mentioned by the Roman historian, Tacitus (55—118 A. D.) as living in the country east of the River Rhine. He speaks of their giant size, their fierce blue eyes and their blond or ruddy hair.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The History of the United States of America is a subject of great interest to all who are concerned with the progress of the human race. It is a subject which has attracted the attention of the most distinguished writers of the age, and which has been the subject of many valuable works. This Sigge or Odin* had five sons each of whom he made king or ruler over different provinces in the territory that he conquered. Prince Sigge or Odin died in Sweden about 50 B. C. His five sons and the provinces over which they ruled were as follows:—

1. Heimdal, was made ruler of Scania or Skania, the most southern province of Sweden.
2. Niord or Yngve, reigned in Sweden.
3. Seming or Snaborne, reigned in Norway.
4. Balder, Viceroy of the Angles at Schloswig Holstine.
5. Skiold, reigned at Ledra in Zealand and at Jutland. He died 23 B. C.

For the next three or four centuries the territory south of the Baltic Sea, Germany, was occupied by the descendants of these emigrants and were ruled over by various petty princes, descendants of Prince Skiold, son of Sigge or Odin, who spent much time warring among themselves. These people developed into the Angles, Saxons and other German tribes.

From the location of these rulers it will be seen that under them were scattered the descendants of the followers of Sigge or Odin over Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Germany. These nations were all designed, later to play a prominent place in the world's history.

Since it is an unquestionable fact that from among some of these people sprung the ancestors of the Hamblen Family, it will be well at this time to repeat some of the things said about this race, the Northmen, by renowned writers.

Snorri Sturluson, Icelandic historian (1179-1231 A.D.) who wrote Sagas (history) Heimskringla, or Ring of the World, gives a history of Scandinavia, kins and people back to the time of Odin, 70 B. C. James Phillippe, genealogist of London, England, furnished Albert Wells with his wonderful lineage back to the time of Odin. Others to be quoted are:—

David Hume, English historian, M. Guizot, Frenchman, Wolfgang Meirzel, German, and Paul C. Sinding of Denmark, all historians of note. Wonderful concord is revealed among these writers relative to the origin, personality and habits of the founders of the Northland.

Menzel says: "They were distinguished from all other nations by their blue eyes, light hair and gigantic stature. They are said to have been generally seven feet in height. * * * People of extraordinary stature are even now to be met on the coasts of the North and Baltic Seas." Again he says, under the heading, "Hospitality": "This virtue of ancient times was greatly esteemed by our forefathers, who regarded as a crime the dismissal of peaceful way-farer from their doors.

* Note 6. The genealogist Wells of New York City, 1879, traces the ancestry of the immortal General George Washington, father of the American Revolution and first president of the United States, through fifty-five generations back to this man Sigge, or Odin, and names father and son in succession through the eighteen centuries intervening. (See Note No. 27, page 59.

"A stranger no sooner appeared than he was invited to take shelter beneath their lowly roof, offered food and a night's lodging, and it was considered disgraceful to first inquire of him who he was, whence he came or whither he was going."

Further he says: "They did not marry early. * * * * A maiden seldom married before her twentieth year nor a man before his thirtieth." And again: "The free mingling between citizens possessed of equal privileges and bound by the same duties, was the soul of the ancient communities and the foundation upon which their whole history rests. Their liberty is of more ancient date than their servitude * * * * *"

Hume the English historian says: "If our part of the world (England) maintains sentiments of liberty, honor, equity and valor superior to the rest of mankind, it owes these advantages to the seed implanted by these generous barbarians."

Quoting him again, he says: "A malady caused by superabundant health and strength and unknown among other nations was common among them. This malady or rather madness seized them when at the height of their strength, more particularly when excited by anger, when they spared neither friend nor foe and would even rave against themselves. Hence arose the legend of the "werewolf" or of men at certain hours being changed into wolves."*

The strong ancestral love which is a very pronounced characteristic in our family shows its origin as we read what Wells says:

"The songs with which the Northern Bards (poets) regaled the Heroes at their 'Feasts of Shells' were but versified chronicles of each ancestral line symphonied by their strong deeds. Through the oak fire's uncertain flame, the Chieftain saw descend the shadowy forms of his Fathers; they came from the Halls of Odin as the harper swept the strings,† and deployed before their descendants, rejoicing in the sound of their praise.

"No parchment told his Lineage to the Warrior in those days, but the Heroic Names branded each night upon his swelling heart by burning numbers of the Bards. Thus did the Northman chronicle his Ancestry in those unlettered times.

"Afterward when the oak fire was extinguished, the shell thrown by and the night came no more with songs, when we reach the age of Records we find this love of Lineage availing itself of the new method of communication"‡

That these people, the Northmen, have been a people that have performed a large part in the affairs of the world is rehearsed by Wells in these words:

* Note 7. To the reader is left the privilege of drawing from the above quotations his or her own conclusions as to how well these characteristics apply to different members of our family of today.

† Note 8. Maybe we get our musical instincts from these days.

‡ Note 9. Possibly the author may find an alibi in these lines for this very work.

"They possess a history as brave as that of the Romans, as poetic as that of the Greeks. A people that has controlled the world history in many things and at many times and whose achievements in war and letters are worthy of the most heroic age of Rome and the most finished period of Greece; a nation whose philosophy outran their age and anticipated results that have been occurring ever since.

"They have lived heroes, lords and conquerors; who sailing out of the ice and desolation in which they were born and matured, conquered England, Scotland, Brittany and Normandy (part of France) discovered and colonized Iceland and Greenland, crossed the Atlantic in their crazy barks, and discovered this very continent long before Columbus; anchored in Vineland Sound (Massachusetts), left a monument behind them* and wheresoever they went they were lords and rulers. And their religion—what a wild, massive, manly mythology! Presenting even the necessity of right and doing right, of manliness, honesty and responsibility; rewards and punishments."

Sinding says: "They had courage, fortitude, sagacity, bodily strength and perseverance; they shrunk from no dangers and they feared no hardships. 'Odin is for us—who can be against us?' was their watchword."

Lastly he says: "Be, therefore, not ashamed, Americans, of claiming the old Northmen who sailed forth in swarms from their northern hives, as your earliest ancestors. Your lineage is in the main Anglo-Saxon with large infusion of Scandinavian blood. And permit me to say that when you trace your parent stock through the kindred tribes of Angles, Saxons, Normans and Danes up to these hardy mariners, whose prows first saluted the American shore, you may boast of an exalted and heroic lineage.

"And I still dare to pit the race both here and in England, for all that constitutes individual and national prowess against any other on God's green earth. Try them yet, man for man, on sea or shore, in peace or war, and they will work out an ultimate and lasting triumph. They are not laggards in peace, not dastards in war."

Whether or not these eulogies apply as characteristic of our family will be left to the reader's ideas in the matter.

As time passed on nationalism became more developed. The rulers of each of these North nations became more powerful as their subjects grew in numbers. Numerous wars prevailed among them.

Four outstanding nations developed, Norway and Sweden with its Norsemen, Denmark with the Danes, and Germany with the Angles and Saxons. The latter two developed from the followers of Frode Fredigod (Pacific). Frode, king of Denmark, son of Skiold mentioned above, who made his expedition into that region between B. C. 23 and

* Note 10. Some writers contend that the North American Indians living east of the Alleghany Mountains were descendants from the colonists implanted by the Northmen, five hundred years before Columbus visited America.

35 A. D. In a few centuries the Angles and Saxons became quite a powerful people.

The next important emigration that concerns our interest to notice was made under the leadership of a Norwegian prince called Hrolf, Rolf, or Rollo. He was so mighty in stature that there was no horse of strength and size to bear him. He was therefore always on foot and was called the "Marcher." With a mighty host of followers he made a landing in northern France in the year 885 A. D.

After many hard battles with the Franks or French, meeting both victory and defeat, he finally succeeded in establishing himself so firmly upon their territory that Paris was in danger of being taken by his armies. To prevent this the French king, Charles the Simple, induced him to terms of peace by granting him a large tract of Neustrain territory (northwest part of France) over which he was to rule as a duke, subjected to the king of France. As a part of the terms, Rollo accepted Christian baptism and the king's daughter in marriage, A. D. 912.

Rollo distributed among his followers the lands of Neustria which he named Normandy in honor of his people, the Northmen. The Normans as they became called, adopted the language of the vanquished province but greatly modified it, which at a later date became known as Norman French.

Here these people prospered under the succeeding Dukes and became a power so great that even the power of the French king they stood at defiance. Without further change as far as our inquiry is concerned these Normans resided in Normandy under reigning dukes as follows:—

Rollo or Robert I till A. D. 933.

William Longsword, A. D. 933 to 945.

Richard the Fearless, A. D. 945 to 996.

Richard II, A. D. 996 to 1016.

Robert II, 1016 till 1035.

Robert II was succeeded by his infant son, Duke William, under whose leadership, when he reached manhood, another movement designed to affect the destinies, not only of Europe, but of the whole world, to a time as yet undetermined.

It is at this period and under the leadership of this Duke William of Normandy that we at last are able to discover and establish the identity of the individual family name, since so long we have been following these primitive tribes through the centuries in their wanderings; from the land of Canaan, chased, as they were, by the Divine Hand itself out of Canaan into Syria; hence into Pontus, then across the Caucasus under the leadership of the Prince Sigge, or Odin, where they resided for a short time on the banks of the Tanais.

Making the pilgrimage across Russia to the Northland which they peopled with a race inferior to none. After dwelling there for a thousand years the Chieftain Rollo lead them to France, where they established themselves stronger than ever in the region, Normandy. Within a little more than 150 years these fierce pagans had developed into one of the most civilized peoples of western Europe.

After 154 years' residence here, their Duke William, sixth in the line from Rollo, or Robert I, resolved upon another great adventure, one of great moment. He determined to invade England, the great and rich country across the channel from his own dukedom, Normandy.

The old English king, Edward the Confessor, had died in January, 1066, and left no direct heir to the throne. Edward had promised Duke William the English throne at his death. William's father was Edward's cousin. However, Earl Harold, who was the same kin to Edward as was Duke William, took advantage of the king's dying moments and also secured a promise to the throne, to which he at once ascended at Edward's death, by a form of election held by other English Statesmen.

To all this William seriously objected, and at once proceeded to raise an army to enforce his claim. Among the men that enlisted for this service were two brothers in whom particular interest for the Hamblen Family centers.

The name of one of these brothers was HAMELIN DE BALON, and the other HAMELIN ET HAREVILLE. Their home is given as BALLON, a town which was within William's Normandy possessions, situated about twelve miles northeast of what is now the French city of La Mons, 115 miles southwest of Paris. That they were officers of some rank as we shall later on learn is determined from the consideration given them by their lord and master, Duke William.

Hamelin De Balon seems to have been a man of some importance in the diocese of Mons where the town of Ballon is situated and most probably was an officer of high rank in Duke William's army.

Since the expedition in which these two Hameline brothers enlisted and served as soldiers is one of the most important in the world's history, and also since these two men Hameline are designed to be the founders of our family name in England, it is deemed proper to give the most important details of this far-reaching historical event.

Duke William succeeded in securing, as he thought, a sufficient number of soldiers to accomplish his undertaking. His place of assemblage was at the seaport Dives situated a few miles west of the mouth of the River Seine, about seventeen miles southwest of the present day French city La Havre. By September he had assembled 400 vessels of four sails, more than a thousand transport ships and 60,000 men selected from the numerous throng which came from every quarter and solicited to be received into his service.

The camp bore a splendid, yet martial appearance, from the discipline of the men, the beauty and vigor of the horses, the luster of arms and accouterments of both, but above all from the high names of nobility who engaged under the banners of the Duke of Normandy. To these bold chieftains William held up the spoils of England as a prize for their valor.

Everything being in readiness on the evening of September 27th, the fleet set out. They sailed along the coast till they reached St. Valori where unfavorable weather detained them for several days. When the wind became favorable they set out with great alacrity, met with no opposition on their passage and arrived, without any material loss at Pevensey in Sussex, England, where the army quietly disembarked.

Harold, the English king, who was engaged in a campaign against Norwegian invaders in north England, hastened to meet his new invader, Duke William. William removed his camp and fleet to Hastings, a few miles distant, where he fixed his quarters. Harold soon assembled quite an army in the vicinity. English and Norman now made ready for the impending action. However, on the night before the battle the aspect of things was very different in the two camps. The English spent the time in riot, jollity and disorder; the Normans in silence, in prayer and in the other functions of their religion.

On the morning the duke called together the most considerable of his commanders and made them a speech suitable to the occasion and at once made ready for the mighty impending battle. He divided his army into three lines; the first led by Montgomery consisted of archers and light armed infantry; the second commanded by Martel, was composed of his bravest battalions heavy-armed and ranged in close order; his cavalry, at whose head he placed himself, formed the third line and were so disposed that they stretched beyond the infantry and flanked each wing of the army.

He ordered the signal of battle to be given and the whole army, moving at once, advanced in order towards the enemy. Harold had seized the advantage of a rising ground and had drawn some trenches to secure his flanks. The first attack of the Normans was desperate but was received with equal valor by the English soldiers, manly footmen wearing a coat of mail and armed with the battle-ax. After a furious combat which remained long undecided, William's men, overcome by the difficulty of the ground and hard pressed by the enemy began first to relax their vigor, then to retreat. Confusion was spreading among their ranks.

William hastened with a select band to the relief of his dismayed forces. His presence restored the action and the English were forced to retire. The Duke ordering his second line to advance, renewed the attack but found the English had too much the advantage in the lay of the ground. He tried a stratagem which seemed advisable on account of his desperate situation.

He commanded his troops to make a hasty retreat and to allure the enemy from their stronghold by appearance of flight. The delusion succeeded in its purpose and the English rushed in pursuit and followed the Normans into the plain. William gave orders that the infantry should face about upon their pursuers and the cavalry to make assault upon their wings. The English gave way and were driven with heavy loss back to the hill position.

They were rallied by the brave Harold and notwithstanding their loss, maintained the post. The Duke tried the same stratagem the second time with the same success; but even after this double advantage he still found a great body of the English maintaining themselves in firm array determined to dispute the victory to the last. William ordered his heavy-armed infantry to make an assault upon them, while his archers placed behind should gall them with arrows, while they were defending themselves against the swords and spears of the front line.

This disposition was too much for the brave Englishmen. Harold was slain by an arrow which struck him in the eye, piercing the brain while at the head of his men. His two brothers shared the same fate; and the English, dismayed by the fall of their princes gave ground on all sides and were pursued with great slaughter by the victorious Normans.

Thus was fought the great battle of Hastings, from morning till sunset, October 14, 1066 A. D. Fifteen thousand men fell on the side of the Normans. Duke William had three horses killed under him. The loss on the side of the vanquished was still more, besides the death of the king and his two brothers.

The Norman army left not the field of battle without giving thanks to heaven in the most solemn manner for their victory. The Duke, after having refreshed his troops, pushed the advantage gained by his victory by moving on toward London. All opposition rapidly disappeared and William was duly chosen king, according to English law, and was crowned at Westminster, Christmas day, 1066.*

William got possession of Harold's treasure which was considerable. He distributed great sums among his troops and gave them from the enterprise.

However, before following up his victory William resolved to perpetuate the remembrance of it by a religious monument, and he decreed the foundation of an Abbey on the very field of the battle of Hastings, from which it took its name "Battle Abbey." He endowed this abbey with all the neighboring territory within a radius of a league. He made it free of the jurisdiction of any prelate, dedicated it to St. Martin of Tours, matron saint of the soldiers of Gaul and ordered that there should be deposited in the archives a register containing all the lords, knights and men of mark who had accompanied him on his expedition.

Lower,* in his works on English Surnames, says: * * * "I cannot better introduce it to the reader than by citing the Rev. Mark Noble's curious and valuable 'Dissertation on the Various Changes in the Families of England Since the Conquest,' prefixed in his history of the College of Armes:

"Those who fought under the ducal banners (at Hastings) took every possible means to have their names well known and remembered by future ages, not only because they and their descendants would by it be enabled to plead for favours from the reigning family, and assuring to themselves the estates they had gained, but also from the pride inherent in human nature as founders of families in a country they had won by their prowess. For these reasons the name of every person of any consideration was written upon the roll, and hung up in the Abbey of Battel."

"The original roll compiled by the monks of Battel, was hung up in their monastery, beneath the following Latin verses: "

*"Dicitur a bello, Bellum locus hic, quia bello Angligenar victi, sunt hic in morte relict;
Martyris in Christi festo cecidere Calixti;
Seragenus erat sextus millesimus annus
Cum rereunt Angli stella monstrante Cometa.' "*

"A metrical English version of these verses was formerly inscribed on a tablet in the parish church of Battel: "

*"This place of war is battle called, because in battle here, Quite conquered and overthrown the English nation were;
This slaughter happened to them upon St. Celiet's day,
The year whereof (1066) this number doth array.' "*

"Of the history of the Roll subsequently to the dissolution of the monastery, nothing certain is known. Three months after the surrender of the abbey, the site and lands were given by Henry VIII, to Sir Anthony Brown, ancestor of the Vicomts Montagne. The family sold the mansion, with its appurtenances, to Sir Thomas Webster, Bart.

(whose descendants still possess it), and resided afterwards at their other seat, Cowdray House near Midhurst, and thither this famous document was probably carried. Cowdray was destroyed by fire in 1793, when the Roll is presumed to have perished, with everything else of value which that lordly edifice contained."

Andrews' work mentions that several historians have published copies of this Roll, some showing more names than others. One, Holinshed, shows upwards of six hundred, and others several hundred less. However, Andrews says:

"The preference ought unquestionably be conceded to Leland's copy. John Leland saw and transcribed the original."

This list contains 248 names as published by Andrews. It might be of interest to publish this entire list, but for the purpose of this work only a small section showing its style and the name Hameline is copied, ie:

Disart et Dorynell,	Wermely et Wamerville,
Male-Kate et Mauncel,	Broy et Bromville,
Burnville et Bretville,	Bleyn et Briecourt,
HAMELINE ET HAREVILLE	Tarteray et Chercourt,
De la Huse et Howel,	Oysel et Oliford,
Fingez et Coruyele,	Maulovel et Maureward,
Chartres et Chenil,	Kanoes et Keveters."

"As to the orthography, it is of little consequence; the spelling of names was not at that time, nor for many ages afterwards fixed; every one writing them as they pleased."

"In Halinshed's copy of the Battel Abbey Roll, which is English appears the name HAMELIN.

"A companion record is found in France in the roll in the church in Dives, a copy of which is found in "The Driver Family," page 497.

"The Roll on the church of Dives, Normandy, of the companions of William in the conquest of England, in 1066, by M. Leopold Delisle, Member of the French Society of Archaeology, as found in Burk's 'Vicissitudes', Vol. III, page 423. ..

"Dives, in the eleventh century, was one of the chief ports of the Duchy of Normandy. A fete was here given, in August, 1862, to affix in the old church there a new and carefully compiled list of the companions of William the Conqueror, in his conquest of England, in 1066.....a companion record to that of Battle Abbey, with this difference: the latter being the roll of those who actually fought at Hastings, while the one at Dives is that of those who assembled for the expedition, and were otherwise engaged in furthering the Conquest. This Roll was erected by the French Society of Archaeology in August, 1862, with permission of Mgr. Didiot, Bishop of Bayeux, * * *

This roll contains 474 names, is arranged in alphabetical order, and is copied in full in Andrews' Hamblen Family, Vo. 1, but for like reasons for curtailing Leland's copy only a section showing the name of Hamelin De Balon, is here given :

Guinebond de Balon,
Guinemar Le Flammand,
HAMELIN DE BALON
Hamon Le Senechal,
Hardouin d’Ecalles,
Henri de Beaumont,

Guimond de Tessel,
Hugue de Montgomeri,
Hugue Musard,
Hugue de Port,
Hugue de Rennes,
Hugue de Saint-Quentin,
Hugue de Vesli.”

It may be explained, that by only one of the Hameline brothers’ names appearing on each of the rolls in the words of Lower, who said: “The great difference made in these collections naturally leads us to suspect that many omissions are made in some * * *. It is remarkable that although many, perhaps the majority, of the names occur in all the copies, others occur in one or two only: * * * *”

John Foxe, in his Acts and Monuments, has also given, in a list of the names of William’s officers and great men; * * * *. And in connection wrote this:—

“ ‘The day after the battell * * *. The Duke * * * * desirous to know the estate of his battell and what people he had therein lost and were slain, he caused to come unto him a clerk that had written their names when they had embarked at S. Valeries, and commanded him to tell them all by their names, who called them that had bin at the batel, and passed the seas with Duke William.’ ”

“In a letter written in 1871 by Mr. Thomas Hamlin, Barrister, residing at Redhill House, Warrington, near Bristol, England, among other things says: ‘The family of Hamlin were Normans, and came over with William the Conqueror, and their names are recorded in the Battle Abbey Roll.’ ”

“Another early record of the name is to be found in the ‘Domsday Book’ of England. This great work was ordered to be compiled by William the Conqueror, and was completed about 1086. It consisted of the surveys of the lands of England, which he had conquered from the Saxons (of England); and their distribution to his followers. It was written in Norman French. Translations of this work are to be found in some of the large libraries of this country.

THE SURNAME DEVELOPS. HAMELIN

As to the origin of the name many theories have been advanced. Extracts are here quoted from some of the best authority on the subject;

“The work of Mark Anthony Lower, London, 1843, on English surnames, offers much interesting information on the subject, of a general character, from which extracts are taken:

“ ‘It is not sufficient for a person of inquisitive mind that he bears such and such a surname because his father and grandfather

“ Surname—Nomen patris additum proprio. Surname—Nomen Supra nomen additum. Surname differed originally from Surname. Surname, the one one has over and above the Christian name. They were written at first, not in a direct line after the Christian name, but above it, between the lines, hence called it Latin, Supranomia, and in French, Sur-noms. From the last of the English term is immediately derived. A surname is, therefore a name superadded to the first or Christian name, to indicate the family to which the individual bearing it belongs.

“ The ancient Britons generally used one name only; sometimes, but very rarely, they added another. * * * No precise date can be assigned to the introduction of hereditary surnames into England. * * * Surnames were taken up in a gradual manner by the great, during the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries. By the middle of the twelfth, however, it appears they were necessary appendages to families of rank, to distinguish them from meaner extraction.

“ Surnames can scarcely be said to be permanently settled before the Reformation (1485). The keeping of the parish registers were probably more instrumental than any thing else in settling them; for if a person was entered under one surname at baptism, it is not likely that he would be married under another, and buried under a third.

“ We have already seen that some second names were borrowed from places in ancient times. These, however, were not hereditary, like those of modern date. The latter originated, in all probability, in Normandy and the contingent parts of France, about the close of the tenth century, or the commencement of the eleventh. Possessors of land, in which the Normans were soon imitated by the English, particularly after the conquest. Chiefly of this kind are the names occurring in that far-famed document, the GREAT ROLL, of Battel Abbey,—a list of the principle commanders and companions in arms of William the Conqueror. Camden remarks, that there is not a single village in Normandy that has not surnamed some family in England.’ ”

“ Mr. Lower states the name Hamlin, is derived from the Surname Hammeline, now obsolete, but found in Domesday Book, and other ancient English records. In his book is given a list of surnames, derived from Christian names, in which occurs the name Hamlin, as derived from Hammeline.

“ Camden, (one of the earliest writers on English names—1823) says: ‘About the year of our Lord 1000, surnames began to be taken up in France and in England about the time of the Conquest’—1066.’ ”

Nobles who accompanied the Conqueror to England, but few, if any, were distinguished by surnames; they were described simply by their

“ Cussans in his Handbook of Heraldry says: ‘Of the many Christian names, followed by the locality from whence they came.

It is now deemed appropriate to take up the status of the two Hameline brothers who served in Duke William's army and determine how they were rewarded by their leader and king and other matters concerning them.

"In a history of the Suburbs of Exeter, England, published in London in 1892, by Charles Worthy, Esquire, is found a chapter on the Hamlyn Family, concerning many references to ancient family records and other matters of great interest, some of which are reproduced:—

"The two most important Hamlyns of the Eleventh century, were the two whose names are mentioned in the Battel Abbey Roll, who were quite possibly brothers, were known respectively as 'Hameline' and 'Hamline de Balun'. The latter, known usually as, 'The Sire de Bayloun', had doubtless been a man of some importance in the diocese of Mons, where the French town of Ballon is situated, * * * *, King William (I) gave him the territory of Ober-Went, in Monmouthshire, and he built the Castle of Bergavenny by his royal master's orders. He lived until the latter end of the reign of William Rufus, but died childless. He left the whole of his property to his nephew, Brian, son of his sister, Lucy, whose two sons were leapers. Therefore this Brian settled his lands upon his cousin, 'Walter of Glouster', then High Constable of England.' "

Mr. Thomas Hamlin, lawyer, of Bristol, England, in a letter, 1871, among other things, says: 'Some years ago I had the curiosity to examine the family pedigree at the Herald's office in London; it was very long and brought down to the last generation in the person of Mr. Hamlin, a Barrister. I had an introduction to one of the Chiefs of the Herald's office, who said the out-of-pocket cost for copying the pedigree would be five pounds, ($24.25).' "

"From Cox's Monmouthshire: 'Soon after the Conquest, Hameline, son of DEU-DE-BALADUN or Balure, a great NORMAN CHIEFTAIN, subdued Overwent and built a fortress at Abergavenny, dying without issue in 1090. He left the castle to his Nephew, Brein-de-in-Wallingford or de-l'Isle.' "

It seems evident from the above that there is little doubt that the Hamelines were true Norse descendants, yet some authorities advance the theory that they may have emigrated to Ballon, Normandy from Saxony. In order to give their ideas consideration some of their statements are given.

Charles Worthy says: "The name 'Hamelin' occurs in several copies of the 'Battel Abbey Roll', and so does that of 'Balon' or 'Balun'; and it is well known that the Conqueror's army was made up of Continental adventurers, and was by no means restricted to his Norman subjects. Among his followers were many Germans, and it would seem certain (but gives no grounds, or authority as to why he makes this assertion), therefore, that the Hamelins themselves were of the latter race and were nourished upon the banks of the river Hamel, and were subsequently known as the 'Hamlyns', * * * "

The Saxon city Hamelin is situated at the confluence of the Weser and Hamel Rivers. Inference is drawn that to this locality the still earlier ancestors may have emigrated from the locality of the city Hamburg situated on the northern border of Ancient Saxony. Hamburg is said to have been an insignificant hamlet in the year 808 A. D. when the Emperor Charlemagne established a frontier blockhouse or castle there.

The name 'Ham' is well established within this section of Europe for besides these already mentioned there is also; the French town Ham situated on the marshy banks of the river Somme, forty miles southwest of Amiens; Hamm is a town in Prussia, province of Westphalia; Hamme, a town of Belgium, East Flanders, near Ghent.

All these cities are located within the very center of the territory where for nine centuries had lived the descendants of the stalwart followers of the historical Odin, 70 B. C., so even though the Hamelines may have come from some of these localities it would not necessarily in any way affect their derivation.

Worthy further says: " 'This, like many other English surnames, was evidently derived from their habitation in a watered valley; 'ham' and 'lyma,' being both Saxon terms expressive of the home by the pool or water; and thus we get the German 'Hamelin', or the town on the river Hamel.' "

The above theory by Worthy is no more probable and hardly as plausible as to assume from the facts quoted above from other authors that the ancestors of these Hamelins were followers of the Norwegian Prince Rollo, or if they did not come at the same time as Rollo, came with other emigrants later, from the province Hamar of Norway where the city of Hamar is situated on the Lake Miosen.

Since Deu-de-Baladun or Balure, the Norman chieftain's name is so emphatically recorded as the sire of the soldier brothers, Hamelin de Balon and Hameline et Hareville, loyal followers of Duke William and were so richly rewarded by him after he ascended the English throne, it sounds most likely that they were true blooded Normans, descended from the original Norse emigrants.

Their home, Ballon is located in the very heart of the Norman occupation. That they were prominent in the affairs of their locality is well established. Hence the writer prefers to accept this later theory as the most plausible.

It is now time to give consideration to the Hameline et Hareville. Quoting from Charles Worthy's works, the following interesting account of him and his descendants in England is had:

" 'Hamelin', of Devonshire and Cornwall, called 'Hamelinus,' was the ancestor of our Devonshire Hamlynus. He most probably came to Cornwall in the immediate train of Robert, Earl of Mortaigne, the half-brother of William I. This Robert was created Earl of Cornwall, and it was in Cornwall that by far the greater part of Hamelin's property was situated.

MAP OF ENGLAND

Showing Cornwall and Devon where HAMELIUS' estates were located and where he built Hamistone Manor, and Monmouth to the north where HAMELIN DE BALON, built Abergavenny Castle upon orders from King

“ ‘In that county, either under the king or under the earl, he held twenty-two important manors in 1086. Some of his posterity remained in Cornwall, whilst others settled in Devonshire. Of the former it will be enough to say that, like their Devonshire kinsmen, they always occupied good social position, as shown by patent and subsidy rolls, parliamentary writs and similar undeniable evidences. Thus, Hamelin was Reeve of Lannceston in 1207. Albert and Richard Hamlyn both occur more than a hundred years later in Cornish records.

“ ‘But I must still confine myself to Devonshire. In this county, ‘Hamelinus’ is shown by ‘Domesday’ to have held his land entirely under the Earl of Mortaigne, and it consisted of Manors of Broadhempston and of Alwington, which latter property is referred to in the ‘Saxon deed,’ I have cited above.

“ ‘The entry in the Exchequer copy of the Survey proves that ‘Hamelinus’ held Broadhempston- ‘Hamistone,’ as it was then called, ‘under the Earl,’ and that was taxed for two hides of land, which could be worked by ten ploughs, and that he himself farmed for two ploughs.

“ ‘He had on this property three serfs, ten villeins or small farmers, nine cottagers. The manor consisted of four acres of meadow, ten of pasture and twelve of wood. In the reign of Edward the Confessor, when Ordulf the Saxon owned it, it was worth forty shillings per annum; it had increased in value, under Norman rule to sixty shillings. (See copy of Norman deed page 27.)

“ ‘* * * the Hamlyns of Widecombe who may be considered the heads of the family, obtained their first property in that parish by barter with Richard, the son of Turolf, who held the Widecombe Manor of Natsworthy under the Earl, as did Erchenbold, the Manor of Bratton, near Alwington, which, at about the same period (1187-1200) also passed to Hamlyn.

“ ‘The descendants of the first Hamlyn of Widecombe and Bratton were very numerous, and spread consequently into numerous branches. One of the most important of these settled in the hundred of Wonford, and the fifth in descent from ‘Hamelinus,’ of Domesday was Richard Hamlyn, of Wonford, who flourished between the years, 1166 and 1216. * * *. Those of Exeter, in the course of years prospered in mercantile pursuits, and gave mayors to that city, and filled other municipal offices, and from them is descended the present (1899) ‘Squire’ of Paschoe, in Colebrook, and of Lee Wood, in the parish of Bridestow.

“ ‘Of their ancient property at Widecombe, Lower Ash yet belongs to the family, although it has very recently passed to an heir female. Sir John Hamlyn, of Larkbeare, father of Sir Osbert, was at Boreoughbridge in 1322, and his arms are duly recorded upon the roll of the Knights present at that historical contest: ‘Gules, a lion rampant, armine, crowned, or.’ (See frontispiece.)

“ ‘It will be seen that from the period of the Norman Conquest to the present time, the main branch of the Hamlyn family have always been large land owners in this district, and that it is moreover in a great degree due to their energy, that the woollen trade, the old staple industry of the county, and especially of the city of Exeter, and which was originally introduced and fostered by the Cistercian monks, still flourishes in the Valley of the Dart."

Thus we have quite a history of the branch that settled and remained in the counties of Cornwall and Devonshire. But we must look among the other branches that scattered into other nearby counties or shires to find those that appear evidently to have been the sires of our present-day 'Hamblens;' and especially the branch whose definite genealogy this work seeks to present.

Again quoting from Mr. Worthy, this information is given: "'We find them settled at very early dates in Leicestershire, Warwickshire, Worcestershire, Oxfordshire, Gloucestershire and Rutland; and they founded families, henceforth known as 'Hamlyn;' and transmitted to them their lands and houses, through long succeeding ages, is abundantly evident from our public records; * * * John Hamlyn was paymaster and leader of the levies in Shropshire and at Stafford, in 1314. Soon after, Geoffry Hamlin had a commission to protect the Prince of Wales (the Black Prince) in Gascony (Normandy France).'"

Mr. Thomas Hamlin, 1871, also says: "'They settled down in Monmouth-shire, Somerset-shire and Devonshire. * * * From Coxe's Monmouthshire: 'Soon after the Conquest, Hameline, son of Deu-de-Baladun or Balure, a great Norman Chieftain, subdued Overwent and built a fortress at Abergavenny, * * *.'"

"'In the history and antiquities of Somerset, by the Rev. John Cullison, F. A. S. (1791) among the gentlemen and Sheriffs of this county is: John Hamlyn, 1373. Names of the Lords and Squires and gentlemen within the county of Somerset, resident in the time of Henry VII (1485-1509): Alexander Hamlyn.'"

"Mr. H. G. Somerby, London, about 1849, made some researches in England for the late David Hamblen, of Boston, which will be found instructive and interesting:

"'From Nichol's History of Leicestershire: 'In the year 1240, Ralph Hamelin had some ploughlands at Wymondham which paid 32d to the Sheriff aid.

'By an undated French deed (about 1285) Robert Paynell confirms to John Hamelin of Wyndham, and his heirs a virgate and half of land. In 1286, Hugh Hamelin was rector of the church at Wyndham; died 1316. In 1290, William Hamelin held lands in Saxelby (Saxeby?), Wyndham and Thrope.

"'In 1297, John Hamelin held half a Knight's fee and the tenth part of one other Knight's fee in Wymondham, of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, the King's brother, deceased, by homage and suit of court.

"'In 4th (1276) Edward I, William Hamelin was sheriff of the Counties of Leicester and Lincoln.

“ In 1303, John de Hamelin and John de Tateshall held the third part of one Knight's fee, with the appurtenances in Sumnerby, Bury, Dalby, Parva and Boston St. Lazarus, of Robert de Tateshall, deceased, and it was worth 60s.

EFFIGY OF SIR JOHN HAMELIN, IN CHURCH
AT WYMONDHAM, ENG

“ February 12, 1303, King Edward I granted to John Hamelin and his heirs weekly market on Tuesdays, and a yearly fair on the eve and day of St. Peter and St. Paul, to be held at the manor of Wymondham, in the county of Leicester.

“ A Chantry was founded in 1328, in St. Peter's chapel, at Querden by Sir John Hamelin, who endowed it with lands at Wymondham.

“ In 1309, Sir John Hamelin of Wymondham, impleaded Roger de Derle and others of Stapleford, for breaking down a wall at Wymondham, which Sir John Hamelin declared was built upon his freehold; but was assessed by Roger de Derle to be upon the waste ground of Thomas, Earl of Leicester, to whom Derle was the steward.”

“ Mr. Somerby wrote: ‘The south cross of the church at Wymondham was the appropriate burial place of the Hamelins. At the south end of the cross aisle, was the tomb of an old Knight, in a coat of mail and cross-legged, for one of the Hamelins, but the tomb which is in the form of a wedge, broader at the shoulders than at the feet, had in 1768, neither es-entcheon of arms nor inscription. This cross-legged figure of Sir John Hamelin, which had long lain neglected on the floor, has, on late repair of the church, by the laudable attention of the Earl of Harborough, been effectually preserved; and is now fixed upright against one of the walls, secure from further injury. * * * I accidentally met with an old engraving, * * * of Sir John Hamelin's effigy, which I purchased and will send to you * * *.

“ I found at the prerogation office in London, wills of Edward and John Hamblin. That of Edward proved May, 1620. * * * He was styled Yeoman, of Reading, County Berks.”

COAT OF ARMS

As was the custom with all prominent English families in early times to adopt and use a coat of arms, the Hamelins also had their emblems. A coat of arms consisted of figures and colors engraved or painted on shields, banners and other articles as marks of dignity and honor. As the family multiplied, different branches adopted different coat of arms. The Hon. H. F. Andrews in his works gives a chapter on them. Extracts are as follows:

“In the roll of Arms, of Edward III, 1337. Monsier Hamlyn: Port Gules, une lion d’or gonte sable.

“Another is that of the Hamlyns of Exeter, England: Arms: Sable, two swords crossed in saltier, hilted and pommeled, the points upward, or; Quarterings; Calmady and Pollexfen; Calmady quartering, 1st and 1th, argent, a lion rampant, gules; Pollexfen, 2d and 3d azure, a chevron between three pears, or. Motto: Caute sed Strenue: Crest: A griffin passant guardant. Seats: Paschoe, Colebrook, Lea-wood, Bridestowe; County Devon.

* Note 13. The writer is of the opinion that the founder of our branch of the family, George Hamblen, or his immediate ancestors came to Maryland from among these families.

† Note 14. Mr. Andrews supposes that these were the children of James Hamblin, the settler in Barnstable, Massachusetts, 1639.

"Another; Arms of the family Hamelin; Argent, three Bulls passant sable. Crest: A hand plucking a rose from a bush of the proper colors.

"Burke, in his Encyclopædia of Heraldry, gives the following Coats of arms:

"Hamlin— Arms: Gules, a lion rampant, ermine, crowned with an antique crown, or. Crest: seven arrows, points upward, proper.

"Hameline— (County Leicester.) Arms: Gules, a lion rampant, ermine, ducally crowned, or. (See frontispiece.)

"Hamline— (Impalement f. ent. of Roland St. Lawrence, (Reading Berkshire) Alderman of Drogheda, died July 9, 1633. Married Alson, daughter of Alderman Thomas Hamline, same place.) Arms: A chevron between three lions sejant, gules.

"Hamlyn— (Clovell— Court County Devon, Bart.) Arms: Or, a falcon, sable, gules; between three roses, leaved, vert. Crest: A swan argent; collared, gules; wings endorsed; beaked and legged, or; holding in the beak a birdbolt, sable."

LINEAGE

As has been noticed an emigration to the different counties or shires of England took place. It is reasonable to believe that since the 'Sire de Bayloun' was allotted an estate in Monmouthshire by his royal master, King William, and that he died childless, that his estates were inherited by descendants of his brother Hameline who was settled in Cornwall and Devonshire.

Mention is made that a son of their sister Lucy inherited his property in Monmouthshire, but he also died childless and that it was then settled upon the cousin 'Walter of Glouster', then High Constable of England, who appears to have been a son of Hameline or Hamelinus, Lord of Broadhempston, brother of the Sire de Bayloun.

The son of Walter was created Earl of Hereford, but his male line failed, and one of his three daughters became the wife of Sir William Braose. Their descendant Eva Braose, married William de Cantilupe, who then succeeded 'Hameline' in the Lordship of Broadhempston, thus bringing the heirs of Hameline of Devonshire again into direct possession of the former estates of Hamelin de Balon.

As for the name appearing in the form 'HAMBLETON' it seems very probable that it came from a contraction of the name borne by HAMELIN DE BALON, later known usually as 'The Sire de Bayloun' and was adopted by some of his younger kinsmen, descendants of his brother Hameline of Hareville of Cornwall and Devon, after inheriting his estates and removing to their location in Monmouthshire and from there scattering into other nearby shires. As this was the period of the adoption of surnames, changes in names were fast taking place. In his day this Sir de Bayloun De Balon would have written his name thus: Hamelin

De, meaning: from or away from; hence to say the 'Hamelin from Ballen;' or Balun, (Normandy). (See page 28.)

Mr. Andrews in his works says: "Antiquarians give little heed to the mere spelling of the name, as found in records or as practiced by living individuals, as evidence of relationship; it is common to find known relatives who spell their names differently.

"Two hundred years ago and prior there was no standard for English orthography, people spelled anyway and everyway to suit the fancy. Many were unable to read and write, and trusted such matters to public officials and scriveners. One clerk would spell in his peculiar manner, while the clerk in another place spelled differently. Long continuance in the same place by the same family, tended the adoption of a given form of name; while the separation of relatives, exhibited frequently, a marked difference. In such ways the forms of names multiplied. It is remarkable that the continued form of names has been so well preserved."

Since the above facts obtain as to the practice of spelling names, was largely entrusted to public officials, it appeals to the writer as evidently probable that after the inheritance of the estates of Hamelin de Balon by his brother's posterity, the high public standing of this Sire de Bayloun prompted these officials to appropriate a form of spelling for the names of these Hamelines, such as would conform to their knowledge of the former Lord of Bergavenny; he was 'Hamelin de Balon to them and naturally they would be Ham-Balons also, since they were to be his successors.

Since surnames were at this period beginning to be adopted, brevity and neatness to take form, spelling the name, 'Ham-Bayloun', or 'Ham-Balon,' or still more compact, 'Ham-Blvon' and finally 'Hamblyn' is highly probable; or as some other clerk may have seen fit, 'Hamblin' and again as we have it today 'HAMBLEN';* the use of an 'e' instead of an 'i' being a matter of small consequence.

Quoting from the works of Mr. Andrews of Iowa, a conception of the different ways of spelling the name may be had:—

"A common error obtains, that there is no relationship between those whose names are spelled differently. Like many other old English names the orthography has been corrupted, and there are various terminations to be found, thus: Hamlin, Hamlen, Hamelin, Hamline, Hameline, Hamlyn, Hamblin, Hamblen, Hamblyn, etc.

"As found spelled in Norman-French in the Domesday Book it was Hamelinus; in Leland's copy of the Roll of Battel Abbey, Hameline; in Hollinshed's copy, Hamelin. Later the name in England at an early period, was spelled Hamlyn, which is still retained;

* Note 15. See page 35, for examples of various ways of spelling the name on a single English record.

but many, at the present time there, spell it Hamlin, Hamblin, Hamblen and perhaps other ways. * * * Prof. Charles E. Hamlin, late of Harvard College, whose family dropped the 'b' from the name, was of the opinion that Hamlin was the most consonant with the general pronunciation of the name, and its proper Anglicized form."

However, be this as it may, historical records show that at early dates the name with its different spellings is to be found in Gloucester, Somerset, Worcester, Oxford, Berkshire, Warwick, Leicester, Rutland and Norfolk, the string of shires or counties one adjoining the other beginning at Devonshire and Monmouth-shire and extending across central England, northeastward. (See map of England page 31.)

One of the earliest records obtained showing the 'b' to be used in the name, is an "Extract from a will deposited at Norwich, England;" from Mr. Somerby's, 1849, writings:—

" 'Thomas Hamblyn of Hinderby, Yeoman. Will proved September, 1587. To be buried in churchyard at Hinderby; wife Margaret, excentrix. Mentions daughters Alise and Elizabeth, wife of William Deakes, and Thomas, son of John Symonds, and John, son of John Baterby.' "

Of deeper interest still is the list of names of Baptism obtained by Mr. Somerby from the parish register of St. Lawrence in Reading, Berkshire. (Which see on page 35.) These recordings fully illustrate the method of spelling English names at that period.

It will be observed that where it seems to be the same personage the surname is spelled differently; noticing the first three entries; children of 'John', and if he be the same person, the name is spelled three different ways, ie: 'Hamlin,' 'Hamblen,' and 'Hamlyn,' and so on, others of like nature appear in the list.

This same parish register shows burials:

'Hamlin, John, March 28, 1623. This is possibly the infant son of Michael 'Hamblen,' shown in the list of baptisms as baptized on the day prior; and also,

'Hamlin, John, buried March 27, 1627. This is probably the elder John 'Hamlin,' 'Hamblen,' 'Hamlyn,' mentioned above.

The names John, George, William and James appear frequently on this register. These names have been popular in our branch of the family since the days of its founder, George Hamblen first known to be living in Worcester County, Maryland in 1756.

HAMBLENS IN ENGLAND AT THE PRESENT TIME.

It has been quite an ambition of the writer to find and correspond with some family or families in the mother country, England, bearing the name, and especially some using the exact spelling, “HAMBLÉN”, as our own American branch has adopted it. In this, partial success was attained after considerable effort.

From a musical journal, 1919, the name Bernard Hamblen was mentioned as “the popular English writer.” A letter was received from this gentleman, June 22, 1923, from which is copied these words:

“I really know very little of my father’s antecedents * * * Am unable to help you any further, except to say that my paternal grandfather, whom I only just remember, was, like my father, a glove manufacturer, and I believe a greatly loved and highly respected citizen, in honor of whose memory some quite important Sunday schools were erected.

I also know that he had a large family, nearly all of whom are deceased. Beyond these bare facts I can tell you nothing.”

Further inquiry from other sources revealed that Bernard Hamblen was born July 14, 1877, at Yeovil, Somerset County, England, and that Elias and Emma (Burch) Hamblen were his parents.

Through the kindness of Major H. C. C. Batten, D. S. O., Town Clerk of the Borough of Yeovil, we have in our files the following letter:—

King George Street,
Yeovil.
15th September, 1930.

Dear Sir:—

Thank you for your letter of the 4th instant. There is living in this town at the present time a Mr. Lionel J. Hamblen, of 41, The Avenue, who is a brother of the Mr. Bernard Hamblen to whom you refer.

There is also another family of the same name (Mr. W. C. Hamblen), living at 40, Beer Street.

I hope this information may be of some use to you.

Yours faithfully,
H. C. C. Batten.

The President,
The Hamblen Family Association,
Franklin, Indiana, U. S. A.

This information completes the evidence that the name, as our branch spells it, is in strict accord with a branch in England still spelling it with the same lettering, H A M B L E N, and that these folks are resident within the same section of the old country where the Sire Hamelin-de-Baloun was granted his estates by King William the First, and where he flourished and died, near the close of the eleventh century.

EMIGRANTS IN NORTH AMERICA

James Hamblen,* as far as has been ascertained, was the first of the name to settle in America. He came from London, England, and settled at Barnstable, Massachusetts in the spring of 1639.

He was a Puritan, and was a member of the church presided over by the Rev. John Lothrop as pastor. His wife's name was Anne. They were the parents of ten children. Those that lived beyond childhood were: Mary, James, Hannah, Bartholomew, John, Sarah, Eleazar and Israel, all of whom were born 1634 to 1652.

James, the son, became the father of fourteen children, seven sons

Bartholomew had ten children, three sons.

John had twelve children, three sons.

Eleazar had six children, two sons.

Israel had eight children, four sons.

From these families descendants became numerous and scattered to all the New England states and from there to the different states of all northern United States. Many of their descendants were people of wealth and prominence in their localities.

Many changes were adopted in the form of spelling the name, due, no doubt, in most part to officials in copying records and to army records, where once recorded it was difficult to correct.

Probably the most noted of this family was the Hon. Hanibal Hamlin, born at Paris, Maine, August 27, 1809. His lineage ran thus:

The most important events of his life were:

Admitted to the bar as an attorney, 1833, at Paris, Maine. Practiced law at Hampden, Maine, till 1848. Member of the Maine State Legislature, 1836-40, 1847. Speaker of the House, 1837, '39, '40. Elected to U. S. Congress, 1842 and '44. Chosen U. S. Senator 1848 to 1856. All the while as a Democrat.

He resigned from the Senate, 1856 and was elected governor of Maine, as a Republican. Served one month as governor and was again elected to the U. S. Senate. Elected Vice-President on the ticket with Abraham Lincoln, 1860, and served four years. Lincoln was

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The history of the United States of America is a story of growth and progress. It begins with the first settlers who came to the shores of the Atlantic Ocean in the early years of the 17th century. These settlers found a land of vast resources and a people who were friendly and hospitable. They built a life for themselves and their families, and in the process, they created a new nation.

The early years of the United States were marked by a spirit of adventure and exploration. Men like Christopher Columbus and John Cabot had already discovered the New World, but it was the settlers who made it a home. They built towns, planted crops, and raised families. They fought wars and won battles, and in the end, they emerged as a powerful and independent nation.

The history of the United States is a story of triumph and tragedy. It is a story of the struggles of a people who were determined to live in peace and harmony. It is a story of the sacrifices of men and women who gave their lives for the freedom and independence of their country. It is a story of the progress that has been made, and the challenges that remain.

The United States of America is a land of opportunity and hope. It is a land where every man, woman, and child has the chance to live a better life. It is a land where the dream of a better future is always within reach. The history of the United States is a story of the power of the human spirit, and the ability of a people to overcome adversity and build a better world for themselves and for their children.

much disappointed when he was not re-nominated in 1864. Mr. Hamlin was again elected to the U. S. Senate, 1865, and served till 1881. Was appointed U. S. Minister to Spain, 1881, but resigned the following year. Returned to his home in Bangor, Maine, where he lived till his death, July 4th, 1891.

He was the father of seven children. Two sons, General Charles and General Cyrus, were prominent commanders in the Union Army during the Civil War. Two other sons, Hon. Hanibal E. and Frank, became prominent attorneys of Chicago, Illinois.

Another of much prominence, was the Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, D. D., L. L. D., born in Waterford, Maine, January 5, 1811; a first cousin of Vice-President Hanibal. He graduated from Bangor Theological Seminary, 1837. Went to Turkey, 1838, in the service of the American Board of Foreign Missions, where he served as Missionary and teacher till 1873. In 1871 he completed an American College in Constantinople by permission of the Turkish Government, known as Robert College. This proved to be a great institution and is still in operation to this day (1933).

He rendered great sanitary food service to the British soldiers during the Crimean War, 1854. He was author of several noted works on Turkey and translated several books into the Armeanian language. Upon an occasion when the Vice-President, his cousin Hanibal, was congratulated as having done most for the name, he replied: "Not so!" "To whom then, do you accord the honor?" he was asked. "To my cousin Cyrus Hamlin," was his reply.

Elder Jacob Vernon Hamblin, another member of this branch of the family, born at Salem, Ohio, April 2, 1819, became one of the prominent elders and trusted workers under Brigham Young during the founding of the Mormon Church in Utah. He had four wives and twenty-four children.

Another of this branch was the musical genius, Eunmons Hamlin, born at Rome, New York, November 16, 1821. He moved to Boston, Massachusetts and in 1854 became a partner with Henry Mason in establishing the house of Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Company. He was the chief originator of the reed organ, under the name, Cabinet Organ and many of its improvements.

The Art of 'Voicing' reeds was the result of his genius. Their piano gained world wide fame for its superior merits. In later years he devoted his spare time to making violins and studying the methods of the old masters of Cremona. He accomplished some rare results and made in all, thirty-five violins. He died in 1885.

Giles Hamlin, a sea captain, born in England, 1622, settled at Middletown, Connecticut, in 1654. In a history of his descendants published in 1900, by Mr. H. F. Andrews of Iowa, 3867 of his descendants are listed and were scattered over a large portion of the northern and U. S. states.

The names of many other Hamblens, Hamlins, etc. have been found as early settlers in many different parts of North America. Many are their descendants.

During our research efforts, many of these families have come into our correspondence, and quite a bit of data relating to them collected. It is with regret that space in this work will not permit us to give their lines in more detail.

Hence, a few are here given: William Hamblen was a resident of Boston, Mass., in 1650. Wife, Mary, three children's names given, William, Mary and Nathaniel.

Richard Hamblen, was in Boston, 1665 and had a family. Mathew Hamblen, age 38, was emigrant to the Island of Barbadoes, (off the east coast of Florida), April 16, 1635. Giles Hamblen was sent to the same place. It is said that they were expelled from England for being among the opponents of the policies of King Charles I. The widow Hamblin owned four acres and one negro servant, near St. Michaels, same island, about the same time.

George Hamblen, of Boston, Mass., married Jane Martin, Aug. 2, 1737. Samuel Hamblen, of the Island Nevis, one of the Leeward Islands, Lesser Antillies, appointed Richard Harris, of Boston, his attorney to receive his share of the French prize, 'The Thomas Joseph' taken by Capt. Richard Glover, November 28, 1694.

Charles Hamblen, born in England, settled in Lunenburg County, Virginia, on a farm called Flat Rock. Son, Thomas, born there, 1755. Had several other children. His descendants said to be numerous. He had a brother, William, who came direct from England and settled near Church Road, Dinwiddie County, Virginia.

"In 1871, a gentleman, an attache of the General Hospital at Quebec, Canada, named J. R. L. Hamelin, wrote in French, which translated reads: 'The first Hamelin who came to Canada was called Louis. He is found mentioned for the first time at the date 1650, by M. L'Abbe Tanguay. He came from France.* * * The Seigniory of Grandines in the Bos. . . was granted him the 25th of April, 1711, and his descendants until about 1800, at which time it was sold. That was the branch of the Hamblins from which I descended. A Hamelin, also named Louis, son of the first, was married the 24th of February, 1718 to Catherine Neporn, of Detroit.' " (Mich.)

Joseph Hamblin was living on the Thames River, Ontario, Canada, when the Battle of the Thames was fought, October, 1813. His lands formed part of the battle field. He joined Gen. William Henry Harrison's army and took part in the battle. Saw the Indian Chief Tecompseh killed. General Harrison sent him and his family to Ohio, where he settled at Mt. Vernon. He had sons, Isaac, Joseph and George. Isaac settled at Graysville, Indiana, 1844. Served in Company E, 97th, Ind. Volunteers, Civil War. Several children. One son, Charles was married four times and had eleven children.

His son, Isaac Newton Hamblin was living at Clinton, Oklahoma, 1931. He married Golda Belle Kiser, 1899. Their children: Mary Belle, Lillie May, Charles Isaac, Paul Lester, Ida Pearl, Nora Goldia, Leon Edwin and Jesse Newton.

The following copied from data collected by Hon. H. F. Andrews of Iowa:

"Henry Alexander Hamblin of Duluth, Minnesota, traveling salesman, wrote January 15, 1905, that he was born in Ontario, Canada, 1859, wife was Janet Slock. Their children living were: Jesse William, Laura Agnes, Lewis Hood, Ruth Helen and Myra Gladys.

"His father, Jesse Hamblin, born at Ashbury, Berkshire, England, January 15, 1819. His father (Jesse's) was Benjamin, born about 1775 in Berkshire and that Benjamin's father was Robert, of the same locality.

"John James Hamblen, born October 1, 1800, at Yoevil, Somerset, England, was living, Newark, New Jersey, 1835. His son, John James, was living in Chicago, Illinois, 1903.

"Ella G. Hamlin-Bushnell, claiming to be of the Virginia line, in writing to Mr. Andrews, 1903, states that: 'Steven Hamlin was a member of Virginia House of Burgess in 1654, from Charles City County.

"'A volume of records, 1116 pages, kept by William Hamlin, Clerk of Prince George County, Virginia, from February 8, 1713 to 1728; the name Hamlin frequently occurs.'" Some other early records furnished by Mrs. Bushnell were:

"'William Hamlin was Vestryman in Old Blanford Church, Petersburg. Captain William Hamlin was added to the vestry held at the brick church on Well's Hill, August ye 13, 1737. William J. Hamlin, gent. was present at vestry held at Hatehe's Run. Voted to build a chapel. William Hamlin, clerk of court, 1740. William Hamlin member of Committee from Surrey County, (Va.) 1756."

From Virginia Magazine, Vol. 22, page 193: "Daniel Hamlin settled in Prince Edward County, and was granted land; 400 acres on Briery River, September 22, 1739; 703 acres on Sandy River, August 30, 1743.

"Stephen Hamblin, party to a civil complaint as shown in Virginia General Court, June 4, 1640."

Another prominent and numerous branch of the family name sprung from one Daniel Hamblen, whose lineage was extensively traced by Mr. Andrews, but never published. The writer, also, has added considerable to his research, but since it is quite lengthy, space will not permit publication of the line with this work and only a short sketch can be given:

This Daniel Hamblen was born in England, 1699. Emigrated from West Chester, England, to North Carolina in 1728. (See Daniel Hamlin land grants 3d paragraph above). Was living in Prince George County, Va., 1776. His will was probated there, 1784. His children were: John, Henry, Daniel, Mary and Obedience.

Henry, the son, settled in what is now Scott County, Va., near Fort Blackmore, was killed by the Indians, 1815, as was his wife, Polly nee Dickenson. Their children were: Francis, Charles, Champ and John.

Champ, at the age of ten, was carried away by the Indians to Detroit, Michigan, and sold to some English army officers. They permitted him to return to Virginia at the age of eighteen. He married Lavina Nobles and raised his family in Lee County, Va. They had several children. One son, Richard Murry Hamblen, born April 20, 1818. Died 1890. Married first, Mary Young Campbell, of Hawkins County, Tennessee. They had two sons, Allie and Alva Curtis.

Alva C. Hamblen, born October 28, 1859; studied medicine and practiced at Cumberland Gap, Lee County, Va., till 1884, then he moved to Florida where he became a very prominent physician. Elected to the State Legislature; Member of the State Board of Health. Living in Tampa, 1929. Married Ollie M. Parrott. They have two daughters, Frankey and Minerva. Dr. and Mrs. Hamblen, together have conducted considerable research upon their branch of the family and have a good history of it in manuscript form.

John Hamblen, son of the first Daniel (above) moved to East Tennessee. Had three sons and two daughters. One son was Hezekiah, who became a noted surveyor. He laid out the boundaries of the county in east Tennessee which bears his name, ie: 'Hamblen County.'

Correspondence with Mr. John S. Hamblen, Hardware Dealer of Big State Gap, Lee County, Va., 1928, traces his ancestry to the first Daniel in this language: "My great great grandfather was Henry Hamblen, born, March 25, 1740 and died August, 1815. Great grandfather's name was Charles, born June 25, 1778; died September 24, 1840. He married Miss Polly Hamblen, his first cousin (daughter of the 2d Daniel) born Aug. 24, 1782. My grandfather was John, born, 1808. My father, Charles L., born, 1842; was a Confederate soldier, is still hale and hearty, although in his 80th year."

This branch of Hamblens (Daniel's, 1699) has numerous descendants in nearly all the southern states. Many have been prominent in their localities; doctors, lawyers, preachers, planters, merchants, soldiers; in fact almost all lines of endeavor.

Another branch in Virginia was founded by two brothers, Charles and William Hamlin (name may have been borne, Hamblen) who came direct from England prior to 1755.

Charles settled in Lunenburg County, Va. and called his homestead 'Flat Rock.' He was married and had sons, John and Thomas, the latter born, 1755, and three daughters. Their descendants numerous, traced by H. F. Andrews but never published.

William Hamlin, the other brother settled in Dinwiddie County, Va., near Church Road and later lived in Nottaway County, where his will was probated. But little is known of his family. However, it is believed that the two brothers, Daniel Holland, born in Nottaway County, August 10, 1798, and Henry, were his descendants, probably grandsons.

Henry was a soldier during the War of 1812. He took sick and came home. His brother, Daniel H., went and took his place and served three months. Henry moved to Kentucky. Had a son, Henry, who lived in south middle Kentucky.

Daniel Holland Hamblen moved to Madison County, Alabama, in 1830. His children were: Sterling Philip, born in Limestone County, Ala., 1846, Alpus Jones, 1848, Ellen Jane, 1850, Virginia Ann, 1857.

Sterling Philip, who furnished the information for this branch, moved to Texas about 1880, and lived in several counties in that state. He was married twice and was the father of fifteen children. Was living, 1924, near Happy, Swisher County, Texas. In a letter, he wrote the following:

"My father (Daniel Holland Hamblen) had a great uncle John that came to Alabama and from there to Mississippi and on to Southern Texas, around Houston. There is quite a few of the name down there. I don't know any but Henry, the old Judge. He has been dead 14 or 15 years. Never learned the names of any of the rest as he was all the one that I corresponded with." (For his family, see page 489.)

HAMBLENS OF KENTUCKY

Correspondence with Mr. Joseph Hamblen of Parkers, Whitley County, Kentucky, reveals the status of a large circle of the family name living in Whitley, Knox, Bell and other counties of southeastern Kentucky as well as many of their descendants who have moved to other states.

The founder of this branch was George Hamblen who came direct from England when a young man and settled at Charlestown, South Carolina. He was educated in an English University. Majored in mathematics and vocational training.

He married Breame, probably in South Carolina. They moved to Whitley County, Kentucky, about 1815, where he reared his family and died there. Their children were:

(1). Daniel, born 1808, (2). Joseph, born January 29, 1814, (3). Benjamin, and (4). Jackson. Also four daughters.

(1). Daniel, lived in Whitley Co.; father of three sons and eight daughters. Son, (20). Riley, born 1838.

(2.) Joseph, married Eliza Bryant; lived in Whitley County; had five sons, four daughters. Son, (25). Joseph, born March 8, 1866.

(3). Benjamin, married Judie Sears; lived in Whitley Co.; three sons, three daughters. Son (30), Jesse, born 1830; son (32), Terrel Faley, born Dec. 4, 1838.

(4). Jackson, married Rebecca Monhollen. Lived in Whitley Co.; had two sons and two daughters. Son (36), Calvin C., born October 20, 1840.

(20). Riley, lived on Mulberry Creek, Whitley Co., where he reared his family and died, 1883. Only one daughter's name learned: Emily, born April 11, 1865. She married, 1882, Henry M. Young. He was Sheriff of Whitley County, 1928, and kindly furnished a lot of data of this family. They have two sons: Cornelius, b. 1886; Leander, b. 1891.

(25). Joseph, son of Joseph (2). married, 1887, Rebecca Patrick; lived in Knox and Whitley Counties; at Parkers, Whitley Co., 1930. Votes Democrat; Baptist Church; was U. S. Census enumerator for his district, 1930. He furnished complete and exceptional information

Lived in Whitley Co.; died 1922; one son; two daughters. (44) Martha Jane, born 1859; married Wilmer I. Craley; living, 1928, Williamsburg, Whitley County; had three children.

Mr. Alfred Hamlin Burr of North Little Rock, Arkansas, has been working on the lineage of descent from his mother's side and traces their branch to (1) Stephen Hamlin (See page 43), who came from England prior to 1637 and settled in Isle of Wight County, Virginia. Later on he obtained lands in Charles City County, which became a part of Prince George County.

(2) Stephen, only one of his family identified, was the father of (3) Capt. John Hamlin, a captain of Virginia Militia, 1680 and member of Virginia House of Burgesses, 1714, 1720-22, from Prince George County. Seven of his children are named.

(4) John, one son, married Ann Goodrich; died prior to May 11, 1725 when his will was proved. They had seven children. One son (5) Charles, living, 1741 in Lunenburg County; Owned a plantation at Merchant's Hope Chapel. His only son identified was

(6) Charles, born about 1734, married Agnes Cocks; lived in Lunenburg County; only son identified was (7) Thomas, born 1758, married in Lunenburg County, May 5, 1807; married second, Mary Eigon Stainbach; they parents of five children, one son,

(8) Peter Stainbach Hamlin, born January 31, 1808; married Virginia Ann Michaux; moved from Rockingham County, North Carolina, 1838, to Calloway County, Kentucky; they had eight children; one son

Record is found in "Side-lights on Maryland History" (Vol. 1, page 321), that one George Hamblin on December 12, 1678, surveyed 800 acres of land in Somerset County, Maryland.

Patent was granted him on May 28, 1679 and the estate was given the name "Winchester". This deed recites patent to George Hamblin^{*} for Winchester and describes it as laying on the seaboard side (that is the side laying next to the ocean) and on the south side of St. Martins River, near the mouth of said river and as beginning at Shad Gut,[†] containing 800 acres.

The last will and testament of this George Hamblin was dated December 17, 1689 and probated December 1, 1692, showing that he died prior to the last named date. In this will it was stated that "Son Francis and heirs", should have part of Winchester and that "young son George residue of Winchesteer at the age of 18 years."

Daughter Mary Killiard, one shilling, daughters Eliza, Margaret and Temperence to have personal property. Margaret and Temperence to be of age at 14 years. Wife Margaret, executrix.

By a deed dated October 17, 1701, Francis Hamblin and his wife Sarah conveyed to John Johnson that part of Winchester devised to him by his father, George Hamblin. Further record of these Hamblins has not been obtained.

That part of Somerset County wherein Winchester lay became a part of Worcester County in 1742. Snow Hill is its county seat.

A search for some one by the name, Hamblen, residing within the same locality at the present time, 1930, brought information that one Marshall Hamblin had resided near Whaleyville[‡], Worcester County about the period 1802 and reared a family there.

He was born, probably between 1775 and 1780. Was married twice. By his first wife he had one son, Joshua, born about 1802, that lived. Fifteen years later he married a second wife and had several children. Several sons and daughters. Their names not obtained.

One of these sons was probably Benjamin, born about 1825. Joshua married and resided a farmer near Whaleyville. Was the father of nine children. Only the name of one son has been secured, which was Asbury Quinton, born January 24, 1849.

* Note 17. Several sources were consulted in obtaining this record. In the course of this research the name was variously spelled: Hamblin, Hamlin and Hamlyn.

† Note 18. The term 'Gut' in this instance signifies a narrow deep arm of the sea extending some distance back into the land between sheer high banks.

‡ Note 19. The phrase: "You've played Whaley!" often used by the older Hamblens in friendly derision for some mishap or deed out of the ordinary has never been noticed by the writer to be used by any other people.

He was a prosperous country merchant and lived near Pittsville a town not far from Whaleyville. He died May 26, 1918. His two daughters, May and Gertrude were living at Pittsville in 1923. Miss May who furnished the sketch for this work had been a school teacher for several years.

Benjamin, born about 1825, was probably a half brother of Joshua. He resided near Parsonsburg, also not far from Pittsville and Whaleyville. Record of only one son of his was secured; Joseph J. Hamblin born, March 26, 1854 and died February 21, 1908.

His son Benjamin R. Hamblin the informant of this sketch lived, 1927, near Parsonsburg, Maryland, stated that he had one brother but did not give his name.

One Mr. J. T. Hamblin, Sr., lived at or near Berlin, Worcester County, Maryland, in 1927. He replied twice to our letters but revealed nothing of his family.

One correspondent referred to him as one "whose family at one time was prominent in this county". Correspondence with several professional persons revealed that quite a number bearing the name Hamblin resided in Worcester County, but no other names were given.

One gentleman stated that, "There are a lot of Hamblins in this county up around the northern part and not so far from St. Martins River. Several of them are clients of mine. All thrifty and industrious people and some of considerable means."

EXPLANATIONS

The Genealogy will be found arranged by generations, by families, in chronological order, as nearly as practicable. The name of the head of a family is given in full, the Christian names only, of the children of a family are given to avoid repetition of the surnames. The names of all individuals are consecutively numbered, and some names appear, first as a child, second as the head of a family; in such cases, where the name appears a second time, as the head of a family, the number first given is repeated in brackets.

The names of the children, whose histories are continued in the next generation, are marked thus: *

To find the line of descent, take any name and trace the ancestors by the small numerals attached to their respective names, following the name of the head of the family, where the line of ancestors is given, with the number of each generation expressed in small figures, thus: IRMA ANN MAYFIELD,⁸ Mable Edith Hamblen,⁷ A. Porter,⁶ Williamson,⁵ David R.,⁴ John M.,³ Job,² George,¹

ABBREVIATIONS

Abbreviations of words have been avoided as much as possible in this work. However, it has been necessary to use some to conserve space. Hence, abbreviations in common use for titles, states, months, religious denominations, and etc. are well understood. Special abbreviations common to genealogical works are: b. for born, m, for married, ch. for child, children, church, daug. for daughter, d. for died. These and possibly a few others are used and should be readily understood.

In instances where a party was born, married, lived and etc. in the same state, but where these events were effected in different counties, the name of the county only, is given after first mention until a change in state is made.

Such a large number of descendants of Job Hamblen², were born, married, lived, died etc. in Brown County, Indiana, that to save much repetition where only Brown County is given for such an event, it may be assumed that Brown County, Indiana is intended.

ERRORS

"To error is human"; this sayth the sage.

But despite, a few will be found. When one is found, please refer to page 543 where correction is offered for most of them.

The history of the world is a vast and complex subject, one that has fascinated humanity for centuries. It is a story of the triumphs and failures of countless civilizations, of the struggles and achievements of individual men and women. The history of the world is a tapestry of events, woven together by the threads of time and circumstance. It is a story that is constantly being rewritten, as new discoveries and insights are made. The history of the world is a story that is as old as time itself, and it is a story that will continue to be told for as long as there are people left to tell it.

GEORGE HAMBLÉN
AND HIS DESCENDANTS
FIRST GENERATION

1. George Hamblén¹ of Maryland is the most remote ancestor that our researches have been able to designate and is the first progenitor that we can definitely name. His descendants shall be traced in detail in the following chapters and it was he, whose line this work was set out to trace in the beginning.

Very little has been learned about this forefather George. His name was not positively known, even to the generation of his great grandchildren, many of whom were living when the writer was a youth and with whom he conversed concerning him.

Upon one occasion, the Rev. William Hamblén about 1893 stated: "It is most probable that his name was George." His great granddaughter, Eleanor Taylor in 1917 stated that she, "thought his name was George."*

It is very probable that the date of his birth was about the period, 1725 to 1730. Tradition was rife among the older descendants that he was the English immigrant and it was often so stated by them. However in this they could have been easily mistaken.

That tradition usually carries a main truth with fair accuracy, but as to details it can easily be mistaken, has been the experience of the writer.

* Note 20. Documentary evidence that removed doubt as to his name being George came about by the following curious incident: About the year 1916, while walking along a street in Seymour, Indiana, when a state reunion of the Union Veterans of the War between the States was in progress, Richard P. Hamblén met a gentleman strolling in the opposite direction whom he had never met before.

The stranger's appearance forced Richard P. to halt and look straight at him. The other man did the same. They both looked for an instant, then Richard said: "Pardon me sir! But aren't you related to the Hamblén Family?" The man replied: "Yes sir, my name is James D. Hamlin of Indianapolis!" I believe you are a Hamblén too!"

Both men were quite surprised at the incident and a conversation of

From his son, Pierce Dant's application for Revolutionary War pension on file at the War Department, Washington, D. C., it was learned that he (George) was a resident of Worcester County, Maryland in 1756, the date of Dant's birth.

The parentage of the forefather George has not been learned. However, supposition leads us to believe that he may have descended from George Hamblen, the proprietor of Winchester, Somerset, afterward, 1742, Worcester County. (See page 47).

George of Winchester had two sons. Francis was the older son and George, Jr., who had not yet reached the age of 18, when his father's will was made in 1689, but was termed, "my young son" in the will. Either of these two sons could have been the grandfather of our progenitor, George. And it is possible that the 'young son' George could have been the father of our forefather George. However, this statement is only mere conjecture on the part of the writer. Some future Hamblen genealogist may be able to prove or disprove this presumption.

Our forefather George moved with his family from Worcester County but the date of his removal has not been found. However, he was residing in Charlotte County, Virginia, March, 1776, when his son Pierce Dant enlisted in the Colonial Army, Revolutionary War.

This place of residence is stated as, "18 miles below the Court House" (Charlotte Court House, Charlotte County). This point would be located not far from the Staunton River and near a place now called Red Oak. Some idea of the reason for this location in Charlotte County may be gained from the fact that this section of the state was then on the western frontier.

It was the new country just settling up. Charlotte County was formed in 1765. The family was still residing there when the son Job enlisted in the state militia, March, 1779. The son Pierce Dant stated that he moved from Charlotte County to Pittsylvania County, "during the war".

some length followed, in the course of which James D. stated that he possessed a printed history of the Hamblen family and that if Richard would visit him he might look it over

The invitation was accepted and Richard P. accompanied by this writer called on Mr. Hamlin at his home. The book was brought out and a tender of its loan was made.

Mr. Hamlin told this story about the book: "During the great flood from White River in 1913, water raised in my house to a depth of five feet. Every book and paper that I possessed was ruined except this book. It was saved by its position on the top of our kitchen china safe, where the water did not quite reach."

From this history, the author secured Mr. Andrews' address and through him a copy of Pierce Dant Hamblen's application for Revolutionary War pension was secured, which stated that his father was George and also told where he lived in Virginia and Maryland.

It had long been known by the writer that Dant and our forefather, Job, were brothers. This work of Mr. Andrews also gave the English pedigree of the family which might not have otherwise have ever been known to the writer.

It is probable that the father, George, moved to Pittsylvania County, for Dant was not married till about 1874, and Job, his brother, was married in Pittsylvania County, soon after his return from the army, 1782.

A probable reason for the family moving "during the war" may have been the fact that their home in Charlotte County lay within the path of the invading British Army under Lord Cornwallis. Early in February, 1781, this strong army chased General Nathaniel Green across the River Dan, within 40 miles of their home, if they had not moved before that time.

Nothing more is known of this forefather, George. When or where he died has not been found out, but he most likely spent the remainder of his life in Pittsylvania or some of the other counties in the extreme western part of Virginia, for his sons resided in some of these counties till after the year 1803.

The name of George's wife has not been found either. The names of his children were remembered by his great-granddaughter, Eleanor Taylor, and were recorded in the following manner:

July 14, 1913, she stated their names to Eunice L. Hamblen, mother of the writer who wrote them down thus:

John, George, Benjamin, Eliakim, Pierce Dant, Job, Elizabeth (Betsey), and Percy.

To the writer, February 16, 1916, without any reference to the former list she gave the names in this manner:

Eliakim, John, Reece, Pierce Dant, Benjamin, George, Job, Elizabeth (Betsey), and Percy.

Again to the writer on August 26, 1917, and without referring to either of the other two lists above, she stated their names in the following order:

John, George, Uriah, Pierce Dant, Benjamin, Eliakim, Job, Elizabeth (Betsey), and Percy.

Conclusion is reached by the writer that she may have been mistaken about the names Reece and Uriah, but since all the other names were included in each of the three lists at dates widely separated the list believed to be substantively correct should be given in the order of their ages, thus:

- 2.* J O H N,
- 3.* G E O R G E,
- 4.* P I E R C E D A N T, born, March 24, 1756.
- 5.* B E N J A M I N,
- 6.* J O B, born, July 14, 1762.
7. E L I A K I M,
- 8.* E L I Z A B E T H (Betsey),
- 9.* P E R C Y.

No other information of any kind has been learned about the son Eliakim given in the above lists. What has been learned about the other members of the George Hamblen' family follows in regular order.

It is possible that the above figures would be different if the Board had not been asked to report on the matter. The Board has not been asked to report on the matter since 1911.

A possible reason for the Board's decision to not report on the matter is that the Board has not been asked to report on the matter since 1911. The Board has not been asked to report on the matter since 1911.

[2] JOHN HAMBLEN,² (George.¹) born, probably between 1748 and 1752, in Worcester County, Maryland. Believed to be the oldest of his father's family. Moved with his parents to Charlotte County, Virginia.

Believed to be the same John Hamblin who enlisted in the Virginia contingent of the Colonial Army during the Revolutionary War. This belief is based on a letter from the Adjutant General's office, Washington, D. C., from which the following is copied:

Washington, D. C., July 22, 1922.

Mr. A. . Hamblen,
Franklin, Indiana.

The records of this office show that one John Hamblin (surname also borne as Hamlin) served in the Revolutionary War as a private in Capt. James Harris' Company and in Capt. Thomas Will's Company, 15th Virginia Regiment, also known as 11th and 15th Virginia Regiment, commanded at different times by Major Gustavus B. Wallace, Col. John Cropper and Col. Daniel Morgan.

He enlisted September 5, 1777, for three years; on the company muster rolls for June and July, 1778, he was reported, "sick, Valley Forge," and on the company muster roll for August, 1778, he was reported, "Dead."

Robert C. Davis,
Acting The Adjutant General.

Other corroborative circumstances served to strengthen the evidence that this John Hamblin, hero of Valley Forge, was a son of the forefather George¹.

[3] GEORGE HAMBLEN,² (George.¹) born, probably about 1753-55, in Worcester County, Maryland. Moved with parents to Charlotte County, Virginia, and from there to other counties in western Virginia, then on to Knox or Whitley County, Kentucky. Married Bartha? Was deceased 1849 when David L. Hamblen¹ visited his locality in Kentucky.

Children known:

11. RHODA BARTHA.

[4] PIERCE DANT HAMBLEN,² (George.¹) born, March 24, 1756 in Worcester County, Maryland. Moved with his parents to Charlotte County, Virginia, where he was living with his father, 18 miles below (south) of Charlotte Court House, Charlotte County, at the beginning of the Revolutionary War.

*Note 22. William Hamblen visited relatives in Brown County, Ind., about 1850, in company with David L. Hamblen, after his visit to his home in Kentucky. No other information learned of him.

He enlisted, March, 1776, in Captain John Brent's Company, under Colonel Robert Lawson in the Fourth Virginia Regiment, Continental Line. This regiment took its place in General Washington's main army, probably some where in New Jersey, late in the fall of 1776, when the British General Lord Cornwallis began his thrust into that state.

Dant's regiment was among the force of 2400 "picked troops" chosen by Washington on December 25, 1776 to make the memorable crossing of the Delaware River on that cold Christmas night and attack the Hessians at Trenton, New Jersey.

The attack was made at 8 o'clock on the morning of December 26 in a blinding snow storm. The Hessians were so much taken by surprise that they offered but little resistance. Their brave leader, Col. Rahl was mortally wounded and 1000 prisoners were taken.

On January 2, 1777, General Cornwallis attacked Washington's army near Trenton where considerable skirmishing took place, but no general engagement. This was known as the second battle of Trenton, and our subject, Dant took part in it. On the night of January 2nd, Washington withdrew his army on account of the superior British force confronting him and marched his army toward Princeton, N. J.

A forced march brought his men within three miles of Princeton by daylight on January 3rd. Three British regiments were on the march toward Trenton, expecting to take part in that attack on Washington at that point. A fierce encounter took place with the result that the British were defeated and put to rout after sustaining a loss of 100 men killed and 300 taken prisoner. Washington's loss was light. This was the Battle of Princeton and our subject, Pierce Dant is accredited as having taken part in it.

After this Washington went into winter quarters at Morristown and it is presumed that Dant spent the remainder of the winter with his regiment there, 1777.

Operations were resumed the next summer and Washington was called with his army to defend Philadelphia. On September 11, 1777, the enemy was encountered at Brandywine Creek near Philadelphia. An engagement took place in which Dant's regiment took part. Washington was forced to retreat after sustaining a loss of 1200 men.

Further maneuvers brought the contending armies together in an engagement at Germantown not far from Brandywine on October 4th at sunrise. Washington was again forced to retreat after losing 1000 men. Dant Hamblen took part in this battle.

Winter soon came on and Washington with his depleted army took up a position at Valley Forge where the winter was passed amid terrible hardships. Dant our subject surely spent the winter there and may have become incapacitated on account of its rigors, for on March 9, 1778 he was discharged at this place.

He returned to his father's home in Virginia and sometime after 1779 moved to Pittsylvania County which lays about 35 miles westward from Charlotte County. The place and date of his marriage, nor the name of his wife, is not known, but it is most probable that he married in Pittsylvania County about the year 1784.

From Pittsylvania County he moved to the Holton River country, probably near Holton Bridge in Scott or Washington County, still further on west but date not found. His next move was to Big Popular Creek, Knox County, Kentucky, about 1803, where he probably spent the remainder of his life.

On September 26, 1933 he was granted a pension by the U. S. Government at the rate of $80.00 per annum, dating from March 4, 1831, certificate No. 22,020. The date of the last payment of this pension was made March 17, 1843 through the pension agency at Louisville, Kentucky. The exact date of his death is not found but it is presumed that his death occurred not far from the date of the last payment of his pension. It is presumed that his wife preceded him in death as no widow's claim for his pension is found of record.

His burial place was most probably in Hamblen Cemetery nearchurch on Little Popular Creek, Knox County, near Carpenter. This point is about 12 miles east of Williamsburg, Whitley County and about an equal distance south-west of Barbourville, Knox County.

His application for pension stated that his children's names and ages were as follows:

12.	SARAH (Sally)	Born.....	1785.	Mar'd long prior
13.*	GEORGE,	"	1787. [to 1820
14.	JOHN,*	"	1803.
15.	THOMAS,	"	1791.

17.*	PETER,	"	1795.
18	ELIZABETH (Betsey)	"	1797.
19.	FRANKLIN, (Franky)	"	1801.

[5] BENJAMIN HAMBLLEN,² (George.¹) born about 1759. Reared in Charlotte County, Virginia. Little has been learned about him. It was said that he was a sailor. This is very probable from the fact that not far from where he grew to manhood, traversed the large navigable rivers of eastern Virginia and the many seaports that entertained much ocean going commerce.

A story is recorded of him that while visiting his married sister Betsey Powers in Kentucky, that if they would fire a gun at the time of the birth of her expected child he would foretell its fortune. This was done and he predicted that it would not live beyond childhood and that its death would be caused by fire. This forecast became true of the child. He was so abashed by the incident that he resolved never to make any more prophecies in such matters. (See last paragraph, page 92.)

It has been learned that he was living, 1833 not far from his brother, Pierce Dant who at that time lived on Big Popular Creek in Knox County, Kentucky. If married or had a family not learned.

* Note 23. John Hamblen married and lived on Haaps Creek, Knox County, Kentucky where he reared a family but no names have been learned.

JOB HAMBLLEN

SERVED AT YORKTOWN SURRENDER

VIRGINIA EMIGRANT TO INDIANA

PIONEER OF WESTERN BARTHOLOMEW COUNTY

/ NOW HAMBLLEN TOWNSHIP, BROWN COUNTY

[6] JOB HAMBLLEN,² (George,¹) born July 14, 1762, place undetermined, but most probable, in Worcester County, Maryland, yet he may have been born at some point between Worcester County and Charlotte County, Virginia, or might have been born in Charlotte County. But be that as it may, he was living, at the age of fourteen years, with his father, eighteen miles south of Charlotte Court House, Charlotte County, Virginia.

At this time the great Revolutionary War was in progress. The battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill had been fought. Patriotism had stirred the Hamblen home. The older brother Pierce Dant had already joined the colors. The boy Job no doubt was attending muster days, only waiting and wishing for the day when he might be old enough to join the ranks.

His day came, for; March, 1779 he enlisted as a private in the company of Capt. John Tabbs' Virginia State Militia, which later formed a company in Colonel Charles Dabney's regiment. Virginia could see her day coming in the war for the British had already transferred their operations to the southern states and were headed toward her borders.

The probabilities are that Capt. Tabbs' company did not leave the home locality, for there was no telling where the British would strike. Sure enough, during the year 1781 the notable campaign of Lord Cornwallis was put on through the Carolinas and was not halted till General Nathaniel Green and his Colonial Army crossed the River Dan within thirty miles of the Hamblen homestead. Little doubt there is that Capt. Tabbs with the forefather Job in his company was not stationed far away, waiting to do his bit if battle came on.

Luckily the British General did not succeed in crossing the Dan. From this point he began his retreat southward and was overtaken by the Colonials at Guilford Court House, North Carolina, about 70 miles from the Hamblen home, on March 15, 1781, and was so badly crippled that the British left the locality.

Again in the fall of 1781, Cornwallis made his second northward thrust and succeeded in reaching the rich eastern lands of Virginia. Every available troop that could be mustered was pressed into service to meet the emergency. Colonel Charles Dabney who had seen considerable service during the war made a canvass and collected Capt.

Tabbs' company among enough other companies to form a regiment under his command and hastened eastward. During the month of May, 1781, the British sent a force under Colonel Tarlton to attempt the capture of Thomas Jefferson at his home near Charlottesville. State Militia was sent to intercept this movement.

Baron Steuben was assigned to command the militia contingent and was stationed at Point of Fork,* a place at the confluence of the Rivanna and Fluvanna rivers where the James River is formed, with about 500 men, where he awaited the assembling of more militia to the south of the James, that had been directed to assemble at Point of Fork. It is most probable that Job Hamblen was among this militia.

While stationed here the British Colonel Sineoe skillfully advanced with his command and was close upon the Americans before they were aware of his maneuvers. The Baron mistaking the number of the British ordered a hurried retreat of his troops and abandoned part of his supplies which fell into the hands of the British. Considerable skirmishing took place which constituted the Point of Fork engagement. The Baron did not halt until thirty miles from the Point.

By the middle of June, 1781, Lord Cornwallis had advanced well into the middle of Virginia from the south. The Marquis de La Fayette had been sent to harass him what he could with the few men that he could gather. On the 19th of June Baron Steuben joined La Fayette with his detachment.

With about 4,000 men in all, the Marquis followed about 20 miles behind the British and gave them all the trouble he could by encouraging skirmishes whenever possible till Williamsburg was reached. On the 4th of July, 1781, the British marched from Williamsburg. Next day La Fayette left his encampment, crossed the Chickahominy expecting to attack the British rear guard, after the main army had crossed the ford on the James River.

The British deceived the Marquis by judiciously posting their troops and left more behind than La Fayette expected. General Wayne was sent against them and made a brisk attack with 800 men. La Fayette soon saw the strength of the British and ordered a retreat precipitately, leaving two pieces of cannon in the hands of the enemy. The Americans retired behind a morass, and it being nearly dark, Cornwallis suspecting an ambush ordered no pursuit.

In this encounter the Americans had 118 men, including ten officers, killed, wounded or taken prisoner. The loss of the British was five officers and about seventy privates. This was the Battle of Jamestown and Job Hamblen is accredited as having been engaged in it.

The British passed onto the Island of Jamestown during the night, and ultimately proceeded to Yorktown.

* Note 24. Records from Washington, D. C., show Job Hamblen to have been in an engagement at 'Piney Fork', but search of records at our command fails to show any engagement by that name during the Revolutionary War. Hence, it is assumed that some mistake may have occurred in copying and that Point of Fork probably is the engagement intended.

General La Fayette, under whose command the Virginia Militia remained, crossed the James and went into camp on the north side of the river, where he remained while Cornwallis was establishing himself at Yorktown.* This location put La Fayette in a position to resist any attempt of the British to retrace their route back into the Carolinas.

The Americans seeing their opportunity of striking a telling blow at the enemy, rushed all available troops of every description to the vicinity of Williamsburg and soon assembled a force of upward of 11,000 men exclusive of the Virginia Militia. Included in this force was General Washington himself, who had suddenly broke away from his camps in front of New York with a strong force of his own command and by forced marches arrived in Cornwallis' rear.

A French fleet of war vessels also appeared at the mouth of the York River, about the 20th of September and landed considerable force of French land troops. The French were assigned a position to the west of Yorktown, thus completing the circle with the American Army on the south and the French war vessels blockading the water front to the east and north.

The Virginia Militia and light infantry under the immediate command of Governor Nelson himself, occupied the extreme right of the field next to Wormleys Creek. Till the 6th of October the besieging army was employed disembarking its heavy artillery and supplies and placing it in position. On the night of the 6th the first parallel was begun and by the night of the 9th the batteries were complete, notwithstanding the most strenuous opposition from the British. The Americans at once opened fire with shot and shell.

By the night of the 11th the besiegers begun their second parallel 300 yards nearer the British which was completed in three days. During this time the British fire was most distressful of any time during the siege. By the 17th of October the British works were in ruins. The garrison was weakened by disease, death and exhausted by incessant duty. Every ray of hope was extinguished. At 10 o'clock in the forenoon Cornwallis sent out a flag of truce with a letter to General Washington proposing a cessation of hostilities for 24 hours in order to give time to arrange terms of surrender of the forts at Yorktown and Gloucester point.

The American general immediately returned an answer and told Cornwallis that he would grant him two hours in which to transmit his proposals in writing. His lordship complied and hostilities were suspended during the night.

Meanwhile, General Washington drew up and transmitted to Cornwallis such terms as he was willing to grant, informing the British general that if he approved them, commissioners might be immediately appointed to reduce them to form. According on the 18th two officers from each army met but failed to agree.

* Note 25. The reader may understand that Job Hamblen was with his company of Virginia Militia during all these maneuvers and where he remained until after Cornwallis surrendered.

General Washington resolved to admit of no delay, directed the articles be transcribed and on the morning of the 19th (October, 1781) sent them to Cornwallis demanding that they be signed by eleven o'clock A. M. and that the garrison should march out by two in the afternoon. Finding that no better terms could be obtained, Cornwallis assented.

The army, artillery, military chest and public stores of every kind were surrendered to General Washington and the British ships to the French Admiral Count de Grasse. The garrison marched out of the town with colors cased and the drums beating a British march. Lord Cornwallis declined to present Washington with his sword, but sent it by a subordinate officer. Washington accordingly met his dignity by sending General Lincoln, who had surrendered his sword to the British at Charleston, N. C., to accept it.

The British surrendered about 7,000 soldiers and 1,500 seamen. Artillery consisting of 75 brass cannons and 69 iron cannons, howitzers and mortars and a large amount of other arms, ammunition and stores. The British loss had been about 550 men in killed, wounded and prisoners. The American loss during the siege amounted to about 300 killed and wounded.

Thus ended one of the most far reaching military dramas of the WORLD's history. It practically ended the war. The British soon gave up the struggle and acknowledged the independence of the United Colonies of America.

To have been posted on the field of Yorktown as was the young soldier, Job Hamblen, and witnessed the stacking of the arms by the once proud and victorious army of the British King must have been a sight never to be forgotten and one that filled his heart with unbounded joy, such as all loyal followers of the immortals, Washington, La Fayette and scores of other noted leaders, throughout the whole land most surely enjoyed.

After the surrender at Yorktown, Captain Tabb's company is known to have spent the winter in camp somewhere within the locality, probably in the vicinity of Portsmouth, for it was at this place that Job received his discharge from further service on March 10, 1782. It is presumed that he at once returned to his father's home which, at this time was probably in Pittsylvania County,* Virginia.

The next event of record in Job's life is of his marriage to Elenor Mullings, September 3, 1782, in Pittsylvania County, daughter of John and Jane (Washington-Russell) Mullings.† She was born March 30,

*Note 26. See account of Job's father, George, moving on page 52.

† Note 27. Virginia land purchase records show that one John Mullins in 1652, purchased land through Capt. Augustine Warmer (See Col. A. Warner page 61) of Gloucester County, probably in either James City or Charles City County.

This is the earliest record found of the name in Virginia and may have been the ancestor of Eleanor's father, John Mullings. The only place found where the name was spelled "Mullings" has been from the records of Job's Revolutionary War service, furnished by the Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C., and this spelling may have been only the notion of the 1765, probably in one of the eastern counties of Virginia. She had two sisters, Martha and Elizabeth (Betsey) but no history of them has been agent or official who made out the original pension application. Jane Washington married first John Russell. (That his name was John is not quite certain.) Russell died, but the cause of his death is not of record. By this marriage there were two sons, John and George Russell. Tradition relates that they both served as soldiers during the Revolutionary War. Both were taken prisoner by the British. One was either shot or died while in prison. The other was released but no record of him is found.

That the father of Jane Washington was John was a tradition that was well established among the grandchildren of her daughter, Eleanor Hamblen. Among these that this writer knew and to whom the story was many times related were:

The Rev. William Hamblen and his brother, David Russell Hamblen, grandfather of the writer, Eleanor Taylor who remembered well the grandmother Eleanor and who lived the later part of her life within the Taylor hom., and Eliakim R. Taylor, her brother.

This tradition was also rife in the Lock family of Illinois, descendants of Eleanor Hamblen Lock, daughter of Job and Eleanor. The Locks had long been separated from any of the other branches of the family with no correspondence for at least forty years. When correspondence was established with Allen A. Lock, a grandson of Eleanor Lock, he voluntarily wrote, saying that he had always heard of a relationship to the Washington family existing.

The same tradition held that this John Washington was a brother of the great general and first president, George Washington. However, this part has been proven quite in error, for John A. Washington, brother of George was born January 13, 1736 and his daughter Jane, born 1758, married her cousin, William Washington.

The grandmother of Jane Mallings must have been, herself near the age of John A. Washington, since her daughter Eleanor was born in 1765. This writer has made exhaustive research to gain authentic information regarding the Washington families of Virginia and much has been found of record of both branches; that of northern and that of southern Virginia.

The history of this family is so fascinating and has been traced so far into antiquity that it has been used as a basis for tracing the origin of the progenitors of the Hamblen family to England, and now through the marriage of the forefather Job Hamblen to Eleanor, daughter of Jane Washington it is deemed proper to show this lineage as much in detail as space will permit.

What relationship existed between the two brothers, Laurence and John Washington, immigrants, 1659, to Westmoreland County and the families of south-eastern Virginia, has not been definitely determined. Each of these brothers had a son John, born 1665 and 1660, respectively. Little account of either of these sons is to be had and some writers believe some of the southern families to be their descendants.

A John Washington married September 15, 1658 in Surry County, Virginia, Mary, widow of Charles Flood whose first husband was Blunt. She had a son Thomas Blunt. John and Mary had a son Richard Washington who married Elizabeth, daughter of Arthur Jordan. They also lived in Surry County where their wills were proven. His, November 9, 1724, and hers, May 21, 1735. The heirs in both wills coincide and the following are named and the heritage of each is given, as copied from the father, Richard's will; ie:—

Son George, land on Nottaway Swamp;

Son Richard, estate now in his possession;

Son JOHN, land adjoining his own;

Son William, 350 acres on Seacock Swamp;

Son Thomas, land whereon I live on Blackwater;

Son James, 160 acres on Seacock Swamp;

Son Arthur, 200 acres north side of Blackwater Swamp;

Daughter Elizabeth Lanier, 200 acres on Mill Branch;

Daughter Priscilla Lanier, husband Sampson, 200 acres in Isle of Wright County on Flaggy Run; Daughters Mary Hart, Faith Baker and Ann Washington estate not given in copy obtained.

Record is that John Washington above had a son JOHN, whose wife was Lamar, daughter of William Rockman. They also lived in Surry County. This writer believes that this John was father of Jane who first married Russell and second John Mullings.

Records from the Land Office of Richmond, Virginia show among early immigrants the names Russell and Mullins and the names of the agent's making purchases for them as follows:

Mullins, John, 1652 by Capt. Augustine Warner, ——— County. (Capt. A. Warner lived in Gloucester County, Va., Laurence Washington of Westmoreland County married Mildred, his daughter. Laurence was grandfather of General George Washington.)

Russell, William, 1643, by Thomas Woodhouse, James City County; Russell, William, 1648 by Pierce Lemon, Charles City County; Russell, Robert, 1649 by Henry Barks, Lower Norfolk County; Washington, Richard, 1669 by Peter Rogby, Charles City County.

It is observed that all these entries were within the same locality of south-eastern Virginia, which makes possible the intermarriage of their families. It is fully in line with the history of American emigration that descendants should move on westward and seek homes on the frontier as it becomes available for settlement. Hence, these family names are later found in Charlotte and Pittsylvania Counties.

Hon. Albert Wells of New York City, 1879, compiled a history of the Washington family. From it is copied data which traces the lineage back more than 1900 years. Mr. Wells obtained the material for the English part of his work from one James Phillippe, Esquire of London, England. Mr. Phillippe was a lineal descendant of the Norman Washington progenitor in England, Thorfin the Dane. He spent thirty years in gathering the evidence which Mr. Wells published; the chief source of which, Mr. Phillippe says was, "those inestimable Records, the 'Common Pleas Rolls' in England;" and further says:

"The pedigree I now send, I can establish by legal evidence." Without doubt Mr. Phillippe used every effort to obtain all the data recorded in history in making his conclusions and since his claims are corroborated to a large extent by other historians, the writer accepts his claims with much confidence; criticisms of his and Mr. Wells' work, notwithstanding.

Mr. Wells begins his genealogy with the migration of the renowned adventurer, Siggy (See pages 15 and 16) a Mithridatic Prince who was forced out of Asia Minor, about the middle of the first century before Christ, along with the once powerful King Mithradates VI, when he met defeat at the hands of the Roman General Pompey.

Turkestan, to where this prince retired with his followers, was occupied by the Scythians, an inferior race and were easily overcome. Their Supreme Deity was called Odin, which name Prince Sigge adopted after assuming the role of Chief Priest of their religion.

Further invasion by the Romans made his power insecure, so about the year 70 B. C., he gathered his partisans and a vast concourse of followers and proceeded through Gardarike (Russia) to Saxland subduing all the nations as he passed and bestowing their dominions as kingdoms upon his sons. These dominions were what is now northern Germany and Denmark.

Odin, himself, next crossed the Baltic and chose the Island of Fionia for his residence, where he is said to have built the city of Odense. From there he passed on into Sweden and fixed his abode near Lake Logur, (The Mealar Sea in the modern province of Stockholm) and erected a splendid temple at Sigtuna for celebrating the rites of the new faith. He ended his days here and died about 30 B. C. His name, Odin, became the Deity of all Scandinavia in later years. After the death of Odin his authority both regal and pontifical passed to his sons and chiefs, whom he had placed on the neighboring thrones.

His five sons ruled as follows: Heimald was made ruler of Skania, a province of southern Sweden; 2. Niord or Yngve reigned in Sweden; 3. Seming or Snabone reigned in Norway; 4. Balder, viceroy of the Angles at Schleswig-Holstein; 5. Skiold², reigned at Ledra in Zealand and at Jutland. He became the head of an illustrious race of kings called Skioldunger. He reigned about 40 B. C.

Friedlief I,³ was the son and successor of Skiold and was called the first king of Denmark of the Skioldungers. He ruled from 40 B. C. till his death 23 B. C. His sons were: Frode Fredigod, Fridlief II, and Havar.

Frode Fredigod,⁴ (Pacific) succeeded his father, as Frode I, and was king of Denmark at the time of Christ. Ruled from 23 B. C. till A. D. 35. He was a great king and extended his power into Sweden, Germany, Hungary, England and Ireland. So strict was his administration of justice in his own dominions that, if we are to credit the Northern Legends, bags of gold might have been safely exposed on the highways. At his death he was succeeded by his brother.

Fridlief II,⁴ who was king from A. D. 35 to his death A. D. 47. The other brother Havar,⁴ ruled from A. D. 47 till A. D. 59, the date of his death.

Frode II,⁵ born A. D. 1, son of Frode I succeeded to the throne of Denmark A. D. 59 and ruled till his death A. D. 87. His son and successor was,

Vermund,⁶ the Sage who was king from A. D. 87 to A. D. 140; at his death his son, Olaf,⁷ the mild, became king and ruled till his death A. D. 190. His daughter,⁸ married, Dan Mykillati (the splendid) who became king in 190 and ruled for 80 years.

He ruled with great justice and united all the Danish provinces (except Jutland) under one government. Historians agree that he was the founder of greater Denmark and is alleged to have given his name to the new kingdom. He died, A. D. 270 and was succeeded by his son, the heir by his wife, daughter of Olaf the Mild.

Frode III,⁹ who became king, A. D. 270 and died A. D. 310. His son and successor was,

Halfdan I,¹⁰ He made war on Aun, king of Sweden, defeated him in many battles, drove him from his throne and fixed his residence at Upsala. Halfdan died A. D. 324. His son and successor was;

Fridrikf III,¹¹ who ruled till his death, A. D. 348 and was succeeded by his son;

Frode VI,¹⁵ who became king of the united Denmark and ruled till his 407. He had three sons, each of whom ruled as king. They were, Ingild, Halfdan and Frode.

Ingild,¹³ succeeded his father, A. D. 407 and ruled 29 years. At his death he was succeeded by his brother;

Halfdan II,¹³ who ruled till his death, A. D. 457. He had two sons, Roe and Helge. He was succeeded by his brother;

Frode V,¹³ who ruled three years and died, A. D. 460. He was succeeded by the two sons of his brother, King Halfdan II;

Roe,¹⁴ and Helge,¹⁴ who agreed to divide the sovereignty between them,

Roe exchanged his patrimony in the north for the Danish possessions in Northumberland, England where he fixed his residence and conquered several provinces from the Anglo-Saxons.

Helge,¹⁴ invaded Sweden, defeated the king, Adils, plundered the palace at Upsala and carried off the Queen, a Saxon princess, named Yrsa, who became his wife. Their reign ended A. D. 494 and they were succeeded by a son of Roe;

Frode IV,¹⁵ who became king of the united Denmark and ruled till his death A. D. 510. He was succeeded by his cousin, a son of Helge;

Rolf Krake,¹⁵ who ruled till his death, A. D. 522. He died childless and was succeeded by;

Frode VII,¹⁶ or Olf the Sharp Eye, son of Frode VI, who became king, A. D. 522 and died 548. He had two sons, Halfdan and Rorik Slygebånd; The elder succeeded the throne as;

Halfdan III,¹⁷ or Snaile I, and ruled from 548 to 580 A. D. when he died. He was succeeded by his brother;

Rorik Slygebånd,¹⁷ who ruled till his death 588. He was succeeded by his nephew, son of Halfdan III;

Ivar Vidfadme,¹⁸ who became king of Denmark A. D. 588 and of Sweden, 630. He died 647. Ivar married Gothilda by whom he had a daughter Anda Diuphandza, who became the wife of Rorik or Robert, king of Halingard. Their son succeeded his grandfather Ivar as king, A. D. 647. His name was;

Harold Hildetand,²⁰ or Hilditur (Golden Tooth). He died 735, when he was succeeded by his nephew, a son of his sister Asa and her husband, King Randver. His name was;

Sigurd Hring,²¹ or Ring, who became king of Denmark and Sweden, A. D. 735. He married, Queen Alfilda. Their children were; Ragnar Lodbrok and a daughter. Ragnar Lodrok succeeded his father as king of Denmark, A. D. 750 and was also known as Lodrok the Elder or Harry Breetches.

At this point the line of descent leaves the reigning house of Denmark, where it had held sway for near, 800 years.

Eisten,²² (or 23 counting from his mother's side) as king of Frondheim. He married, A. D. 780 and was the son of;

Halfdan,²³ who succeeded his father as king, A. D. 810. His son was:

Eisten Glumru,²⁴ who became king of Frondheim or Thrandia, A. D. 840. His; Daughter,²⁵ was married to Ivar, Jarl or Earl of Upland, A. D. 850. Their son was;

Eisten Glumru,²⁶ or Vars. He was living, A. D. 870. His second son, Sigard was the first Earl of the Orkney Islands, and his third son;

Rogvald,²⁷ was Earl of Moer, A. D. 885. By his first marriage he had four sons, one of whom was, Einar whose line will carry on. Rogvald married, second Hilder, daughter of Rolf Nefio. They had two sons, the younger was, Rollo or Hrolf, who became the first Duke of Normandy, A. D. 912, known as Duke Robert I, and who was the progenitor of Duke William, sixth in line who seized the throne of England, A. D. 1066 and became King William I. (See page 21)

Enlr,²⁸ son of Rogvald succeeded his uncle, Sigard as Earl of the Orkneys. He in turn was succeeded by his son;

Torfdur,²⁹ as Earl, A. D. 942. He was succeeded by his son;

Lodver,³⁰ His son was;

Sigurd,³¹ who succeeded as Earl of the Orkneys. He married Thora, daughter of King Malcolm of Scotland. Their fourth son was;

Thorfin,³² the Dane, born about the year 1000 A. D. He succeeded his father as Jarl or Earl of the Island of Orkney, which was held as fief under the kings of Denmark. Thorfin visited America as is proven by the Dighton Writing Rock Inscription in the Taunton River, Massachusetts, which has been translated: "Thorfin with one hundred fifty Norse sea-faring men took possession of this land." Later in his life Thorfin established himself in England and was known as Thorkill of Richmondshire, Baron, Lord of Tanfield. Domesday Book records him as living, 1070—1080, in North Riding in Yorkshire, including Wharleton, Washington. He had two sons, Bodin born 1040 and Bardolf, born 1045.

Bardolf,³³ married the heiress Hanselyn (or Alselyn) of this Baronial family. They had two sons, Akarls, born 1080 and Henry, born 1090; Akarls,³⁴ had nine sons. The eldest was;

Bondo Fil Akarls,³⁵ born 1122, Lord of Wessyngton juxta Ravenswath.

Job and his family were still living near Cumberland Gap, in Lee County, at the beginning of the War of 1812, when one of his sons enlisted and went into army service from there in the spring of 1813. (See son George's letter, page 102.) At the close of the War of 1812, the great Northwest Territory was opened to settlement. Job and his family followed its allurments. The date when they moved from Lee County is not positively known, but most probable, sometime about 1816 or '17. It is also probable, that he may have moved by way of Knox County, Kentucky, where his brother Pierce Dant lived and may have located and lived a short while somewhere in that state. A traditional story of an incident that happened to him, in Kentucky, adds credence to this supposition.

The story is: One day while concealed at a salt lick watching for a deer, a large panther sprang upon him. His gun was rendered use-

1694, Mildred, 1696. His widow married George Gale. Their son;

Augustine Washington,⁵⁰ born, 1694, married, April 20, 1715, Jane, daughter of Caleb Butler of Westmoreland County. They lived at Bridges Creek. Their children were; Butler, b. 1716, died young; Laurence, b. 1718; Augustine, b. 1720; Jane, b. 1722; died January 17, 1735. His wife, Jane, died November 24, 1728. He married second, Mary, daughter of Col. William Ball of Lancaster County. Their children were; GEORGE, born February 11, (old style) February 22, (new style) 1732; Betty, b. June 20, 1733; Samuel, b. November 16, 1734; John Augustine, b. January 13, 1736; Charles, b. May 2, 1738; Mildred, d. young. He died, April 12, 1743. She died, August 25, 1789; aged 82 years. The son;

George Washington,⁵¹ born February 22, 1732, was commander-in-chief of the Colonial Armies during the American Revolution, and afterward first President of the United States. His history is too well known for further comment in this work.

His half brother, Maj. Laurence and brothers, John Augustine, Col. Samuel and Col. Charles, married and had families. Many of their descendants are now living. Jane, his half sister, married her cousin William Washington and had, four sons and one daughter.

Thus we have carried that line well past the time of the birth of Jane Washington, mother of Eleanor Mullings, wife of the forefather Job Hamblen, in order to show her line as clearly as possible. Hence to trace that line farther is deemed unnecessary for the purpose of this work.

less, but seizing his hunting knife he fought the beast desperately and succeeded in killing it. He was badly wounded in the fight and by great effort succeeded in reaching his place of abode.

He is known to have been living in Jennings County, Indiana, August, 1818, at which date he made application for pension for services during the Revolutionary War. Not long after this date, another and a more promising part of the state, to the north, was acquired of the Indians and opened to settlers.

Within this locality, next record of Job and his family is had, when in the spring of 1821, they were residents of the Haw Patch section of Bartholomew County, Indiana. Little doubt, there is, that they moved there with the hope of acquiring some of the valuable land in the new settlement for a permanent home.

Site near Clifford, Indiana, where Job Hamblen settled, 1821,
The two men mark the spot where the residence is said to have stood.

Their settlement was made southwest of and near where the town of Clifford was later located, and about five miles northeast of Columbus. Job's residence was built near the center of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 31, township 10, north of range 6, east, and about three-quarters of a mile east of Flat Rock River. The land for miles in every direction is level and was at that time heavily timbered. Besides building a house, considerable land was cleared and put into cultivation, although his financial condition would not permit that he buy the homestead from the U. S. Government at the time.

The following fac-simile of a letter written by his own hand after he had lived about two and a half years at this location speaks for itself and reveals many things of interest relative to this forefather who was born, reared and lived a lifetime under the disadvantages of the American frontiersman. (Attention is directed to its splendid composition, almost perfect spelling and few grammatical errors.

Bartholomew, ^{County} State of Indiana, Dec 10th 1841
 Dear son I once more take the opportunity to inform you & your family that I am well at the time but your mother is sick and all your Brothers is Sick & your sister is reasonably well Except Milly she was sick the last I heard of her but hoping the lines may find you and all your family well I have never received but one letter from you since I have been in this state and I think that you are in it 1841 but I have written to you frequently as I am always desirous to hear from you and would be most happy to see you I did intend to come and see you this fall but sickness has delayed so in our land that it has been inconsistent but we would all be very happy if you would think it worth while to come and see us your Brothers and sister is all living, mean me but Milly and we are looking for her daily they are all married only Polly and she is at home yet we have had the sick part time this season & ever saw which makes us all have a notion of leaving this part of the country but where we shall go I am not sure

tain and we would be glad if you would come and see us before we move your Uncle and their family, as it will be the last I heard of the which has not been seen since I wish you to write every opportunity either by the mail or any other opportunity, I think you will have a chance by the way of this wish I think will be its house a near Neighbour of mine and no doubt but much of a Gentleman and we wish you to let us know how many Children you have, and how well you are doing for none of us but very much of an doing well this season and all your Mother and sister, ~~with~~ without Exception wishes to be remembered to you and all your family and would be more than glad to see you all. I have nothing more of importance to write to you at present but I remain your affectionate father Will Heath

To John Hamblen, John Hamblen

It had long been an unwritten law of the frontier, that when a settler picked out a piece of land, built his cabin on it and showed intentions of making it his home and paying the government for it as soon as he was financially able, no one else should be allowed to buy it and settle on it. This law was often enforced by the other settlers by the use of harsh means so effectively that the squatter, as he was called, was quite often protected in holding his home.

There was also a hope that he might acquire land through some of the land grants that were made by the U. S. Government to soldiers. A rejected claim of this kind is to be found on record at Washington, D. C. Rejection possibly due to the fact that his services were performed in the Virginia State Militia and not in the regular Colonial Line.

The hope of buying his homestead was soon blasted for one day a man came and notified him that he had entered or bought the land that he was holding and that he would be expected to move off soon. The old gentleman, Job, was much wroth that he should lose his home in this manner, contrary to the frontiersman's belief of his rights. He took down his trusted rifle and made an effort to shoot the intruder but was prevented by members of his family. Later reconciliation was made by the man giving a horse and some other articles in exchange for the improvements that he had made upon the land and he agreed to move off.

The date of this transaction is not known, but it seems probable that he continued to live in the locality for some time afterward. The above letter states that he was contemplating moving to another locality, November, 1823. However, he did not move till the year 1825, when record is had that he, his wife, Eleanor, his son, Eliakim, and his family moved to what was then the western edge of Bartholomew County, about sixteen miles northwest of Columbus.

This locality lay over the divide separating the waters of White River and that of the Salt Creek country. Little or no settlement had been made over this divide and the settler Job was again in a wild country. The Indians had only just moved away. Large wild animals, the bear, panther and deer still roamed the woods. The country was very hilly, but beautiful fertile valleys lay between the hills.

It was in one of these valleys that he again chose a homestead by selecting two eighty-acre tracts, one the west half of the southwest quarter of section thirty, township 10, range four east, and the other the east half of the southeast quarter of section 25, township 10, range three east.

The range line between the two eighties was the western line of Bartholomew County. West of this line lay an "unorganized territory" which included all this locality.

On the north forty in section 30, he built his residence, a one-roomed cabin constructed of logs with the customary large fireplace with stick and mud chimney. Near his house ran a good sized creek of clear water, a prong of the Salt Creek system, which for many years bore the name, Hamblen Creek. From the foot of the high hill across the creek from the house flowed a spring of cool, clear water that supplied the family wants during the hot summer time.

His finances did not permit him to enter or buy this land from the government, so he was again forced to depend upon the squatter law of the frontier to hold his land till such a time as he might be able to purchase it outright. However, that time never came, but good fortune permitted him to retain his home at this place the remainder of his life.

His financial affairs for a space of some years are made known from a record found among the court proceedings holden at Columbus, September 12, 1827, a copy from which follows:

"Pleas and proceedings before which the Hon. John Pence and Nathan Davis, Associate Judges of the Bartholomew Circuit Court, of Bartholomew County, State of Indiana, at the September Term, A. D. 1827, thereof begun and held and continued at the Courthouse in the Town of Columbus, Indiana.

Bartholomew Circuit Court,

September Term 1827.

Fifth Judicial Circuit of the State of Indiana.

"On the 12th day of September, 1827, personally appeared in open Court, being a Court of Record in the Fifth Judicial Circuit of the State of Indiana, Job Hamblen, resident of said (County) aged between sixty-six and sixty-seven years, who first being duly sworn according to law, doth on his oath make the following declaration in order to obtain the pensions made by the Acts of Congress of the 18th of March, 1818, and the 1st of May, 1820.

That he, the said Job Hamblen enlisted for the term of two years, in Charlotte County, in the State of Virginia, some time in the fall of 1779, in the command of Captain John Tabbs of the First Virginia Reg. (iment), commanded by Colonel Charles Daffey (Dabney), in the Virginia State Line on the Continental Establishment.

That he continued to serve in said corpse until the month of March, 1782, when he was discharged from the service at Portsmouth, in the State of Virginia, that he REDY RE relinquished every claim to a pension whatever, except the present.

That his name has been placed on the Pension List, that the number of his pension certificate is 4725, and that he never before exhibited a schedule of his property, because he has lived in a new county, inconvenient to Courts and has made many attempts without success to procure the aid of some person to instruct him how to do it under the acts of Congress, passed since in pursuance of the Act of the 1st of May, 1820.

I do solemnly swear that I was a citizen of the United States on the 18th, day of March, 1818, and that I have not since that time, by gift, sale or in any other way disposed of my property or any part thereof with intent thereby so to diminish it so as to bring myself within the provisions of an "Act

"That since the first of March, 1818, the following changes have been made in my property; one sorrel mare died in 1821 or 1822; one calf and sixteen head of hogs were sold by virtue of an execution issued in favor of Aaron Cox against me, which execution was issued on the first day of January, 1823, and a sorrel horse by virtue of an execution in favor of the same, issued on the 12th day of February, 1823. Both from the office of Benjamin Crow, a Justice of the Peace of Bartholomew County. The certificate of the Constable who sold the property is here-with copied:

"I do hereby certify that I was acting Constable for Bartholomew County in the year 1823, and that I sold the property of Job Hamblen, on an execution in favor of Aaron Cox, dated the 1st day of January, 1823; two cows, a calf and sixteen head of hogs, and in an execution in favor of the same against the same, dated the 12th of February, 1823, one sorrel horse, which property was sold on a judgement for $23.00 and costs and interest from the 2nd day of January, 1822;

"This debt was contracted for bacon for my family to live on. One more horse died in the year 1823 or 24, since which time I have had no horse beast.

I received since the 18th day of March 1818, $173.00, as heir at law to my son George Hamblen, who was killed at the Battle of Mackinaw. This (money) was all expended in paying Physicians Bills and buying articles to live on and maintain a sick family, as my family was much distressed by settling in the woods and very sickly for one year. I have been literally reduced to nothing and have made no sales for money or property since the 18th of March, 1818, nor any disposition of property other than above stated.

I have seven children, being four sons and three daughters, whose names are: John, Uriah, William, Eliakim, Eleanor, Sally and Polly. They are all married, have families and gone from me. My son, William, has 40 or 50 acres of very poor land. None of the rest have any land and are very poor otherwise and have families to maintain and if it were not for the sustenance they offer me, indigent as they are, I should suffer. My wife is still living and is sixty-four years old and is helpless and can do but little.

I am a carpenter by trade, but from a fall I received from a horse, since the 18th of March, 1818, I am very badly ruptured and otherwise disabled from laboring at my trade or working at any other business to procure a living.

To get some idea of some of the circumstances that prevailed around this pioneer home during the declining years of this forefather, Job, such as had influence within his home, meager as it must of necessity have been, it is well to consider the fortunes and misfortunes of some of his now married sons and daughters.

Eliakim, the youngest son, moved into the locality at the same time as his father and built a house a few hundred yards up the creek, north, from his father's home, and on the same 40-acre tract. He was a stout, industrious and ambitious young man with a wife and several children, but, no doubt, contributed much in many ways toward the welfare of his parents.

Uriah, his second son, who had lived near his father in the Haw Patch country, lost his wife by death, leaving him with six young children. Record is had that part or probably all of them found a home with their grandparents for a time, at least till after the second marriage of their father.

His daughter, Sarah, or Sally, had married and had been deserted by her husband, leaving her with two small children. They, with their mother, found a home within the parental homestead for several years before the father's death.

The daughter, Eleanor, who married David Lock, is known to have lived at her father's home while her husband was searching for a location and erecting a home in the State of Illinois. A son was born to her, December 10, 1825. She had four other children at this time. She and her husband moved to Illinois in 1830.

These circumstances developed into other conditions, at least a few years before the old gentleman's death. Witness to this is well revealed by the following letter, written to his son, John Hamblen, who had never moved his residence from Lee County, Virginia:

Columbus, Bartholomew County, Indiana.

December 27th, 1830

Dear son:—

We embrace this opportunity to inform you and your family that we are all enjoying reasonable good health at this time and we confidently hope these well designed lines may find you and yours enjoying the same good health.

David Lock and his family has moved to Adams County, State of Illenoy. Mr. Benjamin Gillum went with him to that country and has since returned. He saw in his travels, Uriah Hamblen and family and was at his house. They were all well.

He saw Uriah Lock, and his wife was sick with Fever and Ague. He expected to move up to Adams County near where David Lock has moved. Mr. Gillum was also at son William Hamblen's and they were all well and doing well.

We have looked for you for a long time to land here with your family. But we are compelled reluctantly to give out all hopes of seeing you this season. Crops are light with us this season in consequence of the drouth.

Your sister Sally and her children are well and living with us at this time. We wish to send our compliments to all your family and to David. We have hunted a Wax figure to accomodate him with on his arrival in this section of the country.

My wife wishes to be remembered to you and Mary and all her grandchildren. I wish you to write as soon as possible and let us know what prevented you from moving out this season.

Please remember us all to James Campbell* and family and all enquiring friends. I have nothing more of importance to write, But permit me to subscribe with sentiments of due respect and affection till death.†

To Mr. John Hamblen.

Little more is known about conditions surrounding this home from the date of the above letter till the time of Job's death, three years later, except that the widowed daughter, Sally, continued to reside there during all the time. Eliakim, the son, continued to reside on the place and conducted its improvement in the way of clearing and fencing land for crops and cultivating the same, assisted, no doubt, by the aged father such as his strength would permit.

The fertile valley furnished all the nice level land that could be cleared during the time and crops grew in abundance from the virgin soil, once it was in cultivation.

* Note 28. James Campbell was a brother of Mary, wife of his (Job's) son John. (See page 95.)

† Note 29. This letter, writer unknown, the original preserved by the writer (author) is a fine specimen of old time penmanship. Job himself probably was incapacitated for writing by this time and employed some visiting friend to write for him. May have been Benjamin Gillum

Heavy timber covered all the land, which required much labor to remove and it is presumed that only a few acres were cleared and added to the farm-land each year. Indian corn was the chief crop grown, for it supplied bread and hominy. Beans, potatoes and other vegetables grew profusely. The sugar maple trees furnished syrup and sugar. Wild fruits were plentiful, such as the crabapple, plum, blackberry, raspberry, grapes and other small berries.

Swine were easily raised on the mast, that is, nuts and acorns from the oak, hickory, beech and other trees, which fell over the woods in super abundance. This furnished meat plentifully, once a start of hogs was secured. Wild meat such as deer and once in a while a bear, wild turkey and other smaller game was to be had at almost all times. Thus, food was plentiful, could the settler hold out for a few months and get established.

Clothing and shoes were the hardest to procure, since in that day it was almost all made on the hand spinning wheel and loom. Flax furnished the first cloth, while the sheep for wool, came slowly. Buckskin from the deer's hide furnished many articles of attire for the early settler.

Furnishings for the household use were meager. A large iron pot and a skillet or oven with long handle and legs in addition to a coffee pot supplied the cooking utensils which were used in the fire place. The pot furnished all the boiled food, while in the skillet was fried the meat and potatoes, and the bread was baked, mostly "dodger" fashion, by covering the skillet-over with an iron lid and heaping on it live coals from the fire.*

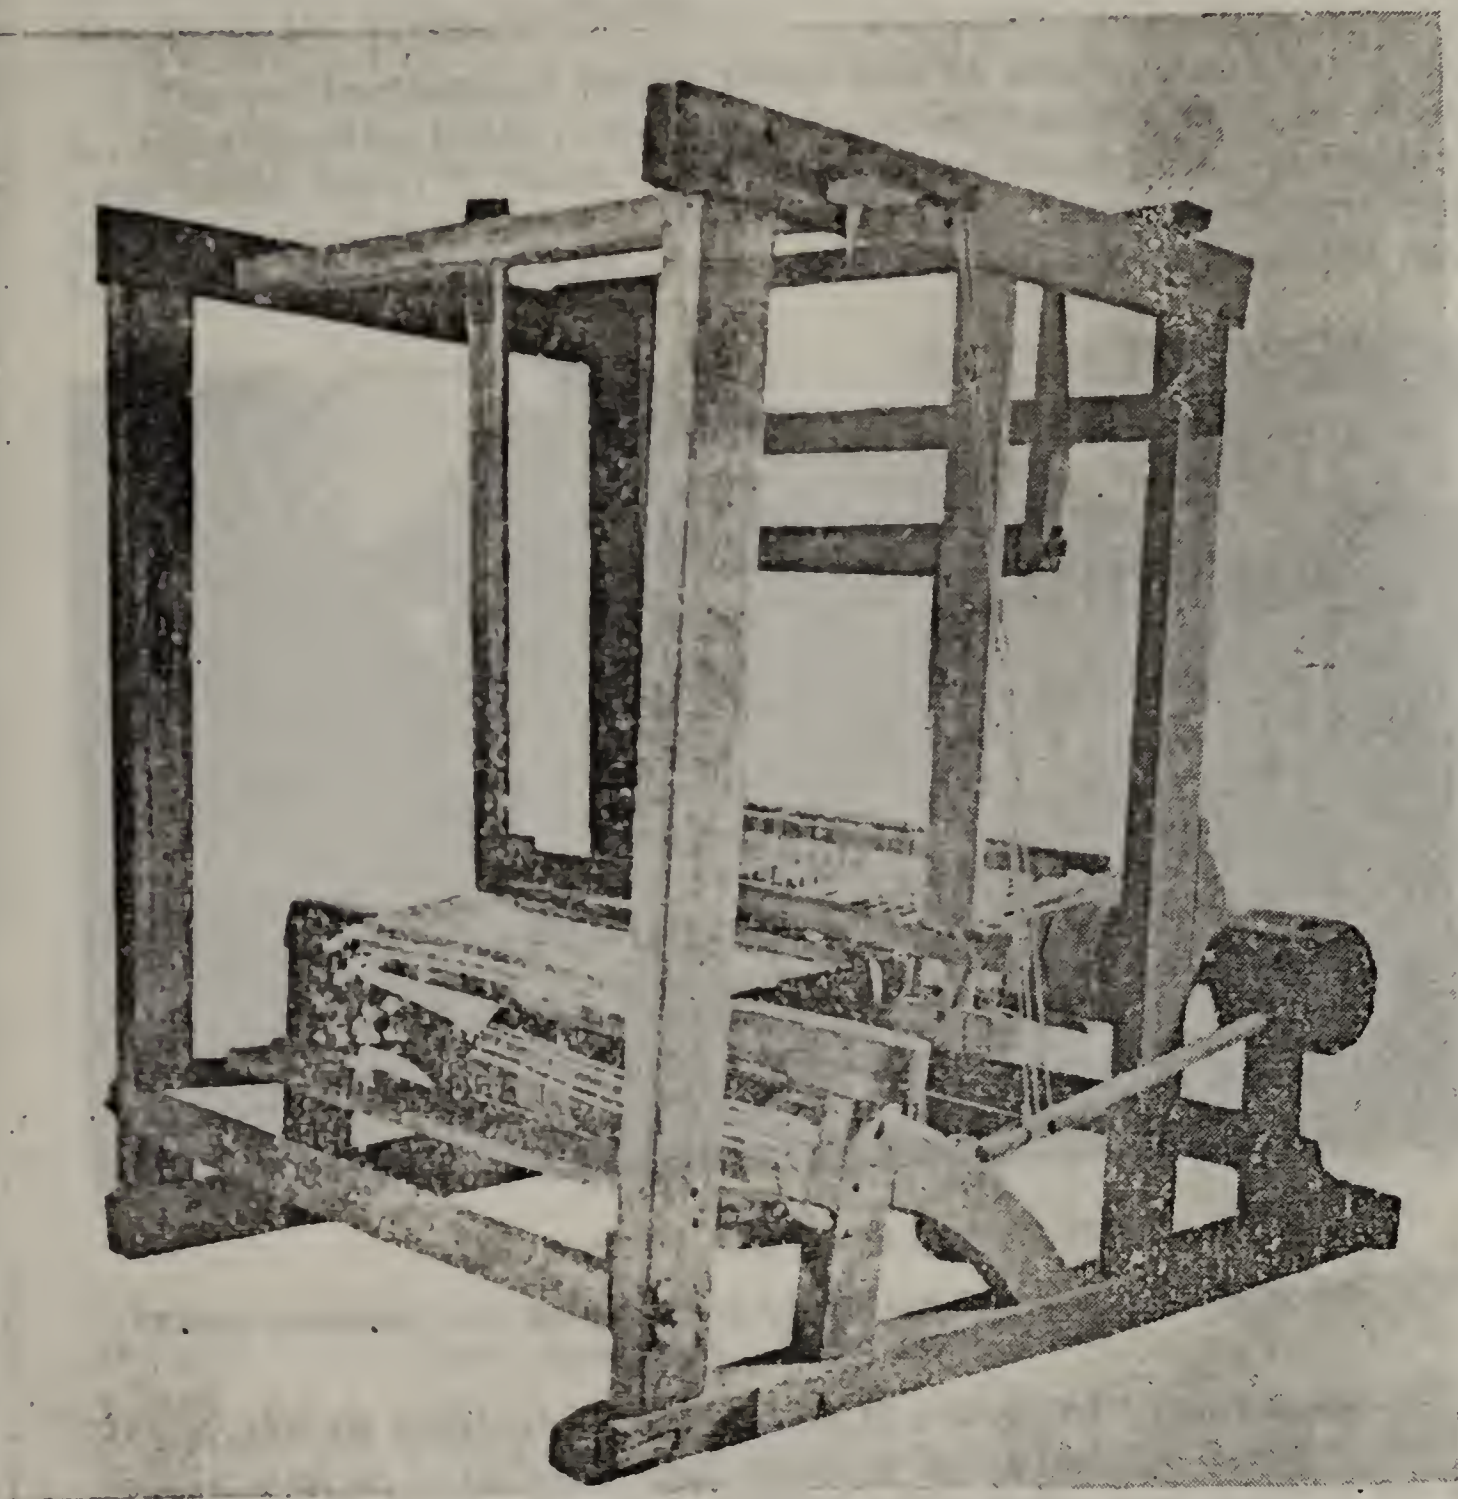

In such a home as Job and Eleanor Hamblen first established, no doubt the first table was made from boards split from a native tree. Stools or benches were made by making holes in split timbers and legs or round saplings drove into them.

Beds were made by rails fastened to the log walls with split slats to support the linen tick which at first may have been filled with dried leaves or wild grass. Covers were probably brought from the east country. The father, Job, being a carpenter, possibly his home was soon supplied with better furniture than most pioneer homes of that day.

Another accomplishment that this ancestor possessed, and one that has been handed down to many individuals through all branches of his descendants, was the fact that he made music on the VIOLIN. His efforts may have added cheer to the home's fireside at many a gloomy time and upon many a long stormy evening.

Although he lived only eight years after establishing his last home in this new location, it is quite likely that much improvement was added to these first conditions.

* The writer remarks: "Mighty fine bread." He has seen it baked and has eaten of it. (See Job's personal property list, page 72.)

WEAVER'S LOOM BUILT BY JCB HAMBLIN

Probably built after he moved to Indiana, 1818, owned at the time the photo was taken, 1922 by his great-granddaughter, Amanda Ellen Taylor, who had a rag carpet in process of weaving. She then lived on his original homestead in Hamblin Township, Brown County, Indiana. For many years it had been used for weaving flax, cotton and woolen cloth, from which the family clothing was made. In later years, it was used for weaving rag carpet cloth. Was owned and used by Eleanor and Catherine Taylor, grand-daughters of Job, up to the time of their deaths, 1920, and 1921, respectively.

ANTIQUE CHAIR, 18th CENTURY

The chair is made of dark wood, possibly mahogany, and features a high, curved back with a decorative crest. The seat is upholstered in a dark fabric. The chair is shown in a three-quarter view, highlighting its elegant design and craftsmanship. The background is a plain, light-colored wall, which emphasizes the chair's form and details.

Dating from March, 1818, he drew a pension from the United States Government at the rate of $96.00 per year. Although this amount of money seems small, yet, in that day, it would supply many comforts in a humble home like Jeb's. Ingenuity and labor added to the natural resources of the locality, no doubt soon made wonderful changes in the living conditions.

The old gentleman's health failed and he was confined to his bed for many months. finally, on the 1st day of September, 1833, he passed away at the age of 71 years. His burial place was selected on the land he had claimed for his home, about 150 yards distant, westward from his residence, at the foot of a high, towering hill which faces the east.

THE SALLY TAYLOR RESIDENCE

Where Grandmother Eleanor Hamblen lived her last few years and died.
Built about 1845. Photo made 1919.

After his death the homestead still remained in possession of the family, and it is believed that Eliakim remained on it for a year or two at least. About the year 1833 or '34, Sally was married to William N. Taylor, who in the year 1836, bought the homestead and secured a patent from the United States.

About the same time, Eliakim entered land in another section, a couple miles to the west and moved to it. When the new county of Brown was erected in 1836, the son, Eliakim, who was prominent in public affairs of the community, offered the suggestion that the new township, embracing the northeast part of the county be named, "HAMBLEN TOWNSHIP," in honor of the father, Job. Revolutionary war soldier and first settler of the locality and the several families of the name then residing in that section of the county. The County Commissioners adopted the suggestion and it was so named on July 25, 1836.

The mother, Eleanor, continued to make her home with her daughter, Sally Taylor, and her husband. She was granted a pension as a soldier's widow by the U. S. Government, dating from March 4, 1848, at the rate of $80.00 per annum. However, on October 28, 1848, she was granted a five years back pay, dating from March 4, 1836, to March 4, 1841, amounting to $400.00. She continued to draw this pension as long as she lived, which, no doubt, supplied her with many comforts during her declining years.

On September 9, 1852, she passed away at the age of 87 years. She was laid in a final resting place beside that of her husband in the soil of a homestead that she had wandered so far to realize and through so many hardships and privations to reach.

To this little cemetery, the graves of a few other relatives were later added, including those of her faithful daughter, Sally, and her husband, William Norman Taylor. The spot was enclosed by a nice fence and tenderly kept in good order by other descendants of the Taylor family.

At the grave of the father, Job, was placed a small native stone bearing the inscription: "J. Hamblen, died Sept. 1, 1833." The grave of the mother, Eleanor, was marked, also by a small stone but bore no inscription.

Thus the graves remained till the year 1911, when the writer procured from the U. S. Government, a regulation soldier's marble headstone which was placed at the grave of the forefather, Job. On the day that this marker was set it was conceived that if the descendants of these foreparents, who by this time numbered many hundreds, were properly informed, that contribution would be forthcoming sufficient to place a marker to their memory that would not only permanently mark their last resting place, but would inscribe their deeds of patriotism and pioneer adventure in a manner that would make their burial place a historic landmark of the community.

In August, 1920, the Hamblen Family Association was formed at Franklin, Indiana, by enrollment to membership of about fifty descendants of this pioneer couple, Job and Eleanor Hamblen. A reunion of the membership, which continued to grow larger was held each succeeding year. At these meetings a move to undertake the building of a suitable monument to the memory of these foreparents was discussed.

Finally, at one of these meetings held at Garfield Park, Indianapolis, Indiana, on July 31, 1927, a resolution was adopted that a Soliciting Committee, consisting of 100, be appointed to raise not less than $1,000.00 to build a monument at their burial place.

A Building Committee consisting of Job Hamblen, of Azalia, William H. and Gilbert R. Hamblen of Indianapolis, and A. Porter Hamblen of Franklin, was elected. On February 22, 1928, Job Hamblen died and his brother, Zach Hamblen of Swayzee, Ind., was elected in his place. The committees did their work well and on November 1, 1928, the granite cap stone was set in place.

The history of the United States, as a whole, is a story of the growth of a nation from a small colony of English settlers to a great republic. The story begins with the first English settlers in 1607, who came to the Virginia coast. They were followed by other colonies, and by 1776 the thirteen original colonies had declared their independence from Great Britain. The American Revolution was a struggle for freedom and self-government. The new nation was founded on the principles of liberty and justice for all. The Constitution was written in 1787, and it has since been the foundation of the United States government. The story of the United States is a story of progress and achievement. It is a story of a nation that has grown from a small colony to a great power. It is a story of a nation that has fought for freedom and justice, and that has always stood for the rights of all people.

JOB AND ELEANOR HAMBLLEN MONUMENT

It may be described by saying that the base, which is made of a mixture of portland cement, sand and gravel, is set at a depth of thirty inches below the grade line, with dimentions of nine by twelve feet.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of a people who have grown from a small colony of settlers to a great nation. It is a story of the struggles and triumphs of a people who have fought for freedom and justice. The story begins with the first settlers who came to the New World in search of a better life. They found a land of opportunity, but also a land of hardship. They fought for their survival, and in the process, they created a new society. The story continues with the growth of the colonies, the struggle for independence, and the formation of the United States. It is a story of a people who have never stopped growing, and who continue to shape the future of the world.

By a series of steps it rises to a height of five feet. In a niche at the bottom of the top terrace was placed a copper box, ten by five inches, made and contributed by Marion F. Hamblen⁶. The niche was filled with mortar, leaving the box buried deep in a solid block of concrete.

In this box was placed twenty-seven typewritten pages, giving a short history of Job Hamblen and his wife, Eleanor, together with a brief history of their descendants down to the time of deposit. A list giving the name of each person and the amount that each contributed toward the erection of the monument.

In addition, other articles were placed in the box as follows: copy by-laws and minutes of meetings of the Hamblen Family Association, several photographs of Hamblen descendants, copies of music and songs composed by members of the family, printed articles, works of A. Porter Hamblen, a few grains of Indian corn that grew near the cemetery, representative coins of United States money, including 5 ¢ pieces, contributed as "good luck" tokens, by Samuel Beaty of Franklin, Indiana, negro tinner who sealed the copper box, and copies of current local newspapers giving articles relating to the forefather, Job, and the monument.

Seated on the top step of the base, size 2x4 feet, stands the Vermont light gray granite tablet, size 3x4 feet, twelve inches thick, weight 2,500 pounds. The whole is placed at the foot of the two graves and facing west, on the tablet, the following inscription is cut, sand-blasted letters (cut in), large and elegant, the work of Charles Oscar Bennett, artisan of Franklin, Indiana, and set in place November 1, 1928.

It was elected that the annual meeting of the Hamblen Family Association be held in a grove near the cemetery where the monument was erected, that a suitable program be arranged and that the monument be unveiled and dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

Accordingly, it was arranged and on July 23, 1929, there gathered in the grove, friends and relatives, variously estimated at from four to six hundred persons. The day was intensely hot which prevented many that would otherwise have attended. A basket dinner was arranged on tables 120 feet in length.

Following the repast the silence was broken by a cannon salute fired from the hill above. Boy Scout Bugler Dale Graham sounded "Reveille" from his bugle and President A. Porter Hamblen invited the crowd to occupy seats arranged around a stand arranged for the speakers.

"The national anthem, "America" was sung, Sargeant W. J. Balser, leading. Chaplin of the day, Rev. F. M. Huckleberry, Civil War veteran, delivered a brilliant invocation. President Hamblen announced the purpose of the gathering in a few well chosen words and then introduced the Honorable Henry E. White, of Franklin, Ind., as "Our friend and counselor and your former servant, Prosecuting Attorney of the Judicial district" who spoke as follows:—

"Mr. Chairman, descendants and relatives of Job Hamblen, ladies and gentlemen:—

We have met today to celebrate the achievements of your noted pioneer ancestor. To the descendants and friends of the Hamblen Family this should be, and is, a most inspiring occasion. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should meet here and in honor of the splendid work of Job Hamblen, and again as a family and those who have benefitted from his labors of the past, should thus meet to dedicate this beautiful monument which has been erected to commemorate his labors so well begun and so victoriously completed.

And as beneficiaries of his life and labors, it is altogether proper that we should dedicate and consecrate our lives to carrying on and perpetuating the noble qualities of his life.

Your chairman, A. Porter Hamblen, and the committee having in charge the program for this occasion and the hundreds of descendants and relatives here assembled are doing a splendid and commendable piece of work in erecting this monument and dedicating it as a directing signal to the coming generations of the splendid and efficient services with which this great pioneer and his good wife have so richly blessed us.

Especially is the committee to be congratulated in securing the services of the real speaker of this occasion. He is known personally and most favorably to all of us. He has been among us before and we find that he is really one of us. He has served us for a number of years in the United States House of Representatives, not only efficiently, but to the satisfaction of his constituency of which we are a part.

He is interested in us and we in him. He needs no introduction to this audience and we are glad indeed to have with us the Honorable Harry C. Canfield, Congressman from the Fourth Indiana Congressional District, who will now talk to you in keeping with the spirit of the occasion." (Applause.)

Mr. Canfield said in part:

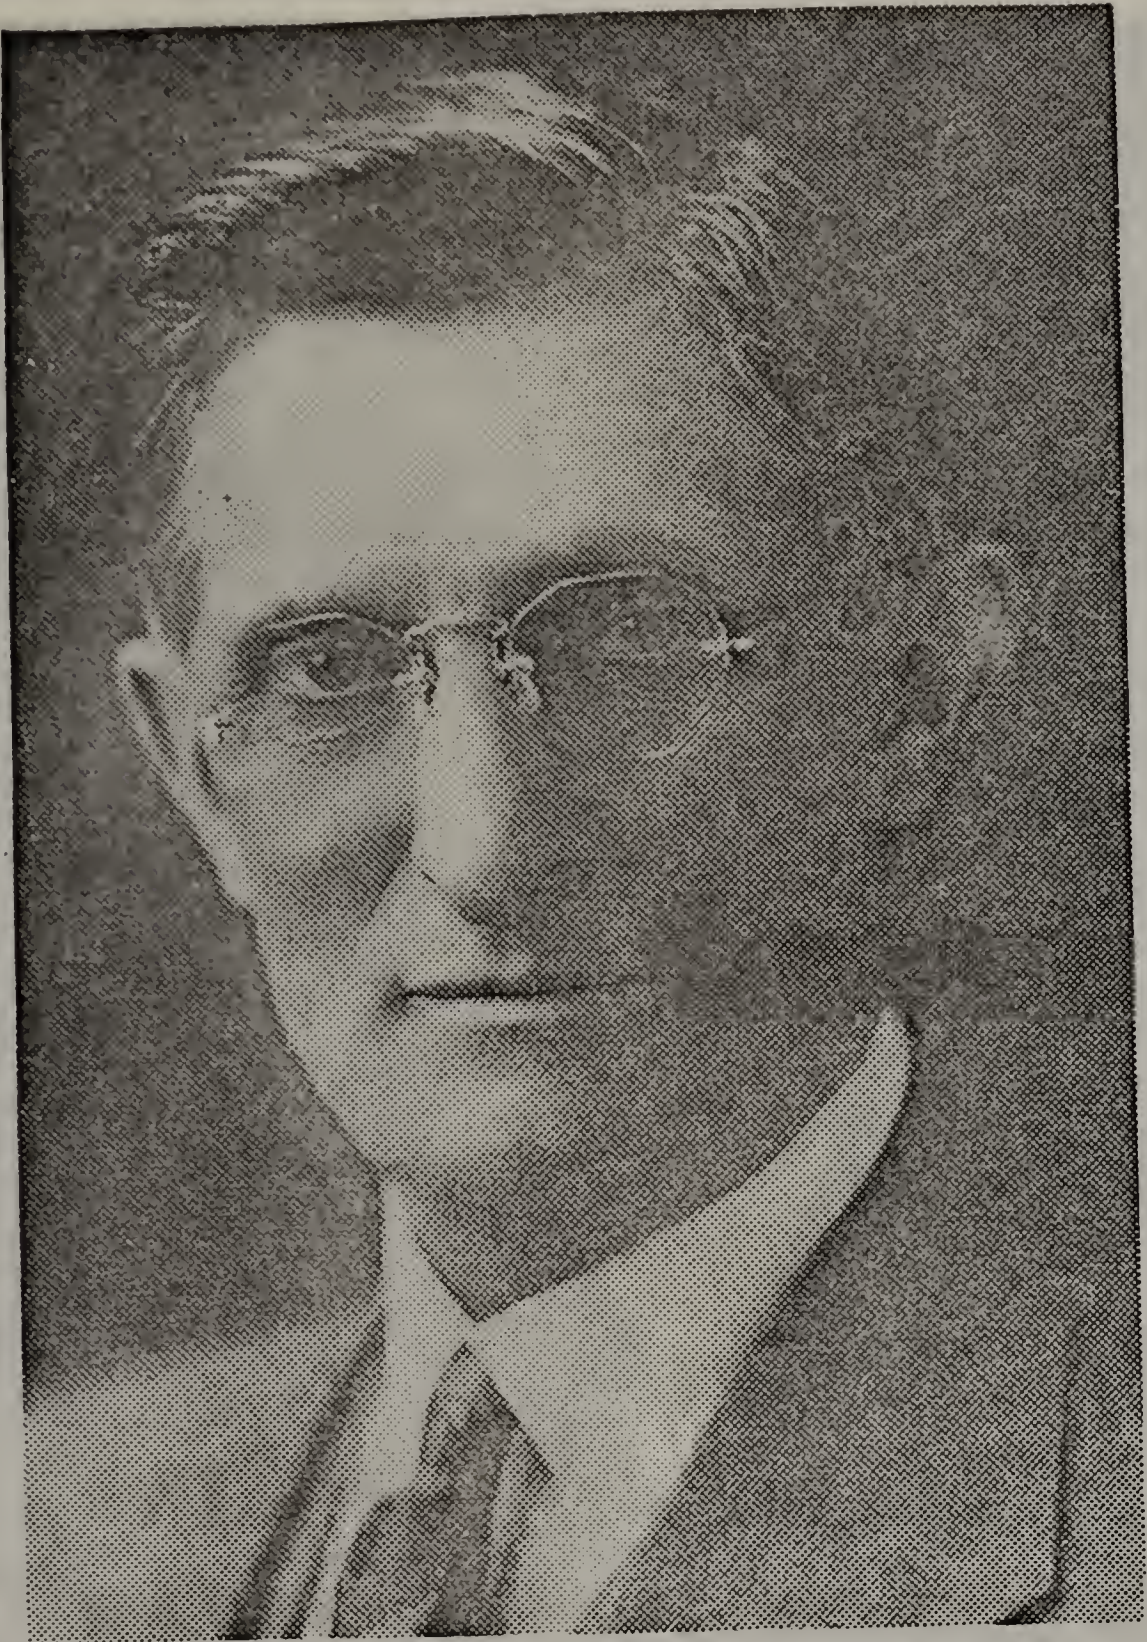

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Those of you who have assembled here as descendants of Job Hamblen, and these of you who are here as their neighbors and friends, have every reason to be proud that you are privileged to come here to honor one whom during his stay on this earth proved by his actions that it was his purpose to be of service to his God, his country and his fellow man.

Job Hamblen was born in 1762. While a mere boy, at the age of 17, in March, 1779, he enlisted as a private in the Revolutionary Army, in Charlotte County, Virginia, in the Company of Captain John Tabbs and the Regiment of Colonel Charles Dabney. History records that he served in the Revolutionary Army for three years and was discharged on March 10, 1782, at Portsmouth, Virginia.

My friends, joining the Revolutionary Army at the time that Job Hamblen joined it, meant much more than it does to join our great American Army at the present time. Today, we have an army that is well equipped, well clothed and well fed, in fact, we have an army that has no superior anywhere on the globe, but when Job Hamblen joined the Revolutionary Army in 1779, he joined an army that was poorly equipped, poorly clothed and at all times faced starvation.

And remember, he joined this army to fight the well equipped, well clothed and well fed English Army, which was composed (mostly) of Hessian soldiers, hired by the King of England to put down, what

HON. HENRY E. WHITE

Honorable Henry E. White was born, 1872, in Johnson County, Indiana. Taught school for several years. Studied law under Judge Fremont Miller of Franklin. Admitted to the bar of Johnson Circuit Court at Franklin, where he became a leading attorney. Elected and served as Prosecuting Attorney of Eighth Judicial District, Brown and Johnson Counties, for a term of six years, January 1, 1907, to January 1, 1913. Appointed postmaster of the presidential office, Franklin, Indiana, June, 1936, for a term of four years. Prior to this he had served as a most successful Chairman of Johnson County Democratic Central Committee. A special friend and counselor of many members of the Hamblen Family for many years. (See his speech made at the dedication of the Job Hamblen Monument, page 84.)

HONORABLE HENRY C. CLARK

Representative

Member United States Congress 1875 to 1881. His name is on the list of members of the United States Congress in 1875 and 1876.

he called a rebellion of the colonists. It was men like Job Hamblen who said, 'We will have no taxation without representation!' And it was men like him who were willing to make the sacrifice, go through the hardships and even give their lives, if need be, in order that the rights of the colonists might prevail.

It was men like Job Hamblen that made it possible for the Declaration of Independence to be written, the Revolutionary War to be won, and the Constitution of the United States framed, which guarantees to you and me, justice, liberty and a citizenship that is the envy of all the world.

According to the records of the Pension Department in Washington, Job Hamblen fought in the battles of Jamestown, Piney Ford and other skirmishes, and finally at the taking of Cornwallis at Yorktown. He is supposed to have stood in the line and watched those immortal Generals, Washington, La Fayette, Wayne, Stuben, Knox and all the rest, accept the surrender of (Lord) Cornwallis on that greatest of all days in the world's history, for it was then, that American Independence was assured. Peace was later on arranged and England was compelled to acknowledge that the colonists had gained their freedom* * *

When Job Hamblen came to this part of the country, conditions were quite different from what they are today. Roads had not been built at that time, automobiles had not been heard of, and even the horse and buggy came at a later date. At that time the oxen and the ox-cart were in use and with no roads, traveling from one part of the country was not an easy matter.

We as citizens in this part of our great country, owe much to the men and women who had the courage to leave their homes in the older lands and brave all the dangers and uncertainties of the wilderness to establish homes for their families. The people who pushed their way through the trackless forests never thought of how their story would read when their deeds were recorded many years afterward. They thought only of the establishment of their homes. * * * *

The lives of the men in those early days were hard, but that of the women was even harder. In the wooded country the first dwellings were small and invariably made of logs, usually with only one door and one window. The trees of the forest were felled only far enough back so that they were not likely to come down on the house. This rude dwelling place the family called home, and in most cases it was a real home, in all that the word means.

Here the wife spent practically all the rest of her life. Here she cooked, sewed, mended, washed and played nurse and doctor to her group of growing children. While the work of the husband carried him into new surroundings and associations which served to vary the monotony. The wife could very seldom travel the long distance to the neighbors or the still more distant village. * * * In many parts of the country wild animals were a source of constant worry and alarm. A child never ventured into the woods in search of the cattle and was unduly delayed but the mother's heart beat with fear that some wild animal had sprung upon him, and often it proved true. * * * There is a very generally mistaken notion about the life and motives of the early settlers. When we read some eulogy of them we would be tempted to believe that they had some high patriotic motive in mind when they moved into the wilderness, while as a matter of fact, the real thought in the minds of nearly all was to benefit the condition of themselves and families.

The descendants of such men as Job Hamblen and Eleanor Hamblen, * * * have every reason to feel greatly indebted to their ancestors, for, no matter what they had in mind or what their reasons might have been for coming to this part of our country, the effect has been to transform the forest wilderness of this part of the country into a garden which today blossoms like the rose.

As descendants of this great man and woman you should never cease to sound their praises, for it was through the efforts of our ancestors joined as they were with others who had for their purpose in life to render a service to their God, their country, and their fellow men, a great empire has been made possible, and you and I are privileged to enjoy the greatest citizenship on earth.

While we are all interested, or at least should be, in the history of our forefathers, I feel that the question we should give more consideration to than anything else is our posterity. What kind of an example are we setting for our children, and our children's children that will come after us? Are we by our every day acts, making it possible for those that come after us to be able to point with pride to the fact that they are our descendants?

My friends, have you ever asked yourself this question: 'Do I measure up to the standards of our forefathers?' * * * The real definition of life is: 'A Mission!' And our mission here on earth should be to be of service to our fellow men, and to be of service to those with whom we come in contact and through our efforts make this a better world, a better place in which to live. When we do this, regardless of our station in life, we have been a success and will be living a life, in which those that come after us will be proud. * * * *

The great moralists of the world have agreed that the life that brings the greatest amount of satisfaction, is a life of service to humanity. This is best expressed by Him who said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." * * * *

We often hear it said that a man's highest duty is to his wife and children. Yet, it is considered a still higher service when he leaves his home for the defense of his country in war; or when he, as a member of a life saving crew, puts off, at the risk of death, to save the families of strangers.

The true beauty of service consists of not what we do, and the worth of service lies not in the means, but in the manner that it is expressed. No matter how little we are capable of doing so long as we do our best * * * * Our children in the coming generation will have important work to do, and it will demand their best efforts.

Their activities will require patience, courage, prayer and thought. They will be instruments for the expression of the will of God, and they should be prepared to meet the responsibilities it will be necessary for them to assume. Our children should be impressed with the fact that life has a purpose as the world has a destiny. Work should be the lot of every one who desires to fulfill his mission here on earth. Life is something more than a scramble for wealth or an opportunity for ease, to be a true man.

No matter whether he is in the garb of the laborer, or dressed in robes of purple and fine linen, if he is filling his mission he will be a worker. The man whose only object in life is to have an easy time, is to be pitted. There is no person to be despised more than one who has inherited wealth and spends his life in just trying to find some way to 'pass off the time.'

Wherever we go we find suffering humanity, crying for help. In the great cities where poverty and crime go hand in hand, there is need for service. In all stations of life, we find the discouraged and forlorn, the forsaken and the outcast. Very often a kind word, a friendly smile or a genial hand-shake will lift the load from such a person and change his life entirely. * * * *

Our ancestors have seen America transferred from a great wilderness, with only a few settlements along the eastern part, to a thinking, well populated country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from a poor struggling nation to the richest, most intelligent and most powerful nation in the world. As patriotic citizens, they have measured up to the standard. * * * * *

We should never forget that we possess a double heritage that was made possible by the toil and hardships of our ancestry* and that it is our duty to preserve (it) through our posterity. As American citizens, we should ever remember that our American flag stands for freedom, justice and equality. Honor is woven in every thread of its fabric. It has a glorious history, and as has been said: 'It has been stormed at with shot and shell in many battles, and through all the smoke and strife, it has led the brave to victory.'

My friends, this has been made possible by such ancestors as Job Hamblen, and those that worked and fought with him. As American citizens, as fathers and mothers, and as leaders in our several parts of the country, let us pray to God that we may do our duty, and through our efforts and the efforts of those that may come after us, see that our flag continues to represent freedom, justice and equality.

* Note 31. Mr. Canfield's forefathers were among the early settlers of Dearborn County, Indiana. His father was Elias, whose wife was Martha Givan. was a farmer and lived in Manchester Township, Dearborn County. His grandfather was John Canfield, who, in the latter part of his life, lived at Moore's Hill, Dearborn County, where he was Justice of the Peace for several years. His great grandfather was Edwin Canfield, also of Dearborn County. Harry C. Canfield taught school and attended college at Moore's Hill. Later became a bookkeeper for The Western Furniture Company at Batesville, Ripley County, and married while there, Kathryn Elder, of Wilmington, Indiana. He advanced rapidly and soon became a partner in the business. Was nominated, 1922, as a Democrat and in November elected to Congress from the Fourth Indiana District. Served in that body with distinction till March 4, 1933, at which time was a member of the highly important Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Yes, may we do our part towards making the famous toast of Benjamin Franklin come true. It is said that when our country was in its infancy that Benjamin Franklin was invited to attend a banquet one evening at which there were a number of diplomats representing other countries, all of whom were called upon before our own Benjamin Franklin, each of them in their toast referring to the emblem of their country. When Franklin was called upon, he arose and said: "The lily will fade and its leaves decay, the rose from its stalk will sever, the thistle and shamrock will pass away, but these stars shall shine forever."

My friends, let us, as loyal American citizens, proud of our ancestry, proud of our country and proud of our name, do everything within our power to keep our country what it is today and thereby make it possible for those stars and stripes to be the emblem of the greatest country on the earth forever, and may the names of men like Job Hamblen stand out as a shining light to all of us when we are called upon to render a service to our God, our country and our fellowmen. I thank you!"

When Mr. Canfield had finished speaking, Bugler Graham sounded the call, "Assembly." Sargeant Zody swung his troopers into position at the edge of the grove with Boy Scout color bearers in their front. Daughters of the American Revolution and United States Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary formed next in line and were succeeded by other organizations in the following order:

Grand Army of the Republic, Wadsworth Post, Franklin, Ind., United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Veterans of the World War, with a troop of Boy Scouts of America bringing up the rear. At the word of command, "Forward, March!" the procession proceeded to the monument some fifty yards distant.

President A. Porter Hamblen stepped upon the monument's base and adjusted the veil, a large United States flag that covered the face of the monument. Mable Edith Hamblen-Mayfield held the unveiling cord. Boy Scouts assembled at the right and the rifle squad halted at the left.

The veil slowly moved to one side of the monument. The bugle sounded, "To the colors!" Boy Scouts saluted. The troopers lifted their rifles, Sargeant Zody gave command, "Load! Take aim toward heaven! Fire!" Three sharp volleys rang out.

Immediately the firing ceased, the president called to Sargeant Jefferson Balser, veteran of the War with Spain, 1898, master workman in cement masonry, expert foreman during the base construction, and said: "Master Workman Balser, perform the last duties of your vocation!"

Sargeant Balser carefully inspected the masonry of the structure and said: "By the experience that my trade has taught, I pronounce

AT MONUMENT UNVEILING

Betty Jane Mayfield, age three years, 7th generation descendant of Job Hamblen, climbed the monument steps and placed a tiny flag thereon. The crowd cheered; the little child blushed and reached to her granddaddy for protection. Biggest cheer of the day went to this scene.

this structure well built and complete and hope by its strength it will endure far into the future!"

The president called the mechanic who placed the inscription on the granite and interrogated him thus: "Master Mechanic Charles Oscar Bennett, inspect the work of your craft and tell us if it is complete."

After examining the workmanship, Mr. Bennett explained in the following language: "Using as a guide the skill acquired by years of experience, I assure you, Mr. President, that nothing remains undone that would add to the beauty and endurance of this tablet. May it carry its message as long as nations endure!"

From his station at the monument base, the president issued proclamation in these words:

"Daughters of the American revolution, descendants of the patriots who fought and suffered to establish a nation free and grand, such as the world has never before afforded, what have you to offer to honor this patriot who was one of the select few? Joseph Hart Chapter, Columbus, Indiana, you may speak first."

Mrs. Stella Barnhill-McCullough, in response, stepped upon the monument's pedestal, placed a national flag, turned and addressed the audience thus: "We place this flag as a token of honor and respect for our forefather and patriot, who bore arms to help establish our nation, the United States of America!"

Representing General Jacob Brown Chapter, D. A. R. of Brownstown, Indiana, Mrs. Golda Dale Hamblen-Eudaly placed a national flag and a bundle of flowers on the base of the monument and said:

"Noble Ancestor, in your honor to your memory I place the flag on this monument that your effort in arms helped to give to us. And again to your memory I place these blossoms, symbolic of our belief that this nation whose birth you fought to sustain is the flower of all nations! In helping to dedicate this stone to your memory, as a daughter, I wish to dedicate the remainder of my life to the task of upholding the principals of government for which you fought, and I promise to use my opportunity as a member of the teaching profession to foster and promote the ideals of government that you helped to give us!"

Regent Georgia Duckworth-Schlosser of Alexander Hamilton Chapter, D. A. R. of Franklin, Indiana, responded when the president issued further invitation in these words: "Alexander Hamilton Chapter, Franklin, Indiana, what offering have you?"

Mrs. Schlosser stepped upon the altar of honor bearing a handsome wreath, an emblem of victory, gift of Alexander Hamilton Chapter, and addressed those assembled in eloquent language as follows:

"As a representative of Alexander Hamilton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, I place this wreath upon the tomb of this Revolutionary War soldier to do honor to him who stood in battle line when our nation's birth was consummated, and to honor the many others who fought, suffered and died to bring about the liberties that we, their descendants, now enjoy.

Our heroes have enriched the American spirit, they have written new meanings and new glories into the name of our country, the United States of America. As citizens, let us be true to all these tender relationships, that we may not fail to perpetuate the memories of our ancestors. We want to install patriotism in our younger generations. We look forward with confidence in them to carry our banner aloft to higher achievements and to nobler ideas in honoring our ancestors.

It is gatherings such as this today, planned by this splendid family to do honor to their ancestors that fosters a fine spirit of patriotism. World peace of tomorrow will come only as we build the foundations of that peace today."

At this period, Betty Jane Mayfield, age three years, seventh generation descendant, climbed the monument steps to her grand-daddy (president of the Association) and placed a tiny flag among the many others. (The crowd cheered and the little child not understanding the commotion hung her head and looked to her grandparent for protection.)

This scene was followed by the placing of a beautiful bouquet by Mrs. Marie C. Williams former National President of the United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary, representing Major Harold C. Magrew Camp of Indianapolis, Indiana. She spoke a befitting response but her exact words were not obtained.

The president, addressing the many veterans of the numerous national conflicts, gathered around the tomb of this senior soldier of all, in these words said: "Veterans! many are you who have defended this nation by arms since its existence was established, years and years ago, by the immortal Washington and his loyal troopers, one of whom now sleeps the eternal sleep at our feet, we would, if you so choose, accept a salute or decoration of your choosing at this time."

Response was made when Phil W. Brown, followed by Henry C. Strickler, veterans of the lamented War Between the States, representing Wadsworth Post No. 127, Franklin, Indiana, marched to the front of the monument, bearing the flag that they had so well defended and Veteran Brown said:

"As a representative of the Grand Army of the Republic, I deposit this United States flag on this monument in memory of Job Hamblen, who was a Revolutionary War soldier, who gave his service in those early days to make this a free and a united nation. May his memory be enshrined in the hearts of a grateful people!"

Making further invitation the president said: "Veterans of the War with the Kingdom of Spain, what will you offer to honor a veteran who soldiered to assist in setting up liberty's most famous standard?"

Gilbert R. Hamblen, descendant of Pierce Dant Hamblen, brother of Job and also a soldier of the American Revolution, and his comrad, William E. Milnor, veterans of the Spanish War, responded and veteran Hamblen said:

"I lay these flowers on this tomb in the name of Major Harold C. Magrew Camp, United Spanish War Veterans of Indianapolis. This is our tribute to one who helped to give us our national freedom and our flag. The flowers will fade, but not so the memory of the man who sleeps beneath them! May the good that he did and the glorious heritage that he bequeathed unto us ever be fresh in our memories and may we ever be worthy of our bequest from him!"

The president called again: "Veterans of Foreign Wars, what is your contribution?"

Veteran Samuel Tabor representing Edinburg, (Indiana), Camp Veterans of Foreign Wars, placed a bouquet of flowers and said: "I deposit this token of reverence as one who helped carry the flag of liberty, born under the arms of soldiers like he who sleeps here, into other lands to other oppressed people."

Making further invitation the president said: "American Legion, veterans of the terrible war against Germany, soldiers when tyranny waged its most gigantic struggle to break the bonds of liberty, born from the struggles of such men as he who sleeps here and whose names occupy prominence upon the rolls of fame, what is your contribution?"

Many veterans of the late World War were present but owing to a misarrangement they were not prepared to make a response, for which the management accepts responsibility.

Again the president spoke and said: "Boy Scouts of America, in your hands these preceding veterans will soon place the destinies of the nation, founded by men such as the one we honor today, and defended by them when danger threatened! What is your contribution upon this altar of honor?"

Representing Troop 1, of Franklin, Indiana, Scout Richard Weaver responded by placing a large white bouquet on the monument and said: "We place a bundle of God's great handiwork as a token of peace and honor, with the promise to promote peace with honor among all men and all nations from this day and forever!"

Another call from the president was issued: "United States of America! Great nation of the world! Would you say a word or do a deed of reverence for a humble soldier who served well when the struggle of infancy was upon your existence?"

Honorable Harry C. Canfield, Representative in the United States Congress from the Fourth Indiana Congressional District, of Batesville, Indiana, stepped to the monument base and in response said:

"Honor we always do! Honor we always will for those who defended our institution when danger threatened! This flag is our supreme emblem of decoration for those who so served!"

Extending a call to all ladies of the audience the president said: "Ladies! Angels of the earth! What do you offer as the most supreme emblem of love and honor that mortal hands can bestow?"

The answer came: "Flowers and more flowers!" A goodly number came forward and placed bouquets and bundles of flowers around the monument.

Speaking to the junior officer of the Association, the president called out in these words: "Vice-President Zach Hamblen, proclaim this monument duly received and unveiled!"

The Vice-President of the Hamblen Family Association, Zach Hamblen, took a station at the base of the monument and proclaimed: "By authority vested in me, I this day proclaim this monument duly received and unveiled, open for inspection by the whole wide world!"

Calling to the Sheriff of Brown Co. (Indiana) the president said: "High Sheriff Sol Wilkerson, we present this shrine of liberty's cause to the people of Brown County as a relic that they may cherish!"

Sheriff Wilkerson came forward and with dignity said: "Hamblen friends, in the name of the people of Brown County, I accept this memorial as a prized gift, and promise it reverence and protection under the law as our gratitude!"

At a signal from the president, Sargeant Zody again swung the rifle squad into position. Their arms rattled at the words of command and fired that salute, the last honors of a soldier to his departed comrad: "Bang! Bang! Bang!"

The bugler sounded "taps", the cannon boomed and the hills echoed the last honors to the hero and pioneer who shall sleep on till that great day, when the tomb shall burst and the sea give up its dead!

When the unveiling ceremonies were concluded the monument presented a beautiful sight, bearing its array of flags, flowers and wreaths. In behalf of the descendants of the venerable forefather, Job, A. Porter Hamblen, president of the Hamblen Family Association, thanked all those who assisted with the ceremonies and also those who made manifest their interest by their presence.

He stood and viewed their numbers, fully realizing that men like Job Hamblen had not lived in vain. The silent evidence thus presented showed clearly that their deeds were yet remembered, even though a century had passed since they had passed off their stage of action.

[8] ELIZABETH HAMBLÉN,² (George.¹) Little is known about this daughter. She married a man whose name was Powers, a brother of Jesse Powers, husband of her sister, Percy, according to traditional information furnished by Eleanor Taylor as coming from her grandmother Eleanor Mullings-Hamblen with whom she lived till she was age seventeen.

A story by grandmother Eleanor was that one day when Elizabeth went to a spring near her home that her small child in some way during her absence was so badly burned that its death resulted. At the time of its birth this accident had been foretold by her brother Benjamin.

Through other authentic source it is learned that she was living, 1833, not far from her brother, Pierce Dant Hamblen, on Big Poplar Creek, Knox County, Kentucky. Her name at that time appears as Elizabeth Tye. Hence she may have married a second husband. Nothing further has been learned about her or her family.

[9] PERCY HAMBLEN,² (George.¹) Little has been learned about this daughter either. She was married to Jesse Powers, a brother of her sister Elizabeth's husband. She, along with her husband, Jesse, and several others of her father's family probably lived in southeastern Kentucky.

According to a story related by Eleanor Taylor as remembered by her from her grandmother, Eleanor Hamblen, this sister suffered the loss of two or her little boys under circumstances similar to those as related by Mr. Canfield in his speech at the dedication of grandfather Job's monument, about the constant fear of the frontier mother that her children might be carried away by Indians or wild animals or wonder into the woods, get lost and die from exposure.

One of the little boys was lost on "butchering day." This little fellow was, child-like, "helping". He took a small piggin (a kind of water pail) and started to the creek or spring to bring some water. All hands being busy, he was not missed for a while. Finally search was started and his tracks followed down the path to where they were seen no more. Indians were suspected of carrying him away. The father consulted a magician and was told by her that he would meet his lost son some day at a muster day drill grounds, but he would not know him. However, he was not heard of any more.

The second little boy wandered off into the woods. Neighbors and family searched for three or four days with the understanding that the one that should find him would fire a gun as a signal of success. Finally he was found lying on a pile of brush where he had frozen to death. The ravens had picked out the child's eyes.

No other information about this family has been found.

Gilbert's informant relates that Vincent married his wife secretly, a neighbor's daughter, of Knox County. The children, Vincent Sims and Harriot, were born before the marriage was revealed by the young mother. The two parent families were at "outs" was the reason for the secret marriage. A second marriage was required by her parents and after that the couple was permitted to live together, but the two children were not recognized by her parents, who required that they be put in other hands to be reared.

Other children were born to them, two of whose names were:

36. John,

37. William.

These were known to Mr. Bastie, who also knew of Vincent. John had been a sailor but later resided in Knox County. William was a preacher, resided in Knox County and visited his cousin Dant in Claiborn County, Tennessee, where Mr. Bastie saw him.

[17] PETER HAMBLEN,³ (Pierce Dant.² George.¹) born, 1797 in western Virginia. Positive proof of the identity of this man has not been entirely satisfactorily established, but it is most probable that he is identical with the Peter Hamblin who established a homestead on the Cumberland River, one mile north of London Ford in Whitley County, Kentucky, where they spent their lives and reared their family.

His wife was Susan Tye, born 1801. Died, 1885. He died, 1868. Their children were:

38. Asa,

39. George,

40. Ivan,

41. John,

45.* Henry Clay, born, June 10, 1840.

46. Eliza.

42. Andrew,

43. Sarah,

44. Caroline,

The sons, Asa, George, Ivan and Andrew, and daughter, Caroline moved to Mercer County, Missouri, about 1860. George, Andrew and Ivan were said to have served in the Union Army during the Civil War. Asa later moved to Illinois.

[20] JOHN MULLINS HAMBLEN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, September 3, 1783, probably in Pittsylvania County, Virginia. Married, 1807, in Lee County, Virginia. Mary Campbell, Born, February 12, 1783, daughter of James and (——— Gibbs) Campbell.*

daughter Harriot (m. Woods), in Peoria, Illinois, and the other through Howard (Hamblen) Bastie of Claiborne County, Tennessee, whose information is considered quite reliable. (See page 118 for Bastie.)

* Note 33a. This branch of the Campbell family was founded in America by John Campbell of Scotch-Irish descent. The Scotch-Irish were Scotch, who to escape the turmoils of their native land during the Seventh Century, emigrated to the north of Ireland.

For a year or two after their marriage they lived in Claiborne County, Tennessee. From there they moved to a location on the west part of her father's lands, where they established a home on a small creek, which afterward took the name of Hamblen Creek.

She inherited one hundred acres of her father's land where their home was and on which they continued to live. Later, he entered from the state, a five-acre tract of land which adjoined to where they lived. On this he built a double log residence where they resided till the time of his death.

The Campbells were a powerful Scotch Highland clan who made themselves notorious, 1692, by the Massacre of Glencoe. (See Scotch and English history.)

This first John Campbell,¹ came from Ireland in 1726, with five or six grown sons and settled, first in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, later 1738, moved to Augusta County, Virginia, with his sons, Patrick, Robert and David.

Patrick,² was the father, (some accounts say grandfather) of General William Campbell of Revolutionary War fame. David Campbell,² in the year 1765, sent his son, John, accompanied by Dr. Walker, to the waters of the Holston River in Washington County, Va., where he purchased, for himself and father, from John Buchanan, a tract of 740 acres, called "Royal Oaks," first surveyed in 1747.

Soon afterward John,³ with his brother, Arthur, and a sister, came out and settled at "Royal Oaks". In 1769, David, the father, with his wife, four other sons and four other daughters came out and settled at the same place. The names of his entire eleven children were: Arthur, John, born, 1745, James, David, Robert, Patrick, Mary, Margaret Martha, Sarah and Ann.

Colonel Arthur Campbell,³ born, 1743, in Augusta County, Virginia, moved about 1770, on the Holston River, Washington County. During the Revolution, he was a leader in defense of the frontier. Later, he moved to Cumberland Gap and settled where Middlesboro, Kentucky, now stands and where he died, 1811. Another account also says that he moved to Yellow Creek, Knox County, Kentucky, and died there, 1812. Record of two of his sons is had, James H. and John B.

Colonel James H. Campbell,⁴ was appointed captain, July 6, 1812, in 24th U. S. Infantry. Under Col. W. P. Anderson at Detroit, November 18, 1812. Later, 1814, served as recruiting officer at Knoxville, Nashville and New Orleans. Present at Mobile, Camp Russell, February to April. Commanding regiment May and June, 1815.⁵ Died July 1, 1815.

Colonel John B. Campbell was appointed a lieutenant colonel in the 19th U. S. Infantry, March 14, 1812, from Kentucky. In April, he was ordered to Winchester. His regiment was consolidated with the 17th Infantry, May 12, 1814. Ordered to join General Ripley's Brigade with his detachment, June 16, 1814, at Buffalo, New York. He was promoted to Colonel and placed in command of the 11th Infantry and was present at Buffalo, July 1, 1814. Wounded in action, July 5, at the Battle of Chippewa Plains, Canada, and died from that cause, August 28, 1814.

James Campbell,⁵ born about 1747, married Gibbs, and settled a homestead of 600 acres, eighteen miles east of Cumberland Gap, in Lee County,

For a year or two after the war, the Bureau of the American People, founded in 1917, was the only organization in the United States that was not a part of the war effort. It was a small, independent organization, and it was not until 1918 that it was absorbed into the American People's Bureau.

When the War of 1812 was on he enlisted, December 27, 1813 as a corporal in Captain John Clark's Company of Infantry of the 63rd Regiment, Virginia Militia, attached to 4th Regiment, Virginia Militia. His service in this company ended April 11, 1814.

He re-enlisted, August 30, 1814, as Orderly Sergeant in Captain Josiah Penick's Company of Light Infantry attached to 7th Regiment (Gray's) Virginia Militia. Muster roll dated Camp Carter's, November 4, 1814, shows "promoted to Ensign, November 1, 1814, and transferred."

This transfer November 1, was to Captain Isaac Tinsley's Company, 8th Regiment (Wall's) Virginia Militia. He was discharged from the service February 23, 1815.

Virginia, two miles southeast of the town of Rose Hill. He was a prosperous farmer. Resided at this place till his death, a short while prior to 1824. Land grant records of Virginia, (Grant Book No. 42) show that he also entered another tract of 100 acres on Lick Branch of Martin's Creek, November 12, 1798. He was buried on his homestead where others of his descendants were buried later and which became known as the Campbell Cemetery.

His children, all whose names learned: John, James, Joseph and Mary.

John Campbell,⁴ moved to Arkansas. Nothing learned of his family.

James Campbell,⁴ married ——— Gibson. Their children were: David Calvin, Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth, Minerva, Ruth and Ella. He inherited his father's homestead and part of his land near Rose Hill and lived on it till his death, about the year 1855 or '56. Was buried in the Campbell Cemetery.

Mary Campbell,⁴ born February 26, 1783, married John Mullins Hamblen about the year 1807. (See their history above.)

David Calvin Campbell,⁵ born March 3, 1817, on the old Campbell homestead in Lee County, part of which he inherited and lived on it during his lifetime. Married Ann Wyrick. Operated a water-mill in connection with his farm. Died May 28, 1894. Buried in the Campbell Cemetery, nearby.

His children were: David, Bradley, James, Watie, Ellen, Wyman Taylor, John, Margaret, Mary, Dudley and Ruth. Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth and Ella never married.

Minerva Campbell,⁵ married Hugh Poll. Ruth Campbell,⁵ married Elisha Hobbs. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army. Participated in the siege of Cumberland Gap. They inherited and resided on the original James Campbell home site and died there. Their children were: James, Luther, Ezekial, Winefred (Winnie), Margaret and Martha.

Wyman Taylor Campbell,⁶ born 1850, married Sarah Widner. Resided on part of the old Campbell homestead. Died 1922. Their children were: David F., Robert, Jonathan, Elijah, James and Frances Ruth.

John Campbell,⁶ born November 9, 1852. Married Harriett Adline Hobbs. Resided on part of the old Campbell homestead. Living 1832. Their children were: Sarah, Grover, Robert, Ollie, Charles, Elza and Ralph.

Frances Ruth Campbell,⁷ born October 2, 1870. Married October 6, 1893, Donald Tolley, born Sept. 27, 1869, in North Carolina. They resided near Rose Hill till 1921, when they moved to near Hamilton, Ohio. Their children

His name appears on the army rolls as John M. A. Hamblen. It has not been learned what the 'A' stood for in his name for it does not appear in any of the other family records. In 1928 the U. S. Government supplied one of its regular soldier's headstones which was placed at his grave. The inscription on it reads: "Ensign John M. A. Hamblen, 8, Va. Mil. War of 1812."

A story of the latter part of his army service was often related by his son, David R., grandfather of the writer, telling his remembrance of seeing his mother, Mary, making a new suit of homemade jeans clothes for him to wear and other preparations for his departure into the expected army field service.

When the day came for him to join his company he mounted a fine young horse of his own and road away, leaving his wife and five small children behind him. After a day or two on the march, he began to feel the responsibility of the mother and children that he had left behind. While in camp he came across a man and bantered him to give him his horse if he would take his place in the ranks as a substitute. The man accepted his offer and he was released and returned home. In a few days the news of General Andrew Jackson's victory at New Orleans, came and the armistice with Great Britain had ended the war. He was much chagrined by the unlucky turn of affairs involving the loss of his best horse.

He was a shoemaker by trade and did an extensive business for the public. He was assisted in this work by his sons, James, David and William, after they were old enough, who also became proficient workmen under his tutorage. This work was carried on in addition to clearing and working the farmland.

He was a man of unusual build and stature, his height was around six feet, weight about 200 pounds. It was said the measurement from tip to tip of his shoulders was thirty-six inches and that he could span his ankle with his thumb and finger. He played the violin quite well.

It is known that he made a trip into the newly opened for settlement, County of Bartholomew, Indiana, in the year 1821, but failed, for some reason, to make land entry. His name appears on the roll of the first taxpayers made in Bartholomew County, made in May, 1821. He was assessed with two horses and one poll. Taxed to pay $1.25.

He happened to a serious accident alone about 1825 to 1830. While riding an unruly horse, the horse suddenly pitched over a high cliff

They owned and lived on the original Campbell homestead near Rose Hill, Lee County. She died, 1878. Their children: Joseph, Franklin, Sarah and Morgan.

Morgan Ramsey,⁷ born 1875, married Mary Frances Eads, daughter of Harrison Eads. Lived on his father's farm till 1922, when he moved to near Hamilton, Ohio. Their children: Elizabeth May, Winifred Ida, Lee, Paul and George.

Joseph Tolly,⁸ born January 27, 1902, married Elizabeth May Ramsey,⁸ about 1921. They moved, with their parents, to near Hamilton, Ohio

The first of these was the fact that the harbor was not a natural harbor, but a man-made one. It was created by the construction of a breakwater and a pier, which were built by the government in 1870. The harbor was then used for the storage of coal and other goods, and it became a very important part of the city's economy.

A large number of ships were built in the harbor, and many of them were used for the transport of goods. The harbor was also used for the storage of coal and other goods, and it became a very important part of the city's economy.

When the harbor was first built, it was a very small harbor. It was only a few acres in size, and it was used for the storage of coal and other goods. But as the city grew, the harbor became larger and larger. It was expanded many times, and it became one of the largest harbors in the world. Today, the harbor is a very important part of the city's economy, and it is used for the storage of coal and other goods.

and in the fall one of his legs was badly injured. From this he never fully recovered, but remained crippled in the injured leg the remainder of his life and used a crutch and a cane when he walked.

The war between the states brought great grief and hardship to his old age. The armies of both sides surged through the country near his home, for the reason that the noted Cumberland Gap was a strategic point to be contested for. Heavy fighting took place there. All his relatives and most of his friends and neighbors espoused the Southern Cause and every available man and resource was given to the defense of their beloved Lee County, with the result that many lost their lives and their property of every kind was devastated.

Three of his sons, James, David and William had moved to Northern States prior to the war. Only one son, George, and two sons-in-law, Absalom Lankford and David Ramsey, remained to enter the conflict. The latter two died in the service.

His health failed to where he was confined to his bed during the fall of 1866 and the winter following. Although a firm believer, he had not united with any church. During his last illness a Christian minister, Rev. Samuel Shelby, held services at his residence and he joined the church. He desired to be baptized in Hamblen Creek, which flowed past his house, but he was never able to undertake the ordeal and passed away without it, most probable during the latter part of March, 1867. The exact day was never recorded, but Philip M. Ball, a neighbor, assisted at his funeral related, related, 1919, that, "He died about the time that the leaves put out." He was buried in the Campbell Cemetery near his home.*

His wife, Mary continued to reside on the farm till the fall of 1869, when she sold the homestead to William Morley for $500.00 and in October, following, moved, with her daughter, Sarah Lankford, and son, George, to Brown County, Indiana. From this time she made her home with her son, David, and part of the time with her daughter, Sarah, at whose home, (on N.W. N.W. 1/4, Sect. 1, Tp. 9, R. 3, Hamblen Township) she died, March 12, 1873, aged ninety years. Was buried in the Taggart Cemetery, near their home.

[21] URIAH HAMBLÉN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, May 3, 1787, in western Virginia. Little is known of his early life. Married his first wife, Keziah (Mason?) in Virginia, where it is likely that their five children were born. It is most probable that he lived in Lee County and moved from there to Scott County, Indiana, about 1818. After living there a short time, not more than a year or two his wife Keziah died. Their children were:

57.* Pleasant,	Born, June	1, 1808.

60.* Mary, (Polly)	" probably,	1814.

After the death of their mother, some or possibly all of these children lived with his father and mother, Job and Eleanor Hamblen, in Brown County, Indiana, till after his second marriage, which was to Clarissa Casey, daughter of Abraham P. Casey.*

May, 1821, his name is found registered on the first list of taxpayers made out for Bartholomew County, Indiana. He was assessed as having one silver watch and one poll. Taxes 75 cents. Other Bartholomew County records show that: On December 22, 1822, Samuel Chappel made him a deed to the east half of the southeast quarter of section 4, Township 10, Range 6 east, 80 acres, price $350.00.

On September 22, 1823, he made a deed to the above land to John Hamblen. On February 25, 1824, he made a deed, signed by himself and wife Clarissa Hamblen, for the same land to Joseph McKinney. He received $100.00 in cash and McKinney cancelled a debt of $200.00 which Uriah owed him. A note was made in the deed, stating that John Hamblen, mentioned in the deed of September 22, 1823, was his (Uriah's) 'infant' son and that no payment was made. He probably made his home, with his family, on this land.

On August 13, 1823, he was appointed Supervisor of a road, north side of Section 16, hence to Shelby County line. This was three miles of road that ran past his land. He may have moved to western Bartholomew (now Brown) County, after selling this land, for he was

* Note 35. Abraham P. Casey served as a Sargeant in the forces of General Francis Marion during the Revolutionary War. He moved to Kentucky, among the early settlers of that state. There is no record of his ever living in Indiana. Record is that he settled in Jefferson County, Illinois, in 1818, where he resided the remainder of his life. One son Major Franklin Casey, became one of the large land owners and a leading citizen of Jefferson County. There are many Casey descendants in that county at this time. Many of them are and have been among the leading citizens of that county.

mentioned by his father as yet living in the locality in September, 1827. Not long after this he moved to Jefferson County, Illinois, and was living there, December, 1830. (See Job Hamblen letter page 74.)

It is known that he was a good stone mason, from the fact that a fine specimen of his work was still standing (1926) as a stone chimney built to the elegant old time country residence of his brother-in-law, Major Franklin Casey in Jefferson County.

He continued to live the remainder of his life in this locality and it is probable that he worked at his trade and engaged in farming till his death, which was caused by smallpox about the year 1863. However, some of his descendants give his death date as late as 1870. It is likely that he played the violin. Politics, Democrat.

Children by his second wife were:

[22] GEORGE HAMBLLEN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, May 23, 1789, in southwest Virginia, where he was reared. Was living with his parents in Lee County at the beginning of the War of 1812.

Tradition among the older members of the family recited that a muster day was held somewhere near Cumberland Gap to enlist recruits for army service in the war. George expressed his desire to attend. His mother protested his doing so, reminding him that should he enlist he would be handicapped from the fact that he had suffered from a lame hip caused by a disease, "White swelling", he had once had.

However, he disregarded this admonition and went to the muster. Captain James H. Campbell was in charge of the recruiting and seems to have had funds to be used as a bounty to encourage enlistments. Captain Campbell engaged George to assist him to induce enlistments, using language like this: "George, you are acquainted with many of the boys that I am not, so you take this money and get as many to enlist as you can."

He accepted the offer as a patriotic duty. He worked diligently and secured the pledge of several. After enlisting all that he could, he returned to Captain Campbell to report his work, and return to him the money that he had not expended. The captain refused the return of the cash and said to George: "No, that is your money, keep it, and you are my soldier!"

George did not desire to be taken advantage of in such manner, and so protested, but to no avail. He appealed to his brother, John, who was present, to take the money and try to return it to the captain, but yet he refused it and reported the enlistment of George. He offered no further resistance and considered it his patriotic duty to render the service.

Records from the Treasury Department, General Accounting Office, Military Division, Washington, D. C. * revealed the record that his enlistment was made on August 1, 1812, for a period of five years, in Captain James H. Campbell's Company, 24th Infantry, U. S. Army, (Colonel W. P. Anderson.)†

The next record of a period of his service is revealed by a letter written by his own hand to his home folks, and preserved by his mother, Eleanor, which probably was the last word that she ever received from her soldier son till his death was reported to her.

The letter in full follows. Original spelling, grammer, etc. is retained.

The data of this letter coincides with the historical events as they are recorded as transpiring at that period. General Green Clay of Kentucky had led a body of 1200 men on ahead of the recruits of which George Hamblen was one. They found General William Henry Harrison at Fort Meigs, which was located on the Maumee River in north-western Ohio near the 'Rapids', as mentioned by George in his letter, sure enough beseiged by the British and Indians. By hard fighting they were defeated, May 5, 1813.

George says: "and we will be with him (Harrison) against the middle of June." If they succeeded, and they probably did, his command took part in the second siege of the Fort on July 20, 1813. The British under General Proctor, at this time advanced and laid siege to the fort but were unable to capture it. After this defeat the British crossed over into Canada.

General Harrison leant many of his men to Commador Perry, who was by this time fitting out his ships on Lake Erie for his attack upon the British on its waters. Tradition strongly related that George filled a place on one of Perry's ships and took part in his notable battle and victory on October 19, 1813. However, no written record of this has been found, yet it is entirely probable. *

It is also probable, but no record, that he took part in the Battle of the Thames in Canada, where General Harrison defeated the British on October 5, 1813.

Credence may be added to the tradition of his having taken part in the Lake Erie battle from the fact of his services after this event, by his having a part in the following naval expedition:

Early in July, 1814, Commadore St. Clair was placed in command of a fleet of sloops-of-war and schooners, composed of the vessels, Tigress, Niagara, Scorpion, St. Lawrence and Caledonia and a force of 750, land militia, under command of Lieutenant Commander Croghan, was placed aboard.

Orders were issued for the expedition to proceed to Mackinac Island, north extremity of Michigan, and capture the fort there, held by the British. The fleet arrived and anchored off the Island, July 28, 1814. In the battle that ensued the fleet was forced to retire, and a landing force of Americans, under General Holmes was defeated. General Holmes was killed. (See picture of Old Fort Machine, page 93.)

was recovered by the writer when settling up the estate of Eleanor Taylor, 1921, among a small bundle of other old and historical valuable letters concealed in the very bottom of a large old dry-goods box, filled with old newspapers and other valueless material. An almost miraculous find!

* Note 40. Dr. D. R. Canfield of Perrysburg, Ohio, near old Ft. Meigs, at one time president of the Maumee Valley Pioneer and Historical Society, says in a letter, July, 1922: "Probably not all relatives of those that fought in Perry's Victory, ever received prize money." This may account for George Hamblen's name not being on the roll of Perry's men that are inscribed on the Perry monument on Put-in-Bay Island near where the naval battle was fought, if he should have ever been in the battle there.

George Hamblen's part in the above expedition is revealed by the letter referred to from the General Accounting office, Washington, D. C., date of April 30, 1926, in these words: "George Hamblen, or Hamblin, late soldier of the War of 1812, is shown to have died, August 4, 1814, of wounds received at the battle of Machinaw."

Whether George received his mortal wound while on one of the ships or with the "landing force," is not known, but it would seem most likely that he was one of the latter. It is evident that he was aboard one of the vessels when he died. It is thought that he may have been on the "Niagara", which was Commadore Perry's second flag ship at his battle on Lake Erie. If so, this fact may have led to the tradition that he was in Perry's battle. (See picture of Fort Mackinac on page 93.)

The General Accounting Office wrote further: "You are informed that by Treasury settlement, made February 24, 1823, the amount of $174.35 was sent to Job Hamblen, father, as arrears of pay due the deceased soldier * including three months extra pay allowed him for his services." *

The story of the burial of "Uncle George" often repeated by his nephew, David R. Hamblen, quite impressed the writer as a boy and was told in this manner:

"He died on board one of the ships of war. His body was carefully wrapped in a seaman's blanket and bound with heavy cord to a board, the length of his body. A heavy weight, probably a stone or cannon ball, was tied at the foot to insure its sinking, and slid over the ship's edge, into the water."

So thus was the burial of a patriot who gave his life for American liberty. His bones lie scattered on the bottom, or on the sandy shores of Lake Huron, there to await that day when the "land and the sea shall give up its dead." †

[23] WILLIAM HAMBLÉN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, March 29, 1793, in southwestern Virginia, most probable before his parents moved to Lee County. Little doubt he was married in Virginia, probably in Lee County, but his wife's name has not been learned.

It is known that he moved to Indiana at or near the same time that his father did. His name is shown on the tax assessor's rolls, the first made in the new county of Bartholomew, May, 1821. He was listed with, one poll, two horses and a silver watch. His taxes were $1.50. No doubt he was living in the Haw Patch community near where his father lived.

It seems certain that he moved to western part of the county, which later (1836) became Brown County, where he acquired 40 or 50 acres of land near where his father settled and was living there in September, 1827.

* Note 41. See Job's, his father, affidavit, bottom of page 72.

† Note 42. The account of George's death and burial was probably brought home to his Virginia folks by his comrades, "the Cumber Land Gap boys" referred to in his letter (see page 102) that were fortunate enough to return after the war. His memory was ever cherished by his near relatives. His mother, in particular, lamented the circumstances of his enlistment and always kept fresh in her mind his unfortunate death and burial although she lived 38 years after his passing.

He moved to Jefferson County, Illinois, probably along with his brother, Uriah, prior to 1830. His father, Job, in a letter written December 27, 1830, says:

"Mr. Benjamin Gillum * * * has returned from Jefferson County * * * was also at son William Hamblen's and they were all well and doing well." *

Uriah Lock wrote his mother, Eleanor, Jan. 1849: "William Hamblen is living in Arkansas."

The next word of him is through a letter written, June 22, 1867, by his son, Uriah, in which he states that he (William) was living in Reynolds County, Missouri, "just before the Civil War commenced," which would mean 1860 or early 1861, "He was in good health at that time." Further along in the same letter, Uriah stated, "I did hear that father was dead, but do not know for sure."

This is the last word received concerning the old gentleman, William, leaving the conclusion that he probably died some time during the 1860's.

67.* MARY,	"	date not learned.
68.* JOB,	"	" " "

The names of all his children have not been learned, but the following of a certainty are known:

There appears to have been at least two other daughters, as it revealed by Uriah's letter referred to above. It reads: "Job stayed all night with one of my sisters when he was out at father's. I do suppose that all my sisters that is alive is out close to father's." In the same letter Uriah states that William, his brother, was living in Reynolds County, Missouri, June, 1867.

[24] ELIAKIM HAMBLEN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, July 26, 1796, probably in Lee County, Virginia. It is also likely that he was married in Lee County. His wife was Nancy Daugherty, born July 18, 1788.

It is probable that he moved with his father to Jennings County, Indiana, shortly prior to 1818 and on to Bartholomew County, 1820 or early 1821. His name appears on the first tax assessors roll of that county made May, 1821. He was listed with, one horse and one poll. Paid 87½ cents taxes for that year.

He, no doubt, lived in the Haw Patch locality near Clifford, close to where his father and brothers were located. He moved from this locality, probably 1825, to the western part of what was then Bartholomew County (now Brown County), 15 miles west and settled again near his father, on Hamblen Creek. †

* Note 43. See the Job Hamblen letter, page 74.

† Note 44. An account of this removal was related, 1918, by Elbridge Taggart, a grandson. He stated that: "Grandfather Eliakim owned only one horse. Grandmother Nancy rode the horse and carried with her the smaller children and the greater part of their household effects. Grandfather and the older children walked and carried bundles of clothing and other articles."

The children of the family were:

He was a well built and heavy man, height 5 feet, 8 or 10 inches, weight about 220 pounds. Was of good natural talent, with more education than the average citizen of that day. He took keen interest in public affairs and from that reason held many trusts, both elective and appointive within the counties where he lived. His name appears many times on the public records at the county seat, both at Columbus and Nashville.

The writer possesses a copy of a letter written by some unknown scribe in a fine specimen of handwriting of the pioneer educated men, from Eliakim Hamblen to his brother John M. in Lee County, Virginia. While it is not his own handwriting nor signature, it is given for its historical and family matters information. (Exact copy.)

Bartholomew County, Indiana, December 27th, 1830.

Dear brother and Sister:—

I take this opportunity to inform you that we are all well at present and hope these few well designed lines may find you all enjoying the same good health.

I have enquired for Mr. Stoops and can hear no account of him.

Times with us much as they were when you left us. Our country is improving and prospering very fast and bids fair to make a great and flourishing State.

The place you had in view is still vacant. But if you wish ever to occupy it you had better be coming on and get here soon as possible.

Pleasant Hamblen is still living with me and has contracted to go to New Orleans.

I am anxious to see you and to know the cause why you have not moved out to this country. Money is scarce with us and hard to come at.

Health generally prevails here except Bad colds or rather a sort of influenza in some little among the inhabitants of our Country.

I wish you to excuse me for not writing sooner as I have still been looking for you to move out is the principle reason I did not write

Permit me to subscribe with sentiments of due respect and affection till death.

ELIAKIM HAMBLÉN

Mr. John and Mrs. Mary
Hamblen.

P. S. Please to remember me to James Hall and family and write if they are living.

November 11, 1822, he was allowed $3.75 for services as a grand juror at Columbus, March 1, 1830, was allowed 50c for delivering September 3, 1833, produced certificate of election at Columbus as County Commissioner from Second District, Bartholomew County, and was sworn in as one of the three Commissioners. * He held this position till March 9, 1836, when he met with this board for the last session. He was disqualified for further service for the reason that the new county of Brown had been created, effective April 1, 1836, and included that section of Bartholomew County where Eliakim lived.

It is quite likely that he had an active part in organizing sentiment favorable to the erection of the new county. July 25, 1836, when the county commissioners of the new county met at Jacksonburg (Nashville) their first act was to divide the county into four townships of equal size. The one occupying the northeast quarter of the county, where the Hamblens lived, was given the name "Hamblen."

It is quite likely that Eliakim attended this session of the commissioners court. It is tradition that he suggested the name "Hamblen" for the township and it was so approved. It is thought that it was in honor of his father, Job Hamblen, Revolutionary War soldier and first permanent settler within the locality, that the name was sought.

February 24, 1834, he made cash entry No. 19339, Indianapolis series, for northwest and southeast quarters of the northeast quarter, Section 35, Township 10, Range 3 east, 80 acres, U. S. Government land and was granted patent for same May 12, 1935.

* Note 45. The other two commissioners were Nathan Kyle and David Newsum. These two had met on Monday, September 2nd, and held a session. Eliakim was absent for the reason that his father, Job Hamblen, who died on the 1st and was buried on the 2nd.

Note 46. A petition was presented to the Indiana General Assembly, December 14, 1835, by Representative Dunning of Monroe County, headed by Cornelius Tucker, (Soon afterward Eliakim's son-in-law) and signed by numerous others, largely people living within the boundaries of the proposed new county. Was referred to a committee consisting of Dunning, Lee of Bartholomew and Carr of Jackson, for consideration.

Committee reported favorable on petition and introduced bill, House Bill No. 169, January 19, 1836. Morgan County remonstrated against it. Bill read three times same day., Representative Dunning carried the bill to the Senate, January 20th. Read second time and referred to committee, Richard S. Tannehill of Bartholomew and Johnson, (Mr. Tannehill owned the famous Tannehill Mills on Driftwood River and enjoyed the patronage of the residents of the Hamblen Township section of the new county. Particular friend of the Hamblens, including Eliakim.) Griffin of Scott, Jennings of Jackson and Whitcomb of Monroe, Green, and Owens Counties.

Committee reported bill favorable, January 27th. After being amended by Joint Committee of house and senate, and approved by house as amended, it was presented to senate, February 2nd and passed.

Was presented to the governor, February 3rd and approved by him on the 4th. Bill went into effect April 1, 1836. Named 'Brown County' in honor of Major General Jacob Brown, famous in War of 1812.

January 18, 1836, he entered the northeast quarter of the same section, 40 acres, and was granted patent August 1, 1837. This was considered the best farm land in the township. On it he built a home and moved to it from his first home which he established on the land of his father's homestead.

October, 1837, he served as petit juror, second term of district court held in Nashville, Brown County. (First term held April 20, 1837). During 1838, he built a water mill on Salt Creek on the land of his son Jesse, (S. E., N. E. 1/4, Sect. 31, Tp. 10, R. 4E) about two miles east of his own home, probably the first in the locality. In this he placed a good set of burs for grinding grain and in connection, saws for cutting lumber. This he operated for about six years.

Same year, 1838, he and Abraham Chappell were overseers of the poor in Hamblen Township.

He was quite a hunter for big game that abounded at the time of their settling in the new Salt Creek Country. On one occasion his dogs treed a big brown bear. He took aim with his rifle, fired and down came the bear, badly wounded. The dogs attacked him and in the melee that followed, Eliakim was knocked down and the bear ran over him in its hurry to get away. However, it was followed and soon killed.

At another time he was watching a salt lick for a deer when a panther put in its appearance, probably in quest of deer also. His aim was better this time and he shot the animal dead on the spot.

The crowning event of his public service was his election as Representative from Brown County, member of the Indiana State Legislature, on the democratic ticket. He was present and sworn in when the 24th session of the General Assembly convened at Indianapolis, December 2, 1838.

He attended its sessions with regularity and the record shows him to have been associated with the popular side of a large majority of the questions at issue before that august body.

Among the noteworthy events of the sessions which he attended, the following are chronicled:

Dec. 2, First vote taken was: "Shall a Sergeant-at-Arms be elected?" 40, yea, 54, no. Eliakim voted, no.

Original Eliakim Hamblen residence, built about 1835. Standing 1925. Stone chimney probably built by his brother Uriah.

- Dec. 3. Rev. Henry Ward Beecher opened the session by prayer.
- Dec. 4. Committee on State Prisons appointed. Personal; Monroe of Washington County, Sands of Crawford; HAMBLEN of Brown; Davis of Sullivan; Dunn of Clinton; Jackson of ———; O'Neill of Montgomery. This committee ranked sixth on a total of thirteen Standing Committees.
- Dec. 7. Governor David Wallace sent his recommendations on Prison Affairs to Assembly, which was referred to Committee on State Prisons.
- Dec. 12. Prison Committee instructed to inquire into the expediency of assisting Jeffersonville to buy fire engine and hose. Resolution amended to move state prison from Jeffersonville to some central part of the state. Vote; 42, yea. 55, no. Eliakim voted, No.
- Dec. 16. Resolution adopted that Committee on Education report a bill to establish Free Common Schools for Indiana.
- Dec. 20. Senate sent a resolution to house that Assembly adjourn on December 24th, and reassemble on January 2, (1840). Quite a debate followed when it was sought to change the dates. Resolution passed, 62, yeas; 30, noes. Eliakim voted, Yea.
- Dec. 24. Last vote attempted showed no quorum. Only 41 members present. Eliakim absent. Presumed he had gone home to spend the Christmas vacation.
- Jan. 2. 1840. Hamblen present at first, aye and nay vote of the day.
- Jan. 3. Hamblen introduced House Bill No. 95, "To Regulate the Jurisdiction of Justice of the Peace in Brown County." Read first time and passed to second reading.
- Jan. 14. Hamblen granted one day's leave of absence by house upon petition of Mr. Monroe, on account of sickness.
- Jan. 24. House Bill No. 95 read third time and passed. This bill was brought up in the State Senate on January 30th. Was read 1st, 2nd, and 3rd times and referred to a select committee consisting of Messrs. Tannehill of Bartholomew, Angle, Thompson and Brady. Committee reported favorably and the bill was passed. Was approved by Governor Wallace, February 10, 1840. The text of the bill reads:

CHAPTER CXXVIII. BILL NO. 95.

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana; That the jurisdiction of Justice of the Peace in the County of Brown shall be governed by the provisions of the 103rd and 104th sections of the act entitled: An Act regulating the duties and jurisdictions of Justices of the Peace, approved, February 17, 1838. This act to be in force from and after its passage"

Section 103 specifies under what conditions persons living out of a township may be summoned before a Justice of the Peace in Civil Cases.

Section 104 says: "that a person signing an agreement that a debt if sued on shall be before a certain Justice of the Peace in the township, such Justice of the Peace shall have power to adjudge him if found anywhere in the county"

- Jan. 23. Hamblen appointed on a Committee with Messrs. Finch and Moore of Owens County, to pass on a petition presented by Thomas Needham of Johnson County, asking for a state road in Johnson County. Committee reported favorable on petition, January 28, and introduced Bill No. 223. Bill read second time January 29th. (Not determined if it became a law or not.)
- Feb. 22. Joint resolution relative to the state prison report passed. This being Saturday, the last day of the session. The last action of the House was on Joint Resolution No. 384, relative to revenue, which passed, 59 aye, 13 no. Eliakim voted aye. At 2 o'clock P. M. a roll call on a motion showed no quorum, only 34 members present. Hamblen absent. Adjournment, sine die, taken soon afterward.

Recapitulation of Eliakim's service shows: Total number of aye and nay votes taken by the House, 321.

Number of times Eliakim voted with majority, . . . 224.

Number of times he voted with minority 75.

Number of times absent when his name called . . 15.

After this service his name does not appear very much on the public records. October term, 1837, District Court, he served as juror at Nashville. December term, 1843, shows that he borrowed $50.00 from the county surplus revenue fund. May 23, 1850, he either bought or entered 40 acres of land in Bartholomew County, eight miles from where he lived. (nw, se, sect. 11, tp. 10, r 4e).

Unfortunately he contracted typhoid fever and died from its effects July 29, 1852. His remains lie buried in the Taggart Cemetery* Hamblen Township and the site marked by a fine specimen of native stone.

* Note 47. The Taggart Cemetery was probably the first burial place in Hamblen Township. It is located on land donated by James Taggart, Sr. (S. E., N. E. 1/4, Sect. 36, Ty. 10, Range 3 E.) during the early 1840s.

A log schoolhouse, built, 1837, first in Brown County, stood on the site where the cemetery is now located and was also used for church purposes. Hence, when the first deaths occurred in the community burials were made there. It is ideally located, on a high tract of land between two hollows on north and south sides, and overlooks the Salt Creek valley from a small hill to the west, occupying about two acres. The first highway in the locality ran on the north side of it.

It is the burial place of many of the first settlers of the township, men and women who were heads of many of the leading families, and in nearly all instances intermarried with descendants of the older Hamblens. Among those buried there are the following names: Taggart, Hamblen, Weddle, Curry, King, Cordry, Walker, Milnes, Clark, Smith and Gillaspay.

It has always been well taken care of for a country cemetery and many nice monuments are erected there. A special feature among these is a number of native gray sand stone thin, tall and wide headstones cut by Alfred King, who lived in the locality. The carving and lettering on these stones has met

1. The first of these is the fact that the number of cases of the disease is increasing rapidly in all parts of the world. This is due to a number of causes, but the most important is the fact that the disease is becoming more common in the tropics. This is due to the fact that the climate is more favorable to the disease in the tropics than in the temperate zone.

Married, November 17, 1817, David Lock, in Scott County, Indiana, where her father may have resided at the time. (Jennings and Scott County, Indiana. (Jennings and Scott Counties adjoin.) (Jennings and Scott Counties adjoin.)

David Lock was born in Lincoln County, Kentucky, December 29, 1793. He enlisted, August 31, 1813, in Henry County, Kentucky, in Edward George's Company, 13th Regiment, Kentucky detached militia, for service during the war of 1812. He took part in the Battle of the Thames in Canada, October 5, 1813, where a hard fought battle was fought. General William Henry Harrison defeated the British Army and Indiana hosts under the Chieftain, Tecumseh. (See his picture opposite page 112.)

The Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., states that his services terminated November 2, 1813, but another source states that he was not finally discharged till 1816. He made application for pension, April 14, 1871, which was granted at the rate of $8.00 per month.

It may have been that his acquaintance was made with Eleanor, while her father either resided in Kentucky or while on the way to Indiana for the main route of travel from Virginia lay through both Lincoln and Henry Counties, Kentucky.

After their marriage they may have resided for a few years in Scott County, for her father, Job, wrote in a letter November 10, 1823. "Your brothers and sisters, all live near me except Nellie (Eleanor) and we are looking for her daily."

It is known that they moved to where the father, Job, was living on Hamblen Creek (now Brown County) in December, 1825, and it is said that they lived in the home of her father for some time afterward.

Early in the year 1829 he went to Adams County, Illinois, and left his family in Indiana. There he found a location on Stone's Prairie and built a house near Payton. He returned to Indiana for his family and during his absence a prairie fire destroyed his new home.

He returned in 1830 and for several weeks lived in a tent with his wife and seven children. Was obliged to keep up watch fires around the tent to keep prowling wolves at bay.

with admiration by tombstone artists of the present day, due to their well executed designs. Its perpetual care is assured by the donation of a fund of $500 made up under the leadership of Job Hamblen,⁵ 1921, by many of those who have relatives buried there.

This fund is placed in the hands of the County Auditor, who under a state law must loan the principle and the interest at 6%, paid to the township trustee whose duty it is to see that the cemetery is kept in good condition.

He afterward went to Camp Point, where he entered land and built a home during the winter of 1830-'31, memorable for its heavy snows. The cold was so severe and snow so heavy that he "chinked" his log house on the outside with snow and it held firmly till spring opened.

In 1832 he purchased a farm in Richfield Township and moved there. He was a skilled millwright and in 1832, built a flouring mill on McCrancy's Creek, using water-power. This was the first mill in the locality. It was after moving here that their four younger children were born.

Their children were as follows:

80.* MARY (Polly)	born, Sept. 21, 1818, Scott Co.
81.* THADDEUS CONSTINE TOBIESKI,	" Jan. 13, 1820, " "
82.* SAMUEL,	" Nov. 10, 1821, " "
83.* PEMBROOK SOMERSET,	" Sept. 22, 1823, " "
84.* HAMBLEN AUBERRY,	" Dec. 10, 1825, Hamblen
85.* NELSON ESRA,	" Dec. 12, 1827, Creek.
86.* SARAH EMARINE,	" Oct. 26, 1829 "
87.* (daughter unnamed, b. Oct. 19, 1832. Died, Nov. 6, 1832, Adams
88.* NEWTON BUSHNELL,	born. Apr. 16, 1834, Co. Ill.
89.* ELEANOR,	" Nov. 13, 1836, "
90.* FRANKLIN,	" Dec. 26, 1838, "

By some circumstance one William Gabbert deeded him 40 acres (sw, nw, sect. 12, tp. 8, r 4e) about eight miles southwest of Columbus, Ind., and he deeded it to Jacob Wagner, February 22, 1842. It is known that he visited Indiana, 1842.

In 1849, he built a fine steam flouring mill at the site of his first water-mill which he operated for many years. He was also a successful farmer.

The writer recovered a series of thirty-three letters, written by David Lock and his wife, Eleanor, to her sister, Sally Taylor and husband, beginning May 22, 1852, and continuing till October 26, 1874. These letters give an excellent history of his family with many details, also his opinions on different subjects and reflect the man of fine culture that he was.

Some extracts of these letters follow:†

"May 22, 1852. Dear mother: * * * There has been a good deal of sickness in the course of last fall and winter. B. Gillum's wife, his son James and daughter Mary were taken from us in December. Also one of our grandsons, Andrew, only son of Thaddeus.

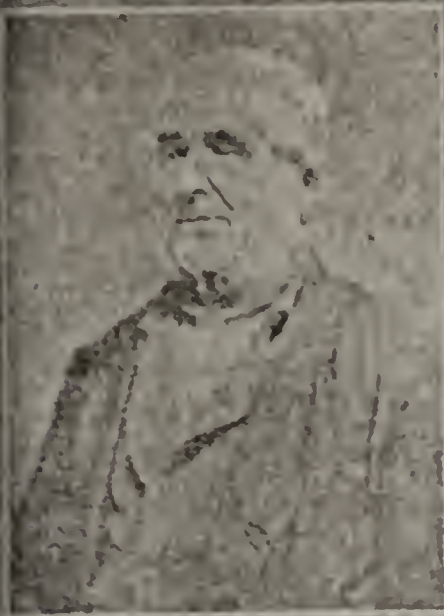

You wish to know * * * our grandchildren * * * twenty in all but only thirteen living.

Yours affectionately and dutifully,
David and Eleanor Lock.

To Eleanor Hamblen.

Dear brother and sister; It is with pleasure that I take the present opportunity of writing. * * * It has been so long since we had a letter from you that I hardly know what to write. * * * David and Aubery is gone to Kansas. They started four weeks ago and we have not had any word yet but we are expecting a letter now.

Nelson * * * I don't know where he is now but report says that he is gone to California which report I expect is true. I want you to let me know how sister Nancy (Eliakim's widow) is getting along. * * * Brother Uriah's youngest son is here, * * * Let me know how brother John is. * * * Every thing is very dear here, flour * * * eleven dollars per bbl. * * * no more at present, I remain

Your affectionate sister till death.

May 12, 1856, Polly and Uriah Lock writing says: "David Lock and B. Gillum have gone to Missouri to lay their land warrant.

"December 2, 1856.

The Wednesday after you (Wm. and Sally Taylor) left us, Aubery, Nelson and Newton started to Missouri, and one week after I went with Thaddeus to help him out and was gone three weeks. We had a letter from Mary Jane Jackson bringing the sad news of the death of her father, Ansel Jackson, he died of palsy * * * 6th of July.

"June 1, 1858.

We went to Missouri this fall to see the boys They were doing as well as could be expected.

"December 4, 1860.

* * * As to political matters, you likely know as much as I do. However I will give you the official majority of this state:

Lincoln over Douglas	11,966
Lincoln over all	4,787

"December 5, 1861.

* * * Pembroke and Nelson have moved here from Missouri. Auberry is here also at present. Him and Pembroke, I think will go back as soon as the fuss (Civil War referred to) is settled. Thad. is still out there and so is old B. Gillus * * * .

"February 28, 1883.

* * * I would have written sooner but delayed till we could get satisfactory information from Dutch (called Auberry heretofore). Him and Newton went into the army last August and about the last of September the regiment went into Kentucky and from there to Tennessee. Dutch has been in the hospital * * * measles * * * .

Newton * * * has still continued with the army * * * he was in the battle at Murfreesborough He says it was a pretty narrow place. * * * In political matters, we have had quite a stormy time this winter. There are some party leaders * * * but I am in hopes they will not be able to do what they are aiming to do.

I do think if a score or two of these northern traitors were hung it would be a good thing for the people of this state and all the rest of the states.

David & Eleanor Lock.

To Wm. & S. Taylor.

P. S. Please write us soon and if you have any word from brother John let us hear from there. (Lee County, Va.) D. L

"May 2, 1863.

Brother and sister:—I now write * * * of our late bereavments. Samuel's wife, Susan, died the 23rd of last month and your sister Eleanor (his wife) six days after, on the 29th. * * * my wife's old breast or lung complaint, I think took her off. * * * Dutch is discharged from the army * * * Newton is with the army at Murfreesboro.

I am glad some of my boys are strong for the Union and for upholding our administration. * * * it appears from the account that some of your rebel gentry have killed soldiers, union men. * * * let me know if such be the case.

Your brother, David Lock.

May 20, 1866.

* * * sorry to hear of distress among our relatives. * * * the last certain information I had brother John was yet in Virginia. * * * we are sorry to hear of his misfortune and suffering; his sons-in-law being taken prisoner by the Union Army. * * *

Three of my boys call themselves Democrats, Sam, Nelson and Frank. The others are considerably tainted with abolitionism, two or three of them as well as myself strongly in favor of FREE suffrage. Are we right? Let's hear from you, Yours affectionately, David Lock.

David Lock.

This the last of the series, written by a man of 83 years in a clear, steady, fine hand, if any difference, better written in every way than the first, 22 years previous. All the way through, spelling correct, punctuation and capitalization observed with few errors. Grammar almost perfect, composition shows good vocabulary with some humor. Being a miller as well as a farmer, condition of crops, prices of grain and pork were invariably noted.

Thus is revealed the closing days of his own and his wife's lives, so well spent. She, as he noted, passed away April 29, 1863. It is presumed that he lived with his son, Pembroke from the time he purchased the home till his death, March 22, 1877.

A newspaper account of his passing gave this account

"In his declining years he spent much time in studying the word of God, and from its sacred pages traced the living light that illuminated his pathway and enabled him to depart this life in the comfort of a reasonable and religious home, which laid—firm hold on the bright immortal beyond."

They were buried in a spot chosen by himself, on the old homestead, and their burial place marked by headstones.

[26] SARAH (Sally) HAMBLIN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, May 26, 1802, probably in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with her parents to Jennings County, Indiana, and from there to Bartholomew County, about 1821.

Was married, probably in the latter County, about 1822, to Samuel Barnett. They probably lived in the Haw Patch locality till about 1830, when he deserted his wife and went away. Was last heard of in Iowa.

Their children were:

91.* ARMILDA, born, Dec. 21, 1823.

92. SARUNA, " Oct. 1, 1825. Died, Dec. 24, 1825.

93. MINERVA, " Oct. 24, 1826, " Nov. 11, 1826.

94. FRANKLIN, " Jan. 1, 1828. " Nov. 14, 1834.

95.* ANGELINE, " May. 13, 1830.

After Barnett left his family the mother, Sally, moved to the home of her father on Hamblen Creek in western Bartholomew County (Brown County, 1836) where she resided till her second marriage about 1834, to William Norman Taylor, born July 10, 1802. * (His picture page 112.)

They continued to reside on her father's homestead and built a residence farther down the creek. Her father, Job, had never made homestead entry on the land where they lived but continued to hold it till 1836, when William N. made purchase of it from the U. S. Government. They resided on it the remainder of their lives and developed it into one of the best farms in the locality. (See her picture page 112.)

They made a trip, in September, 1856, to Illinois. Visited the daughter, Armilda, in Clay County, David and Eleanor Lock in Adams County, and also over into Missouri, where Uriah and Mary Lock lived.

Their children were:

- | | |
|------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 96.* ELEANOR, | born, Aug. 27, 1835. |
| 97.* CATHARINE, | " May 19, 1837. |
| 98.* DAVID WASHINGTON, | " Feb. 1, 1839. |
| 99.* JOHN HAMBLÉN, | " Dec. 8, 1840. |
| 100. JAMES TAGGART, | " Nov. 23, 1842. Died Mar. 16, 1848 |
| 101.* ELIAKIM RUFUS, | " Sept. 25, 1844. |
| 102.* WILLIAM PRESTON, | " Junt. 9, 1846. |

She died of a cancer, June 25, 1875. He died July 18, 1876. Both are buried in the Taylor Cemetery on their homestead as are also their sons, James T. and William P.

[27] MARY (Polly) HAMBLÉN,³ (Job.² George.¹) born, March 11, 1805, probably in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with her parents to Indiana and was living with them, not yet married, November, 1823, in the Haw Patch locality, Bartholomew County.†

Not long after this she was married to Uriah Lock. He was a first cousin to David Lock, husband of her sister, Eleanor, and it is presumed that he came from Kentucky from the same locality as David. Her father mentions her as married and having a family, September, 1827, and as living near him in Bartholomew County.‡ (See her picture, page 112.)

It is thought that they moved to Jefferson County, Illinois, at or about the same time that Uriah, her brother, moved there, about 1828 or '29.¶

* Note 50. The Tayler family came from Harlan County, Kentucky. The father was William, who died at the home of his son, William N., and is buried in the Taylor Cemetery, located on the Taylor lands. Besides William N., three other sons, Archibald, Henry and Thomas, were early settlers in Hamblen Township. Henry and Thomas moved to Illinois. Archibald established a home a few miles southeast from his brother, William, and resided there till his death. He had several children, William, James and Calvina were some of them.

Further information about them is revealed by a series of letters* written by Mary (Polly) herself, her husband Uriah, and their sons, dating from January 20, 1849, and continuing till 1873.

He wrote a fine letter, unusually good penmanship and used eloquent language. The following letter from him, written to his mother-in-law, Eleanor Hamblen, is an illustration.

Illinoistown, St. Clair County, Illinois.

"Dear mother:—

January 20, 1849.

To break the long silence * * * Surely the old iron hand of time has not been busying himself defacing the mutual friendship that has existed between us for so long of the past, without a pleasant waft of air gently blows to keep the coals aglaring.

This line comes with three principle objects and many primary ones. First is, to use a stimulant to excite our curiosities to hear from one another oftener. Another is, we want you to put your foot in your pocket * * * and your knitting and come and see us. * * *

Our last but not least, but greatest, how your health has been and is now. Hoping these few (probably unexpected) lines may find you * * *

We are compelled to state a transposition of our thoughts by stating that the prospects of California look mighty glaring and inducing to those that have the means * * * that I have not. * * *

(To) Mrs. Ellen Hamblen.

Uriah Lock, Mary Lock.

She, Mary, wrote plain and sensible. They moved to many different places. Were living in Peoria County, Illinois, Sept. 1851; Keokuk, Iowa, September, 1852; Pike County, Illinois, October, 1854; Palmyra, Missouri, March, 1857.

He died July 6, 1858, probably at Glasgow, Scott County, Illinois. She was living, July, 1863, with two unmarried sons in St. Louis, Missouri, and May, 1867, with her son, Alonzo, in Cincinnati, Ohio. Visited at her sister's, Sally Taylor, home in Brown County, Indiana, from June till November, 1872. Returned to Cincinnati and again visited Sally from April till December, 1873. This time she returned to French Village, St. Clair County, Illinois, and was living with her son, David, when she wrote the last word that was heard from her.

Date of her death not learned, nor anything concerning her descendants since the date of the above referred to letters.

FOURTH GENERATION

[28] DANT HAMBLEEN,⁴ (George.³ Pierce Dant.²) born, 1820, near Clairfield, Claiborne County, Tennessee, where he lived his entire life.

Enlisted in Union Army, October 30, 1863, in Company I, 9th Tennessee Infantry, during the War between the States. Was engaged in the battles: Bull's Gap, Siege of Chattanooga and others. Honorably discharged the service, September 11, 1865, as of new Company C. as a corporal. The War Department records show his name spelled "Daunt Hamlin".

Married first,, Elizabeth (Betsey) David. He accumulated considerable property, both personal and real. Sold his land for $6,000 a short time before his death. Politics, republican.

Children, first wife:

111. SARAH ALICE. Married Emley Stanfield. Died before her
112.* MARY. father.

After her death he married second, Mary Miller. She died and he married third, Nancy Austin. She deceased before his death. He died, February 25, 1903, and was buried in the George Hamblin Cemetery.

Dant adopted (?) an orphan boy, Howard Bastie, who proved to be a dutiful son and rendered valuable service for his father (Dant) up to the time of his death. It has been through his kindness and knowledge that the history of this branch of the family was obtained. He signed his name, "Howard Hamblin", throughout his correspondence. His son, Howard R. Bastie, of Clairfield, Tennessee, also rendered valuable assistance to our research work.

[31] WREN HAMBLIN,⁴ (George.³ Pierce Dant.² George.¹) born, 1827, near Clairfield, Claiborne County, Tennessee, where he resided on a farm all his life.

Married, Amey Bowman. Probably voted Republican. Died, 1874. Their children were:

Josephine married ——— Bryant, Cordie married ——— Reeves, both living in Corbin, Kentucky, 1920. Dora married G. B. Baker, living at Woffard, Kentucky, 1920.

[34] VINCENT SIMS HAMBLLEN,⁴ (Vincent.³ Pierce Dant.² George.¹) born, October 2, 1816, at Flat Lick, six miles from Barbourville, Knox County, Kentucky.

For some reason,* when quite young he was taken into the home of Joseph Jones, said to be an uncle, to live. At the age of eight years he moved with this uncle's family to Hendricks County, Indiana. In a short time Jones moved to Missouri and left young Vincent to live with ——— St. John, a brother of St. John, who married his mother in Kentucky after the death of his father. Later he lived with a neighbor, Silas Bryant. At the age of 15 he learned cabinet making and traveled as a journeyman over Indiana and Ohio.†

VINCENT SIMS HAMBLLEN

* Note 55. See page 94, for account of marriage of Vincent's parents.

† Note 56. It was recalled, 1930, by Bartholomew Russell Hamblen that Vincent S. visited the home of David R. Hamblen in Brown County, during the early 1870s and that later David R. made a trip to Hendricks County to visit him. It seems evident that the two men recognized each other as relatives.

He married, about 1842, Eliza Odell, daughter of Thomas and Charity (Bodenhammer) Odell and established a home in Hendricks County. He formed a partnership with Isaac Riley for cabinet making. They specialized in making clock cabinets and did an extensive business. They bought the works for their clocks from the famous Seth Thomas factories and built cabinets for them. These cabinets were of many fancy "wall sweeper" designs.

It is said that Riley took advantage of his confidence and swindled him out of most of their accumulations, said to amount to $25,000. Sam Ransom St. John, Vincent's half brother, was associated with Riley in this manipulation. Soon after this disaster he took up farming in Hendricks County. Success again crowned his efforts and by the time of his old age he owned a fine farm of 280 acres.

His wife died, 1892, and he passed away, October 5, 1903, while residing with his son, Vincent Sanford, near Plainfield, Hendricks County. Politics, republican.

Their children were:

- 122. THOMAS, Died in infancy.
- 123. ELIZABETH, Died in infancy.
- 124.* GEORGE W.
- 125. EMMA, Died age 27. Married William Short. Two children died in infancy.

[47] JAMES CAMPBELL HAMBLLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George¹) born, June 11, 1808, in Claiborne Co., Tennessee. Moved with his parents to Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia, when about a year old. He worked on his father's farm and learned the shoemaker's trade from him. He learned to play the violin at an early age on which he performed with considerable skill. Voted democrat.

Married, November 14, 1833, Sarah Ramsey, born September 18, 1811, in Claiborne County, Tennessee, daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth (Cowen) Ramsey. *

Note 60. Family tradition is not agreed on where Josiah Ramsey and Elizabeth Cowen were married. The story as related by David R. Hamblen to the writer in his youth, was that they were married in Ireland where they were born, about 1765, and emigrated to America soon afterward, some time near the year 1790. They landed at Baltimore and were met at the wharf by some of their relatives who lived far out in the country.

The American Corn had been much heard of by them in Ireland as the great source of food in this country and they were anxious to get sight of it. When the party approached the first field it was pointed out to them. No sooner so, than the wiry young Irishman, Josiah, climbed into the field. He looked for the grain and finally spied the towering tassel, to him as near in comparison as rye and barley heads, where the grain developed in his own country.

Quick as a flash he grabbed a handful of the chaffy tassel, gave a few brisk rubs in the palm of his hand, blew a blast of breath to separate, as he thought, the chaff from the grain. To his surprise, no grain was there. In amazement he turned to his companions and exclaimed in his native brogue:

"Ah! and we shall ahl stharve to death; the karn is ahl blasthed!"

The other story is as related by Mrs. Hilton Ramsey, 1933, of Sneedville, Hancock County, Tennessee, who has made considerable study of Ramsey history. It came through descendants of Josiah and Elizabeth who have ever since lived around the original homestead in Hancock (originally Clairborne) County.

This version is that Josiah came over before his wife, probably in company with John Cowen, her brother. John, later sent money for his sister, Elizabeth's, passage to Pennsylvania. There she was met by Josiah and they were married in that state not long after her coming over.

From there they moved when they had but one child, about 1791, to Mulberry Creek, Claiborne, now Hancock) County, where he entered land and they lived the remainder of their lives.

By industry and good management he prospered. Built a water-mill near his home which became a thriving business. He acquired other land till he owned a body four miles long, northeast by southwest, and one and one-half miles wide, about 3800 acres. He died, age about sixty, about 1835, the result of an injury caused from a fall while taking a barrel of corn up a stairs in his mill. She died several years later. Both buried in Ramsey Cemetery, near where they lived.

The Ramsey's were of Scotch-Irish descent (See note 33, page 95 for Scotch-Irish). They trace their ancestry to the Highlands of Scotland. The first of which the writer has record is ——— Ramsey, who married Alice Bower, daughter of a Derbyshire instructor of mines. He was manager of Lord Hopetouns mines at Leadhills, Parish of Crawford.

Their son, Allan, born, October 15, 1868, became one of the early Scotch poets. His literary career begun with the humble duties as a book-seller. To this he added a circulating library, the first in Scotland. His earliest poems were written, 1712-'15; His first important publication was a collection edition of his poems in 1721, on which he realized 4400 guineas. (About $1866.66.)

In 1724, he published an anthology of Scottish and English songs, called Tea-Table Miscellany, in which he included many of his own compositions. This word proved very popular, so much so, that the ninth edition was published, 1794, long after the author's death.

The writer happens to possess a copy of this last edition, printed in Dublin, and which was given to Mary (Polly) Ramsey by her grandfather. His grandfather was a brother of the author. This last grandfather whose christian name has not been learned, brother of Allan, was probably the emigrant to Ireland from Scotland

Children of Josiah and Elizabeth Ramsey were as follows:

1. Elizabeth, born about 1790, Married Isam Wheelis. Lived, Claiborne County. Known two sons, Josiah and William. One daughter, married ——— Light in Iowa. Josiah married Jane Hamblen.4 William lived, Decatur County, Iowa.

2. Eleanor (Ella), married Nealy McNeal. Lived Claiborne County, Tennessee.

3. Mary (Polly), never married.

4. Margaret (Peggy), never married. These two maiden sisters inherited their father's homestead on which they lived till their deaths, early 1830s.

5. Thomas, married Anna Hopkins, b Jan. 25, 1807. Moved, 1850 to Iowa. Settled in Decatur County. Died, Aug. 18, 1872, at Bentonville, Ark., while travelling as a huckster. Their children: James, b" 1825, Armin, Alexander, Josiah, Nervesta, Henderson, Franklin, Rachel, Cowen and William.

6. James, b. Nov. 25, 1803. Married, Sarah Baker. He weighed 212 lbs. Operated overshot water-mill from waters of large spring near his father's home. Their children: Josiah, John, James, (father of Hilton) Alvise, Ruhema, and Josephine. He died, April 13, 1866. She, September 18, 1877.

7. Phoebe, never married. Had one son, Calvin.

8. Josiah, married Sarah Sims. Lived near father's home. No children.

9. David, born October 25, 1810. Married Eleanor Hamblen.4

10. Rachel, died in her teens. Was lovely singer.

11. Sarah, born, September 18, 1811. Married, James Campbell Hamblen.4

12. Ruth, born August 1, 1813. Married David Russell Hamblen.4

13. William married Nancy Clouse. Lived on part of his father's homestead. Died January, 1873. Children: Josiah, Jesse, Margaret, Oliver, William, Clinton, Alexander and Elizabeth.

The numerous inter-marriages with the Hamblens named in this Ramsey family are fully reported in their proper order, for which see index.

They lived there till the early part of 1850 when he moved with his family to Iowa. This trip was made in company with his two brothers-in-law, Josiah Wheens and Thomas Ramsey, starting on a flatboat, which they themselves built and launched on Powells River, Lee County, near where they lived. After the three families and their effects were placed on the boat and all was ready, they drifted down this stream into the Clinch and on into the Tennessee. This river they kept till Paducah, Kentucky was reached. Here they sold the flatboat and took passage on a steamboat up the Mississippi to Alexander, Missouri. Here they took wagons and drove overland to Drakeville, Davis County, Iowa, some sixty miles distant, where they established homes.

Sarah, his wife, died March 18, 1854. The home was still maintained in Davis County. In the fall of 1860, he came to the home of his brother, David R. Hamblen, in Brown County, Indiana, and stayed till the following spring, when he returned to Iowa, with the intention of moving his family to Indiana.

He started with them and came to Sangamon County, Illinois, near Springfield, where his married daughter, Malinda, now lived. While here he contracted typhoid fever and died, January 14, 1863. Was buried there.

[48] DAVID RUSSELL HAMBLLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, September 22, 1809, on Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia, where he was reared to manhood.

Received but little schooling. Often related that he never went to a regular school but two weeks during his youth. However, he acquired a fair education through his own efforts. Was a splendid reader, wrote a good hand, spelled fair and calculated well the ordinary sums met in his vocation. He was ever a student. The writer remembers observing him in his advanced years, peering deep into the limited supply of books of the sciences of our school days.

Through the school of experience he acquired a knowledge of the philosophy of worldly and spiritual affairs that made him a man of science. His ingenuity lead him through problems that proved without solution to many. His industrious habits assisted him to thrive where others might have failed. What he did was well done. His self established motto was a gem of a sage; oft repeated and always followed:

"A thing worth doing, is worth doing well!"

In political faith he was an uncompromising Jacksonian Democrat. Cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson for president, 1832, and his last one for Grover Cleveland, November, 1892, and every one of his party's candidates in between, including Horace Greely in 1872.

During his youth he learned the shoemaker's trade in his father's shop and was quite apt in its pursuit. He never did any actual military duty, but during his early manhood, Virginia still held the old time "Muster Day" requirement; that all able-bodied men were required to report on certain days and drill in military tactics. In this service he was quite active and held some office, probably sergeant, in his home organization.

He learned to play the violin when a small boy. At the age of seventeen he sent by his home merchant, Robert M. Bales, to Baltimore and purchased a violin which he named "Betty". This instrument continued to be almost his daily companion the remainder of his life. It, yet, 1934, remains in possession of his descendants (the writer) and is pronounced by experts to have exceptional quality of tone, and to be of considerable value.

His performance on this instrument brought high compliments from professional, as well as joy to the amateur, admirer of violin music. He could not read the written scale, but possessed a vocabulary in memory that, it was claimed by some of his friends, he could recite some seven or eight hundred compositions in his playing.

His mirthful stories and humorous jokes possessed a charm, well worthy of his Irish and Scotch ancestry, that made his company an endless source of joy. *

On occasion when a young man, he, in company with a couple of friends, one named Bud Mohan, made an adventurous trip over into Kentucky to the camps along the line where the first railroad west of the Alleghny Mountains, and the second to be built in America, was being built between Lexington and Frankford. They decided to stay awhile and engage in the construction work going on. While there the

* Note 61. One of his favorite stories was in connection with a negro insurrection that took place in Virginia during the summer of 1831. White men volunteered with a rush to different centers to organize service to quell the uprising. All the Ramsey men folks (see note 60) made haste to the "front". Their families were all taken to the father, Josiah's, home as a safety measure.

David R. was chosen to stay behind and act as home guard. Great excitement prevailed, and all day long, squads of men passed the Ramsey home on their way east. Grandmother Elizabeth, wiry old Irish lady that she was, kept the women folks busy preparing eatables to supply the men as they passed.

She stood at the gate with her pans of food and as the men came by, gave them a supply and admonition in these words, using her Irish brogue:

"Help yer-self bois! Take plenty and bey on yer way to help fight the nasty niggers."

Storms have raged and winters fell, historic "falling of stars" took place, November 13, 1833. Some of his experience during this phenomenon is given in the note below. *
Yet it remains, you can read it well.

He married, January 8, 1835, in Claiborne (now Hancock County, Tennessee, Ruth Ramsey, born, August 1, 1813, on Mulberry Creek, Claiborne County, daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth (Cowen) Ramsey.†

They established residence on part of the Ramsey homestead, where he became the owner of what was probably the original Ramsey watermill. This he operated as a grist and sawmill combined and in connection a distillery at one time. At this he prospered and did well till 1846.

He had become one of the bondsmen for one of his brothers-in-law who held an office of considerable trust. This brother-in-law failed to meet his obligations in some way, which the bondsmen had to make good. The amount was large enough that David R. had to dispose of his mill and other property to meet the obligation.

On account of this misfortune he moved from the locality to a place on his father's homestead in Lee County, Virginia, and took charge of the

* Note 62. The railroad camp comprised some three hundred men, mostly Irish and Kentucky back woodsmen. They were housed in large, low log lodges with a big fireplace and chimney at one end. Forty or fifty men slept in the one that accommodated Hamblen and his friends.

One elderly Irishman was always first to rise and revive the big log fire of mornings. This he did on this November morning. He stepped out of the door and to his surprise, beheld the amazing spectacle of thousands of stars falling. It frightened him so, that he turned, ran into the house and jumped in the bed beside his bunk-mate, one John Daismukes, groaning and taking on at a terrible rate, crying: "Lord, have mercy on John Daismukes!"

John, desirous to know the cause of his friend's trouble, was informed: "Get up and look out! The stars of heaven are falling, and will be knee-deep upon the ground before morning!"

John went out, looked, and came back, fell upon his knees and began to pray, for the first time in his life. This aroused all the camp. Soon a general panic ensued.

One of Hamblen's companions was a class leader in the church at home. He was beseeched to lead the praying, which became general. This exercise served to allay the sudden fear and order was somewhat restored.

David R., being of Scotch-Irish descent, ever alert to the humorous, caught a dialogue going on in the midst of the excitement between a pair of bed-fellows. They were attempting to allay thier fears by resorting to the ever-ready jug of liquor, cure-all of that day. They were sitting on their bunk and had taken a drink each from their jug. One of the men snuffed thru his nose before speaking. His friend's name was Fanoy.

Said the snuffing man: "Sn'f! Sn'f! Mighty scarey time, Mr. Fanoy! Sn'f! Sn'f! Mighty scarey time! Do you reckon another little dram will hurt us?"

As daylight came on and the stars faded from view, fear gradually wore off from the camp. However, the usual swearing and rowdyism was crueltail for that day and it was several days before the camp was back to "normal" in that line.

farm. By good management and industry he soon acquired a new start and prospered. He bought a tract of 15 acres which lay a short distance northwest of his father's land, but never moved on it.

After about twelve years residence here the call of the great west reached the community. Kansas was then the great opening country, and he decided to move there and try his fortunes.

During the fall of 1857 he made ready for the trip to Kansas. He built a new wagon, being assisted by a neighbor, Solomon Hobbs, and his brother, Williamson. This was furnished with the customary wooden bows and covered by a home-made flax linen sheet.

When all was ready, household articles and bedding were loaded in. A tent, also of flax linen, was taken along for sleeping quarters. On October 23, (1857) the start was made. Three horses were used to the wagon. One at the end of the tongue. Robert, the son, did most of the driving, with the mother and girls riding. The father and other two boys walker.

The route lay through the Cumberland Gap and over the trail laid out by Daniel Boone, ie: Pineville, Barbourville, London, Mt. Vernon, Richmond, Lexington, Kentucky, to Madison and Columbus, Indiana.

After three weeks' travel, they arrived at the home of his brother, the Rev. William Hamblen, on Salt Creek, Brown County. It had been the arrangement that the brother, William, would be ready and join the move on to Kansas with David and his family. Unfortunately, the mother, Ruth, had taken sick, soon after leaving Virginia and was very poorly at the end of this journey. To attempt further progress was impossible. So a house was secured near where his brother lived, where they decided to remain till spring came.

David secured employment at clearing land and making rails, during the winter that followed. When spring came (1858) Mrs. Hamblen had failed to regain her health and the Kansas trip was postponed, with a hope to continue it the following autumn. David R. rented land, planted and raised a crop during the spring and summer.

Fall came and the wife was still ailing. The Kansas trip was abandoned entirely. Mrs. Hamblen did not fully recover her health for four years. During the winter of 1859, he made a trip back to Virginia to visit his father and mother. He walked the entire distance, four hundred miles, and was on the road two weeks, each way.

They lived at the first location on Salt Creek till March, 1861, when he rented the John Millsap farm about two miles up the creek, (sw, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 1, tp. 9, r. 3e). It was a good farm and he prospered on it as he had, also on the other. The creek valley had caused a great deal of sickness in his family, so he decided to buy a hill farm nearby, which was offered for sale in the fall of 1863.

This land he bought, 80 acres (sw, ne-nw, se $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 2, tp. 9, r3 e). During the winter, 1863-'64, he rebuilt the small log house on his new lands, made other improvements about the place and in the early spring (1864) moved his family to it.

During these later years, the great war between the States had been raging. In its issues he had taken as near a neutral stand as possible. His beloved Virginia and Tennessee were gripped in its fangs. His kinsmen and friends were suffering and dying in their homes and on the battle fields. His sympathies were largely with these, but he desired not to be disloyal to his lately adopted home.

His two older sons, who were of military age, had taken the same stand and remained at home. They could not shoulder arms against their near kinsmen and boyhood chums. Yet fate elected to alter, even this humanitarian stand. The draft came and one son drew a number that said, "go". The other stood subjected to the next turn of the wheel.

Something must be done. They chose what they considered the lesser of the two evils. They would not fight their own dearest relatives and friends. The mother told them: "I don't blame you! I would die first!" The seal was one! The father was without sufficient means, but a mortgage was placed on the home. The boys fled to strange lands. One to Illinois and the other to Iowa till the conflict was ended.

Thus his plans for improvement of the new homestead were broken into. Yet he plodded on patiently, clearing, fencing and raising what crop he could with the assistance of his youngest son. The two cut and hewed timbers for a new and better residence, which was completed after the "boys" returned from their unfortunate sojourn, 1866.

During the fall of 1867 he made another trip to Lee County, Virginia, to visit his mother. Probably to help her arrange her estate, since his father had died the spring prior.

Considerable prosperity followed during the next few years, but the war mortgage was never lifted from the home. Yet, the farm, to which another 40 acres was added, 1866, was well improved by the time 1873 was reached. The new dwelling, although built of hewn logs, was sightly and comfortable, with its well built stone chimney and fireplace and frame addition that served as a dining room and kitchen.

The barn covered a large space with cribs, haymows, sheds and stalls for animals and tools. Numerous out-buildings stood around. The fields were well laid out and strongly fenced, and produced well of grain and hay. A moderate number of horses, cattle sheep, pigs and barn-yard fowls supplid their places.

The yard was filled with a choice selection of the old-time flowers. The vegetable garden, neatly fenced, yielded bountifully a variety of berries and fresh eatables. The orchards bore an abundance of the choicest fruits. In all it was a typical American home. It had reached its zenith and must break at this period.

The mother, Ruth, contracted illness on August 2nd, and passed away on the 7th, 1874, from the effects of inflammation of the bowels. This was the breaking point in his home and the beginning of the end of what success he had attained.

His youngest son was married in December, following. The youngest daughter soon afterwards. In the fall of 1876 he sold his farm to his son, Robert, and son-in-law, John W. Satterthwaite. They took possession of the home, but he continued to live with them.

In September, 1879, Satterthwaite sold his interest in the farm and moved with his family to Shelby County, Illinois. David R. went with them, but returned to Indiana about a year later. In the spring of 1881, he went to Illinois again and stayed till fall when he returned.

About the middle of February, 1882, he went again to Illinois and did not return till January, 1884. While in Illinois he made his home with his daughter, Ella Satterthwaite. From this time on he made his home with his son, Williamson, who had moved away from the old home place.

While on the last above visit to Illinois the following extracts from one of his letters are taken. It reflects a lot, the type of man that he was. It is copied just as he wrote it, except that some capitalization and punctuation has been corrected:

Williamson and Eunice Hamblen.

Dear children:—

Once more I am permitted to write you one more letter to let you know that I have not forgotten you and that you still have a place in my heart, tho the distance that separates us at this time does not prevent the parental affection towards you, my children, from passing swiftly to your home where with anticipated joy meet the embraces of the loved ones.

Now I will say to you that my health is moderately good at this time. Hoping that this letter will * * * find all of you sharing with me this blessing. * * *

The wheat of this country is about * * * The corn crop of this neighborhood is as fine as could be wished for. This is a beautiful country to farm in, attended with advantages that is not where you live. I wish you had the money for your land and stock and was here, for I know you could do better.

The health of this country is equal as good here as it is where you live, and all the time a more plentiful country. Then, where you live more convenient now, than that can ever be. The people is kind here as any where. The laws of the state is better in every instant, taxation is low and easy paid.

The plan of salvation is preached here, is the same as it is there, the moral condition of the country is equal as good as that, notwithstanding there is some neckle (in) people in all and every country.

There is several different denominations of professons of Christian worship here so we need not miss a Sunday if we chocse to go to preaching or Sunday school. These conveniences is hear all the same as there, so taking all there eqnel advantages combined I would rather be here.

You will please write me in haste * * * how you are gitting along * * * how much wheat will you have when thrashed? * * * I cannot tell how soon I will be at home, but some time this fall before the weather gets cold.

You will please see my two brothers, present my best respects to them both, to your aunt Nancy, then to Larkin Brewer and Rachel and children. * * *

Now I agan ask you to write in haste, give me all the important news if any. No more at present but remain your father till death.

David R. Hamblen to Williamson and Eunice Hamblen."

A celebration of his 76th birth anniversary was held, September 22, 1885, by a large concourse of his friends and relatives, at his former home and homestead, at this time owned and occupied by his son, Robert. It was a historic gathering, where at, for the last time, there met many of the older heads of prominent families of the community who had been for many years fast friends, and that meeting, at his once prosperous home where they had been entertained in years past, by him. Soon after this the old home passed into other hands, never again to reflect its former glory.

In a few days after this he went to Illinois and stayed till the next March 1886. After this return he lived with his son, Williamson, and assisted with the farm work, ever apparently happy and contented, with excellent health and strength for a man of his years.

He made one more visit to Illinois, in the spring of 1889. Returned the next fall. After this time his advanced age began to take effect and almost imperceptibly failure came on. By the middle of January, 1893, the ebb broke and he was a sick man, almost for the first time in 83 years. Medical aid furnished no stay.

He passed away on February 19, 1893. At his funeral, his brother, the Rev. William Hamblen, offered the following tribute in defense of his spiritual preparedness: (Read by Rev. W. H. Harrison, who conducted the services.)

"He did not join in Christian fellowship with any religious organization. The Methodist Episcopal Church South was his preference.

"He had implicit confidence in the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. He believed in, one only, living and true God. He believed that Jesus Christ is the only begotten Son of God. He believed in the Holy Ghost, that He is the efficient agent in the awakening justification and sanctification of them that believe. He believed in the resurrection of the body, and life everlasting.

"Hence, we who are the survivors, have no doubt of his readiness to depart and be with Christ, which is better. He gave his two sons and other friends undoubted evidence that he was contemplating the glories and happiness in an undying land.

"This writer, (Rev. William) with others, the day previous to his death, wirshipped within the family circle. During the moments in prayer, he offered up a solemn and devout prayer to Almighty God for the blessings of Peace and Grace to rest upon them."

His remains were laid to rest in the Taggart Cemetery, Hemblen Township, Brown County, where his wife was also interred. A number of his grandchildren, 1920, contributed funds and erected an enduring monument from native stone, at his burial place.

[49] ELEANOR HAMBLEEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born March 22, 1811, in Lee County, Virginia, where she was reared to womanhood.

Married, May 9, 1833, in Lee County, David Ramsey, born, October 25, 1810, in Claiborne County, Tennessee, son of Josiah and Elizabeth (Cowen) Ramsey.*

They lived on part of the original Ramsey homestead in, by that time, Hancock County, Tennessee. Their children born there were:

During the War between the States he withheld from military duty till the fall of 1863, when swarms of Union forces threatened their entire homeland. He finally, along with every available man, of the community, young or old, enlisted in the Confederate States Army, October 8, 1863, in Lee County, Virginia, in Company I, 25th Virginia Cavalry (Formerly, Co. I, 27th Battalion Va. Cavalry.)

At the time of his enlistment the Union General Burnside was making a drive with 25,000 men, had captured the Confederate stronghold of Cumberland Gap, near his home, and was pressing the Confederate army through his very community, East Tennessee and advancing on Knoxville, which he succeeded in occupying in the fall of 1863.

The command to which David Ramsey belonged was rushed toward Knoxville and took part in the siege conducted against the Union forces, who were forced to confine themselves to the inner defenses of that city.

Much hard fighting was engaged in in trying to retake the city but Burnside's men held out till December 4, 1863, when General Sherman arrived with a strong force which compelled General Longstreet to withdraw his forces.

The 25th Cavalry fell back toward Cumberland Gap, where in an engagement near his own home February 4, 1864, he was taken prisoner.

He was sent immediately to Louisville (Kentucky) Military Prison and from there, on February 11th was sent on to Rock Island Barracks, Illinois, where he was confined in prison. Here he contracted disease, either variola (smallpox) or measles and died, March 7, 1864. Is buried in the Confederate Cemetery at Rock Island.

After his death and the war was over, the mother held the younger members of her family together the best she could but sorrow and disease reduced her strength which resulted in her death, December 29, 1868. She was probably buried in the Ramsey Cemetery, Hancock County.

Married, about 1838, Sarah Rose, who was probably born and reared in the same locality. He lived most of his married life on part of his father's farm. His wife died during the year 1856, but he, with his daughters, continued to live on his father's land.

Their children were:

For all that a battle ground lay almost at his door he avoided military service during the War between the States till August, 1863, he enlisted in Company K. 13th Kentucky Cavalry, Confederate States Army, under Capt. James Hurd of Kentucky, who was probably stationed at Cumberland Gap.

This was near the time when the Union General Burnside occupied the latter stronghold with a large force and all Lee County was threatened by invasion. Every available man was enlisted for defense of their homes. However, the main body of the Federal army moved on south from the Gap into Tennessee. Capt Hurd's company seems to have been used to guard the country eastward.

During the fall of 1863, about 200 Union recruits from East Tennessee were making their way across Lee County and were camped nearing Ewing. Capt. Hurd's Company and part of Capt. Shelby Gibson's Company, 25th Cavalry was sent to intercept them. They were attacked near Ball's Bridge on Indian Creek about one-half mile west of Rose Hill.

Being raw men and many of them without arms they were easily stampeded. Many took flight, several were wounded and quite a number taken prisoner. Of the Confederates, one man was wounded by a shot and one, Bradford Campbell, was captured.

The prisoners were confined, under guard, in the Methodist Church, west of Rose Hill, during the night after the capture and private George Hamblen was one of the guards.

Some time during the first of the year 1864, Capt. Hurd's Com-

any was disbanded and part of his men transferred to Capt. Shelby Gibson's Company and some to Capt. "Dock" Bishop's Company of the 25th, Cavalry. During the transfers Uncle George was released from further service and returned home.

It is presumed that he was released, partly on account of his age and possibly mostly on account of the condition of his home affairs. His three living children were alone. Two widowed sisters with children were at the aged father's and mother's home with no other men-folks to attend their needs in any way. He often described the hardships of the Lee County homes during the remaining years of the war and afterward.

In October, 1869, with two of his daughters, his mother and a sister, he moved by team and wagon to Brown County, Indiana. He never established a home in Indiana, but sought employment on the farm among relatives in both Brown and Johnson Counties.

While on a visit at the home of a niece and husband, Martha and John B. Craven in Hamblen Township, Brown County, he was attacked by acute indigestion and died December 24, 1883. Was buried in the Taggart Cemetery in the same township.

[51] REV. WILLIAM HAMBLÉN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, July 31, 1814, on Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia, where he was reared to manhood. His schooling was quite limited, but he was given better opportunity in that line than his older brothers. His natural bent was more toward educational matters than most of the other brothers and sisters of the family.

He learned the shoemakers trade in his father's shop and was quite skillful at the art of boot and shoe making. At the age of twenty-two, 1836, he emigrated to Brown County, Indiana, riding horseback all the way. Soon after his arrival he obtained employment as a shoemaker in the establishment of James Parmelee, who operated a tannery and manufactured shoes in connection. Location, western Hamblen Township on Beanblossom Creek, place afterward bearing the name, "The Tanyard."

Mr. Parmelee, who came from the leather and shoe manufacturing center of the New England states, paid William the tribute of being the most proficient workman in leather he had ever known.

While working here he met and married, January 10, 1838, Nancy Ann Goforth, born March 20, 1818, daughter of William and Geriah (Barns-Mullis) Goforth. *

* Note 65. William Goforth was probably born in North Carolina, during the period 1785-1795. From there he moved to Tennessee, probably in his youth. He had one brother, Preston, that is known of. Preston moved to Fulton County, Illinois, near Lewistown, where he died prior to 1856. He had two sons, Robert and Andrew, who were both Baptist ministers. They visited their Indiana relatives about 1850.

Jonathan C. Goforth of Bloomington, Illinois, when writing about them, 1923, said: "My father had three cousins living in Fulton County * * * They were all Baptist ministers. Their families all left Fulton County, many years ago, going to Missouri, Iowa and * * * Texas" (Goforth history continued bottom of next page.)

They established residence on the farm, close to and southeast from what was later the Dowden school-house, voting place, west precinct of Hamblen Township. He continued to work at his trade at the Parmerlee Tanyard. Later, 1841, they moved on the Parmerlee lands, east side of road, about three-eighths mile north of the Parmerlee shops.

He probably tired of his many years at the shoemaking trade and moved, 1844, from the locality several miles, to a place on the east prong of Salt Creek, near where later stood the Salt Creek Valley or O'Haver Church in Hamblen Township.

While living at this place, the War with Mexico began, and on June 10, 1846, he enlisted at Nashville in Captain James Taggart's, Company E, Third Indiana Infantry. During the organization of the Company he was elected as one of the six Corporals, probably due to experience he had at the "muster day" drills while a young man in Virginia.

On June 14th the Governor ordered the company to proceed forthwith to old Fort Clark, New Albany, Indiana, the place of rendezvous. They left on the following day.

They had purchased uniforms of light blue jeans and styled themselves, "Brown County Blues", a name by which they were known all thru the war. This company also became noted in the army as being the "tallest" company in the whole army. Its average height was over six feet. A large crowd assembled at Nashville to see them off, in wagons to Columbus. From there they went by railroad to Madison.* Boat to New Albany.

The Company was mustered in at New Albany on June 18th, under Colonel James H. Lane. They were assigned to the Indiana Volunteer camp, a beautiful site situated on the Ohio River, about one mile up the river from the city which was named Camp Whitecomb, in honor of James Whitecomb, governor of the state at that time.

From Tennessee, where he was probably married, William Goforth moved to Kentucky where his wife died. They had two children. He then moved to Indiana where he married, second, Geriah (nee Barnes) widow of John(?) Mullis.

She had four children: John, Sarah, Elizabeth and James. They were living on Bean Blossom Creek near Parmerlee's Tanyard during the early 1830's. He was an employee at the Tanyard.

The children of William and Geriah were:

- (1.) Preston, born, June 11, 1807, (2.) Catherine, (3.) Sarah,
- (4.) Nancy Ann, " Mar. 16, 1813,
- (5.) Richard, " Dec. 25, 1821. (6.) Rebecca.

Preston, Nancy Ann and Richard married into the Hamblen family.

Catherine, married Levi Hatten and moved to Shelby County, Illinois probably in the 1850's. Died there. Had no children.

Sarah, married David Crouch, one of the early settlers of Washington Township, Brown County. One daughter, married Philip Pike and their son, David Pike, was a well known citizen of that Township. Died about 1900.

Rebecca, married Daniel Matney.

The elder William Goforth and his wife Geriah moved to Shelby County, Illinois, with their son, Richard, about 1856, where he died prior to 1858. She died early 1870's. Both buried in the Cutler Cemetery about two miles west of Shelbyville, Illinois.

* Note 66. This was the only railroad in Indiana at that time, extended from Madison to Edinburg, Johnson County.

The Third Indiana regiment to which the Brown County, Company E* belonged remained at Camp Whitecomb till in July, being subjected to constant parades and discipline to fit it for the activities of war.

* Note 67. A complete roster of Company E is given for the reason of the unusual relationship that existed between so many of its members at the time of enlistment and later more developed by intermarriage, including the Hamblen family. Also because so many of its members were of Brown County's leading citizens and later became heads of many of its most prominent families.

Orders were issued for the Third regiment to decamp on July 9th, at which time they took passage on the steam-boat, James Hewitt, and cast astream. All went well except there was considerable sickness. They passed Vicksburg on the 13th. Caleph C. Bedwell of Company E. died that day.

Arrived at New Orleans on the 15th. There they were transferred to ocean steamers and left New Orleans on the 17th. Part of the Third Indiana was on the ship Flavio and some on other ships. The trip was described as a rough sail and there was quite a good deal of sickness among the troops.

Measles broke out and three men, Corporal Joshua Brummet, Reece Brummett and John Followell, died from them while enroute on the gulf. Corporal William Hamblen became very sick and often related his experiences while on the ship. The rough and stormy gulf made him sea-sick. The captain of the vessel told him to go and stand by the ship's mast and hold to it tightly and that would accustom him to the ship's motion. This he did but it gave him no relief. He arrived in camp very sick and weakened.

The Flavio cast anchor off the Island of Brazos Santiago, five miles from Point Isabel, Texas, on July 21, but some of the ships did not arrive till the 27th and 28th. The Indiana troops remained in camp on Brazos Santiago till August 2nd, when they were taken off and landed again at the mouth of the Rio Grande River about seven miles distant.

From here they marched up the river about eight miles where Camp Belknap near Barita, Texas, was established in chapparral about a mile from the Rio Grande. It was a pleasant location at first, but in a few days there was a rise in the river and the stream overflowed so that drinking water could not be obtained without wading a muddy pond half a mile wide. The weather was hot and sickness soon set in. At one time there was barely enough well ones to wait on the sick.

By October 14th, two of Company E had died and seventeen had been discharged and sent home. During the last of October the regiment was moved to Palo Alto, a most beautiful location, dry and nice. The sick men rapidly recovered. Here they remained till the latter part of October when the regiment was moved to Matamoras, Mexico, about forty miles distant, where they went into camp at Camp Clark.

Corporal William Hamblen* never fully regained his health after his experience during the voyage on the Gulf of Mexico and was on the sick list up until this time, although at times he could perform some

* Note 68. In later years the Rev. William Hamblen loved to repeat an anecdote of the army camp in Mexico, thus: While strolling among his comrades one day at mess time he came across private William G. Hatchet. He was sitting flat upon the ground. Hatchet had a tool, a hatchet, with the blade drove in the ground, poll up. He had another 'hatchet' in his hand pounding away at a piece of army 'hard tack'. Corporal Hamblen had to laugh and remarked, "Well, I never saw three 'hatchets' working together before!"

was soon to move on into Mexico for active duty he felt that it was his duty to relinquish his office. So on October 24, 1846, he resigned and was relieved, but moved on to Matamoras with the army.

From Camp Clark one soldier wrote home on November 19th and said: "Our regiment (3rd Ind.) is a fine state of military discipline and is as orderly and obedient as any regulars * * * We can say with propriety * * * is among the best drilled * * * regiments in the service."

Near the first of December (1846) the Third Indiana embarked on the Rio Grande and shipped to Camargo, Mexico, about 100 miles up the river. William Hamblen's condition failed to make improvement, rendering him unfit to move further, so he was left behind, and as soon as he was able to travel was given discharge on December 14, 1846.

He at once returned home, probably by the same water route that he came. Arrived in Brown County about Christmas time. His wife, Nancy, with her three children, had moved to the home of her father, William Goforth, who lived on the bank of Salt Creek, near where later stood the Prosser Mill. He was yet in bad health and did not fully recover for a year or more. A son, Richard P. was born a short time before his return.

In a short time he moved his family to a house that stood at the foot of the Mt. Zion Hill in Hamblen Township. During the fall of 1847 he went on some government land on the high hill about a mile west of this place and built a nice hewed log house and moved his family there. In the spring of 1849 he was issued a government military bounty land warrant, good for 160 acres of land.

This warrant he applied on the lands where he was then living under location No. 9731, on May 1, 1849. Description: s $\frac{1}{2}$, nw $\frac{1}{2}$, sw, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, nw, sw $\frac{1}{4}$, section 35, tp. 10 n, range 3e, 160 acres. Patent issued April 1, 1851.*

He lived here till 1851 or '52 when he sold this land and bought land on Big Salt Creek about three miles south, (sw, se $\frac{1}{4}$, sec. 11, twp. 9, r 3,) and other lands adjoining. Later this land was known as the Marion F. (Bnd) Henderson farm).

During the later 1840's or early '50's he joined the church, the United Brethern denomination which had established itself in the upper Salt Creek community under the leadership of the Taggarts, Hamblens and Weddles. In a short time he became inspired with the idea to become a minister and began as a local preacher.

His talent in that vocation soon developed to where it attracted the attention of the officials of the conference and he was given a circuit. He made marked progress with the work. The earliest record of his performing the marriage ceremony, that has been found, was September 16, 1855, when he officiated at the wedding of Peter Anspach and Armilda Barnett, the latter his first cousin.

About the year 1855 a split came between different factions of the U. B. Church and one branch took the name, Evangelical Republican United Brethren in Christ. The Rev. Hamblen chose his lot with this branch, as did most of the local ministers and membership of northern Brown County. He was an accredited full preacher from the beginning in the new organization and given a circuit.

During the year 1856 his circuit probably lay in Shelby County and one of his preaching points was the Lewis Creek U. B. Church, located about three miles northwest of the town of Flat Rock. While he was minister in charge at this place a new church was built on the Rev. Samuel Higgin's land and a strong membership built up. † About the same time another of his preaching points was at the Barrett school house in northeast Bartholomew County, near the village Burnsville.‡

His travels were performed in the old day "circuit rider" style, on horse-back, with "saddle pockets" for carrying Bible, song books etc. Roads were little improved and there were few bridges in those days. On one occasion when an important appointment called him to Decatur County, when he arrived at the river near the residence of the Rev. George Stotsenberg, near Westport, the stream was almost bank full and considered dangerous to cross. However, his good horse, Charley, was accustomed to such experiences and it was thought a crossing could be made.

When the attempt was made the horse was washed from under the Rev. Hamblen and he was thrown into the roaring waters. Horse and rider, both being good swimmers, succeeded in reaching safety. The Rev. Stotsenberg recovered the saddle-pockets and "sheep-skin" (He may have been riding without a saddle) from a drift nearby and the trip was abandoned till the waters receded.

After occupying a number of circuits located in Bartholomew, Shelby, Ripley and Jackson Counties, he was promoted to Presiding Elder and finally to Superintendent, the highest position in the Conference district.¶

* Note 70. The official of the conference that organized this branch of the church in Brown County was the Rev. William Stewart, of Napoleon, Ripley County, Ind. Other ministers who were prominent and associated with Rev. Hamblen were the Reverends William Taggart, Joseph Rice, Daniel McKinney, Benjamin Comeford and Charles McCarty of Brown County. Reverends Samuel Higgins, John Glass and ——— Reed of Shelby County and the Reverends George Stotsenberg, McKee and Patterson of Decatur County.

† Note 71. This information was furnished, 1925, by Mrs. Harriott Cut-singer, a daughter of the Rev. Samuel Higgins. The original church building was at this time still standing, about 200 yards from where it was built, now the Joseph Scott farm, where it is used as a barn.

‡ Note 72. This information given, 1925 by John W. Hamilton, whose father was John B. Hamilton, a member of his church at whose home the Rev. Hamblen frequently stopped during his preaching appointments.

¶ Note 73. While he was Superintendent the Rev. Charles McCarty, whose circuit was in Crawford County, had instituted such an unusually interesting revival that he sent for the Rev. Hamblen to come and share with him the happy fruits of his efforts. The Rev. Hamblen answered his call and went.

By the year 1869 the Methodist Episcopal Church South advanced its field into southern Indiana where it held strong influence prior to the Civil War. Its forceful ministers from Kentucky and Tennessee made inroads into the membership of the Evangelical organization to where its ascendancy was fast losing.

The Rev. Hamblen had a warm feeling for its doctrines from the reason that it had been the church of his native state, Virginia, during his youthful days. After meeting the Rev. Jacob Ditzler, one of the M. E. Church's brilliant organizers in Shelby County and listening to the rewards that seemed attractive obtaining from services in this strong church, and at the same time realizing the tottering condition of his former charge, he decided to enlist under its banner which he did at once.

He was placed in one of the leading positions as organizer over the Indiana district for the first year, after which he was made Presiding Elder. His talent was highly lauded by the high officials of his newly adopted church and many honors were bestowed upon him. He was seated Bishop pro-tem on several occasions and there was strong sentiment among the ministers to elevate him to the Bishophood.

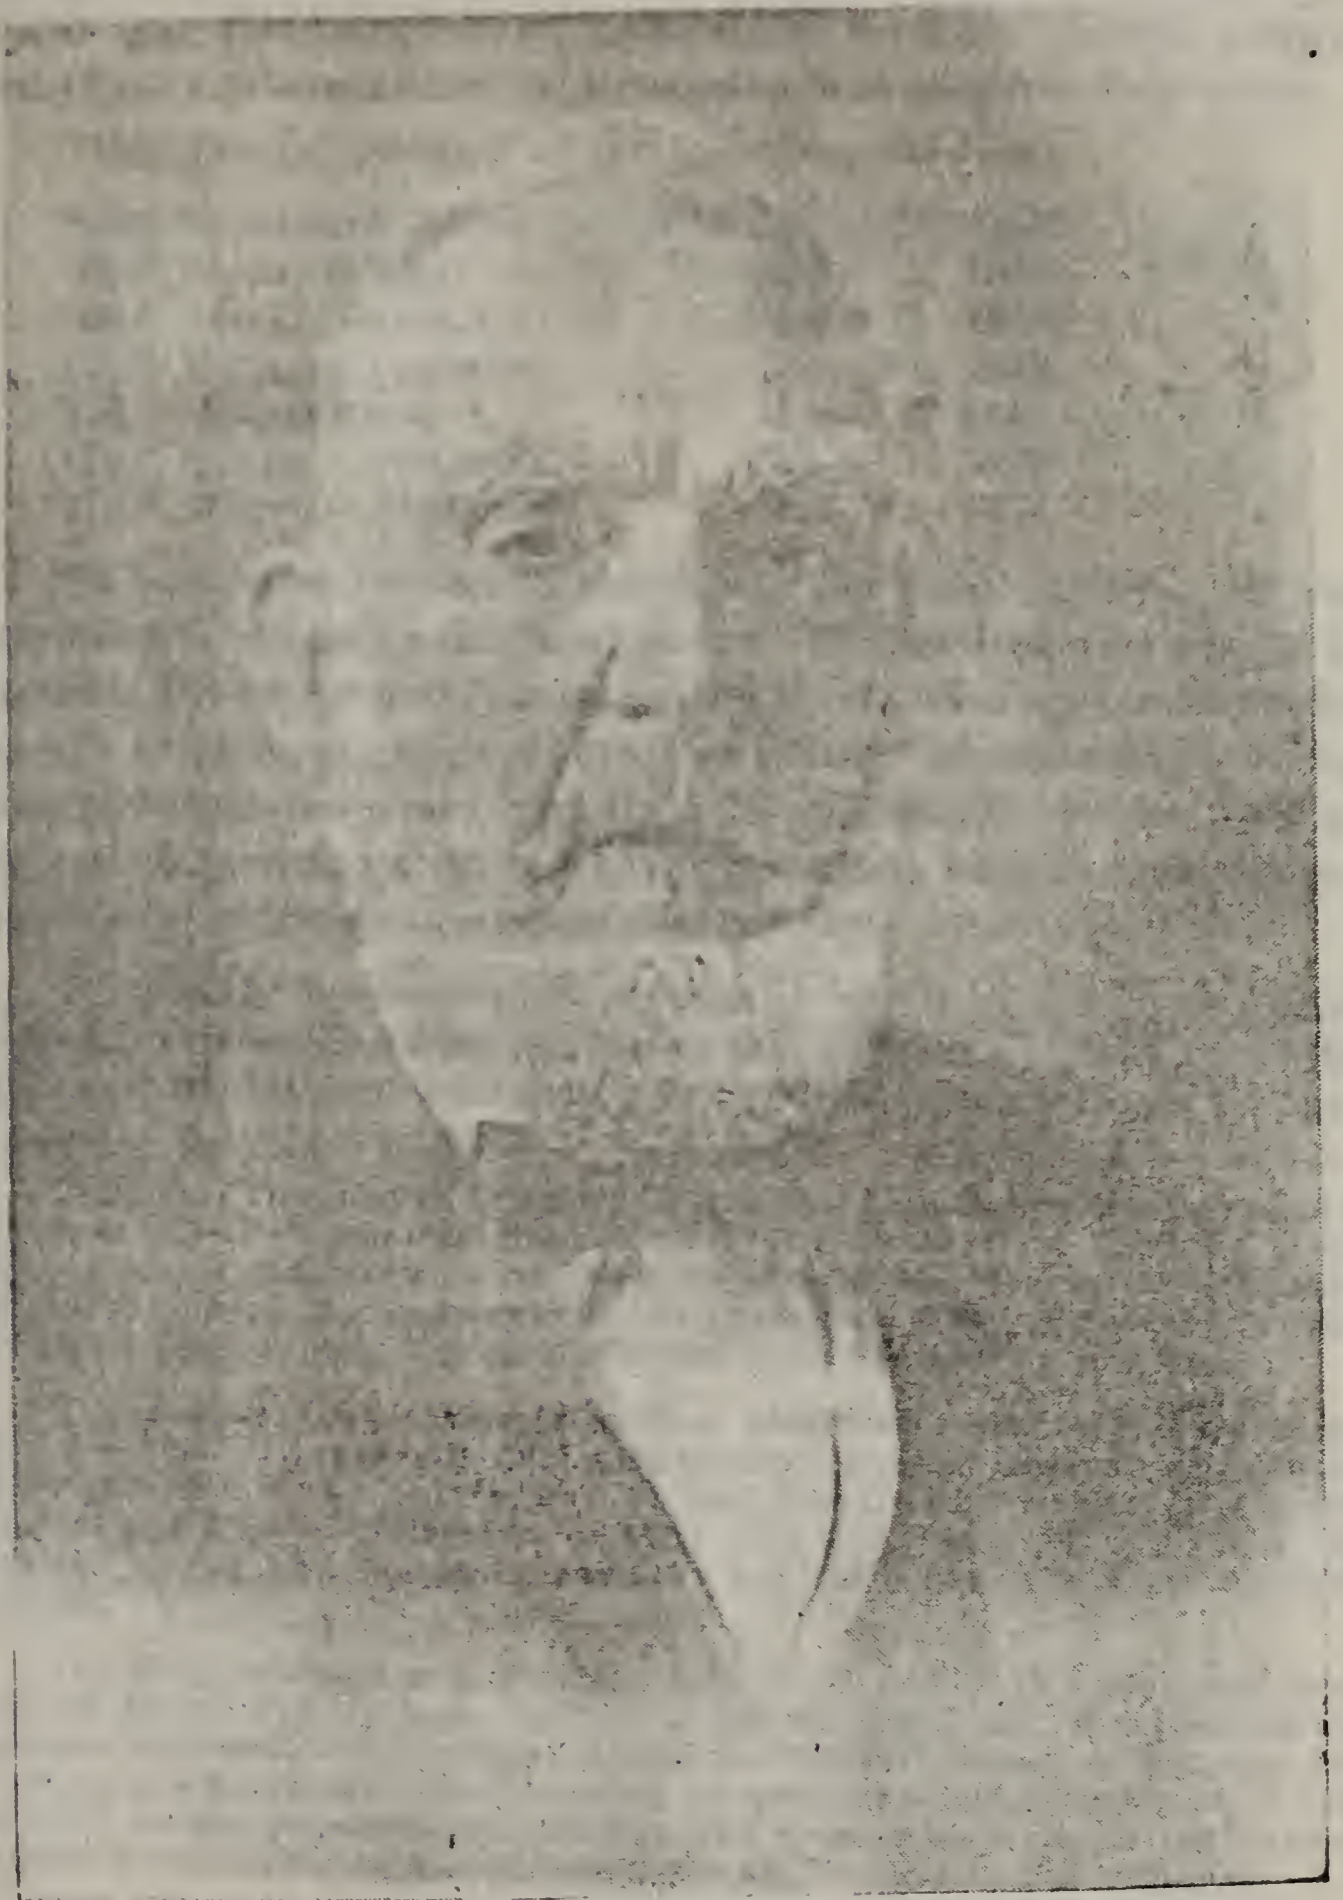

While he fully appreciated the esteem and honors of his colleagues, these high positions did not find a response of joy from that humble inner man that could wear with ease the robes and ostention, of necessity required of the high rank. Again he was reaching the age when the arduous duties that he had performed in the past had worn his physical strength.

His home had been only a stopping place for many years. He loved his church and its duties, yet that human instinct that longs for a day of retirement had its influence. The beam of destiny swung to its equilibrium and he made the request that he be permitted to again retire to his former role of "circuit rider." This wish was granted and he took up this duty for a few more years, when about 1876 or '77 he was placed on the list of Superannuated ministers by the Kentucky Conference, to which Indiana was at that time attached.

During all these years he had maintained his home in Hamblen Township, Brown County, and kept his family on the farm where his boys grew to manhood and cultivated such crops as they could during his absence. He sold the farm on Salt Creek, last mentioned, to the Rev. Samuel Higgins of Lewis Creek, in the latter part of the 1850's.

The family then lived on several different farms in the same locality till about 1862, when he rented a farm in the northern part of Hamblen Township, later where lived his son-in-law, John B. Craven, for many years. Here they lived till about 1874, when he bought 40 acres, (sw. 1/4, sect. 19, twp. 10 n. 4e).

On this land he built a nice hewn log residence and other convenient buildings and entered that retirement and seclusion he so much desired and had so rightly earned. He and his faithful wife, Nancy, lived here the remainder of her lifetime amid these comfortable surroundings. His home became a shrine for his many devoted relatives and friends, where his brilliant company was sought by not a few.

William Hamblin

Their family consisted of the following children:

He never lost interest in the church nor public affairs. He ever continued to conduct ministerial duties. His services were sought for wedding ceremonies and funeral orations. He filled appointments frequently at different points all over the country at places where he had preached in earlier years. At these he was always met by good audiences of admiring friends who considered it good fortune to come once again under his unsurpassed eloquence.

Frequently he assisted in protracted efforts at his home church, Liberty Chappell* (Also known as the Taggart Church) and often delivered special sermons there, where his presence was always a

*Note 74. The Liberty Chappell Church was built during the year 1855 by members of the Evangelical Republican United Brethren in Christ, a strong class of which denomination had been built up in the Taggart and Hamblen community under the leadership of the reverends William Taggart, William Hamblen, Joseph Rice, Daniel McKinney, Charles McCarty and others.

It was a well built frame structure, plastered inside and much larger than most country church buildings of its day. It stood near where Hamblen Creek flowed into the main branch of Salt Creek, about a quarter of a mile west of the Taggart Cemetery, on land (sw, ne¼, sect. 36, twp. 10, r. 3n) donated by the Rev. William Taggart and also bore the name "Taggart Church".

The first public church services held in Hamblen Township and probably in Brown County were held in a log structure that stood within the grounds enclosed at the present within the Taggart Cemetery and was also used for a schoolhouse. This building burned down and it was said to have been set on fire purposely by a teacher who tired of his contract and to avoid further service after he had collected his pay, set fire to the building.

Another log school house was built close to where the church was, later, built. The congregation grew too large to be any longer accommodated in this building, which necessitated the church building. After Liberty Chappell was built, in a short time it had a large membership and was a most thriving church. Great meetings and revivals were held and some of the best preachers of the conference were sent to serve its membership. The annual conference of the Indiana division was at times held there.

About the year 1870, the Methodist Episcopal Church South took over the building as well as the church membership. It again took on a new life and became a noted point under the jurisdiction of this denomination. For the source of joy to the attendants. His last pastoral charge was on the circuit of four churches, of which Liberty Chappel was one, Nashville, Green Valley and Spearsville, the other points, about the years 1886 and '87.

Some unfortunate circumstance had taken the regular appointed minister from the work and the Rev. Hamblen was solicited by the Presiding Elder to accept the charge and fill out the fiscal year. He took up his duties about the first of December and they ended in September following.

This service he performed quite to the pleasure of the churches of the circuit and his work created a new interest all over the circuit. The following year under the leadership of the regular appointed minister the Rev. S. L. C. Coward of Kentucky, a wave of revivals attended the churches of this circuit such as had not been witnessed for several years before.

The revival held at Liberty Chappel during the month of December, 1888 was attended in part by the Rev. Hamblen and he was much elated by the additions to the church roll. Many of them were sons and daughters of his near relatives. At the end of the effort, on December 9th, when the formal baptism of the new class,* something like thirty, was held, pastor Coward invited the Rev. Hamblen to assist with the ceremony, which he accepted.

Beginning at one end of the large circle of candidates kneeling at the church altar he administered the rites by pouring from a vessel a small stream of icy water upon the crown of each convert, at the same time pronouncing in solemn and impressive eloquence the benediction of baptism to a large share of the class.

It is lamented that none of his sermons were ever reduced to writing. They were invariably delivered orally. However, one epistle that is characteristic of his style of delivery is preserved in a letter written to his mother upon the subject of the death of his father, a copy of which follows:—

Next twenty years it was a thriving church. However, by the year 1890, the membership had become quite depleted, from, by death of older members and by emigration of the younger ones to other localities. In a short time after this it was discontinued as a preaching point. The building soon went into bad repair and was ordered torn down by the conference officials. Thus the glory of a once thriving place of worship became a matter of history.

* Note 75. Among the members of this class who were Hamblen relatives were Esther Florence (Pet) Hamblen, David Dudley Hamblen, Leroy Barnhill and the writer. It has always been lamented by him (A. P. H.) that he happened to be on the end of the class not attended by the reverend great uncle William in this service.

"Remembered Mother:—

July 15th, 1867.

After the absence of years, I propose saying to you through the medium of this communication that, that part of my family, now present is in the enjoyment of moderate health.

"Mother, I sympathize with you while in solitude I think of absent children. Three of mine are in the state of Illinois; Mary, John and Richard. Mary and John are married. My wife is now on a visit to possess their company. I was permitted to read yours written and directed to Brother David.

My heart was cheered, mother, to hear of you. Since your probation in this land of conflicts is continued, I realize with you, that here we have no continuing city. Soon all that constitutes this life will with all the living pass into presence of the Invisible, I with you and you with me.

I remember the often admonition of father and mother. I have the voice of father to cheer me no more, he has gone to the city of the dead. Ah! mother, spirit will soon mingle with kindred spirit on the sunkindled coast of immortality. Ah! I soon shall quit this mortal vale, and my spirit mix with yours, mother!

What constitutes my joy amidst disappointment and death, say the resurrection of the just, then all the hope of the future reaches back to the cross of Jesus Christ, his burial, his resurrection from the dead, his ascension and mediation. Mother! Thanks to God! Through Jesus Christ our Lord, then around the cross and around the tomb of Christ our hope clusters.

Our Christ has planted the banner of life and immortality over the tomb. Here we raise our Ebenezer, and stand and rejoice in hope of the Glory of God. Pray on, mother, and soon you will weave your immortal laurels high on the everlasting throne. Peace and Christ be ever with thee! Mother!

Relative to my visiting soon is suspended in uncertainty. If there is no providential intervention, expect me with David.

Yours in the bonds of affection,

William Hamblen to Mother."

Another of his writings preserved is the obituary that he prepared which was read at the funeral discourse for his brother, David, presented, May, 1893. * Some idea may also be gained regarding his manner of expression from the following letter written to his son, Richard P. Hamblen, and family. (Some minor details omitted.)

(Mead, Ind. P. O.)

February 15th, 1892†

I commence this writing to remind you that Christmas has come and gone, New Year, 1892, has ushered in and the promise of your visit is deferred, probably until the next Christmas or New Year. Be it so, my expectation and desire remains steadfast concerning your visit.

* Note 76. This tribute to his brother may be seen, bottom, page 129.

† Note 77. Out of respect for the high esteem held by the writer for the Rev. Hamblen and by him for us, we assume it a duty to correct whatever errors in capitalization, punctuation, spelling and grammatical construction that may have shown in his writings. We are confident he would have expected as much of us. The letter to his mother, 1867, showed only two or three errors, but by the time this one, 1892, was written, in his declining years, frequent errors in spelling and grammar occurred.

"Probably circumstances over which you had no control hindered you from coming. Your mother's expectations ran high anticipating yours and the girls' visiting us and other kindred Christmas and New Years. Just think what a time your mother, and I, had taking in the fixables. They lasted us several days. Don't cry, girls, there is more in the pot! (No more of this sort.)

"I want to know if you have done any work on your church-house? Do you think it will be finished and dedicated to God, for a house in which to worship the great Eternal One?

Another point: Is Bro. S. Gregory preaching for you yet? Is his preaching well received and profitable? Has he taken in any more appointments? If so, where are they located? He has my best wishes. When you see him, give him my kind regards.

I long to see you and yours. Will visit (you) when the season comes. When the winter is past and gone. (When) the flowers appear on the earth and the voice of the turtle (dove) is heard in our land.

Hope you will come soon. May be I will come before you visit us. If I should come in a four horse bus be ready to charter a seat. We'll come Calahootin over the hills. * * *

Since writing you a few thoughts in another sheet, I concluded to add a word in addition, that you may see clearly the travel of thought concerning you. My parental interest for you is constantly increasing for the reason you are bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh.

Much of every one's good or ill fortune depends upon the choice they make of their friends.*

A second reason:—You are bought at a price; even the precious blood of Jesus Christ. Therefor I hope you will participate the benefits of the Blood of Atonement.

Another thought: My care for you follows after you in the inner circles and outward walks of your associations. Therefore be wise unto Salvation. Did you have a good and profitable quarterly meeting? I suppose your Elder was in attendance. Did he set Fire to the living temple? If he did is the light still to be seen, or is yours and their lamps gone out?

Daughters, go forth under the command of the Captain of your salvation, crying victory until your souls are washed in the blood of the Covenant. Write me at once and oblige.

Paternally yours,

W. Hamblen.

This song was inspired by a sermon preached by the Rev. William Hamble at the age of 86 years, to the church at the Truner School-house in Hamble Township, Brown County, Indiana, on May 13, 1900. His theme for the sermon was the divinity of the Bible and he discussed it as a whole. The words of the verses are typical of the periodic phases as he discussed them and the chorus is intended to typify his eloquence. After calling attention to its wonderful popularity and superiority over all the books ever written, he announced that the author had, by only a single volume, competed among the writers of the world, and in that single volume included all the fundamentals of the universe. Taking a copy from the altar he presented it with out-stretched arms to his audience and exclaimed in these words:-

"And God, Himself the author!"

was sent out that the Rev. Hamblen would preach. When the day came, an ideal Sabbath in June, 1893, the building was completely filled, scores of people stood at the doors, windows and about the grounds, to catch a glimpse and hear a word from the noted minister.

His sermon was said to be one of the greatest of his long career, despite his seventy-nine years.

The great sorrow of his life came on in a few months, for his consort, Naney, became afflicted with a hopeless illness, lingered for many months and on July 20, 1894, passed away. After a few months he gave up his home and made his abode among his children and other relatives.

Even yet he accepted invitations to preach at points over the community where he had so long made his home. One among his last efforts was a sermon, May 13, 1900, at the Turner school-house, Hamblen Township, where a thriving church was at this time maintained.

His exact text was not recorded but his theme was a panegyric of the Scriptures. In most eloquent language he pictured its station high and apart from all the other books ever written in the world's history. He took the volume in his hands, opened its pages, presented it to his audience, called attention to its wonderous revelations with emotion shattering his own voice and ended his climax with the exclamation:

"AND GOD HIMSELF THE AUTHOR."

This impressive drama always lingered in the memory of the writer and wishing in some manner to immortalize its effective significance the hymn on the preceding pages was composed, twenty-five years later.

During the winter and spring of 1902 his health failed and the horizon of a great career was nearing, hence on May 29, 1902 he passed away at the home of his son-in-law, John B. Craven, in Hamblen Township. Interment beside his beloved wife, Nancy, in Taggart Cemetery.*

[52] JANE HAMBLEN,⁴ John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born August 5, 1816, in Lee County, Virginia, where she was reared to womanhood.

Married about 1834, probably in Lee County, Josiah Wheelis, born July 20, 1810, in Claiborne County, Tennessee, son of Isam and Elizabeth Ramsey† Wheelis.‡

‡ Note 80. This Wheelis family in America, according to tradition furnished by Mrs. Edith N. Wheelis-Kale of Everson, Washington, was founded in one of the southern states, probably North Carolina, by two brothers, both lawyers, who came from Scotland. Christian name of neither learned.

The Scotch spelling of the name was Wheelies, but it was changed to Wheelas or Wheelis considering this spelling to be more American. The mother of these brothers was said to have been the Duchess of Argyle, from the Scotch house of Campbell.

The brother from which this immediate family descended was the father

They resided in Claiborne County till the spring of 1850, at which time they moved with their family, at the same time and in the same manner, with her brother, Jams C. Hamblen, and his uncle Thomas Ramsey* to Davis County, Iowa, and later to Appanoosa County, adjoining.

Here they resided on a farm. He was also a Methodist preacher. She suffered a stroke of paralysis and died from its effects, April, 1852. Three years later, early part of 1855, he was struck by lightning and killed.

Soon after his death, his brother William Wheelis, who lived in Decatur County, came and took the four younger children to his home to reside.

Their children were:

[53] MARY HAMBLLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, twin sister of Elizabeth (Betsey), September 7, 1818, in Lee County, Virginia, where she was reared to womanhood.

She was a very industrious girl and quite a genius at spinning yarn and thread and weaving it into cloth on the hand spinning wheels and looms of her day and time. While yet quite young she wove and sold cloth and with the proceeds bought for her mother a large leather bound family Bible, for which she paid $12.00. ‡ of Isam, Sr., the only one of his family whose name is secured. He married Elizabeth Ramsey, born about 1790, daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth (Cawen) Ramsey. (See note No, page 121.)

Two sons of Isam and Elizabeth are known, William and Josiah, above, one daughter, ———, who married Light. William moved from Tennessee to Decatur County, Iowa, reared a family and died there. Buried in Wheelis Cemetery, near Grand River, for which he donated the land from out his homestead. The father, Isam, Sr., and wife lived in Claiborne County, Tennessee, reared their family and died there.

† Note 82. This is the only instance where the name Dant is found carried into the family of Job Hamblen. This Wheelis family record was copied from the original Josiah Wheelis family record furnished the writer by Mrs. Anna Grimm of Grand River, Iowa. The name is spelled variously "Wheelis" and "Wheelis" on this record. The name Isam was spelled with one "a".

‡ Note 83. This Bible is still (1934) in good state of preservation and in possession of the family of her nephew, Williamson Hamblen.

During the summer of 1848, her brother, the Rev. William Hamblen, made a visit to their father's home in Lee County, Virginia, and when he returned she came to Brown County, Indiana, with him. He made the trip on horse-back and when they returned she rode with him on a fine horse which she herself owned.

After arriving in Brown County she made her home with William, where she met his wife, Nancy's brother, Richard Goforth, and they were married about 1850. He was born December 25, 1821, probably in Indiana, the son of William and Geriah (Barns-Mullis) Goforth.*

Prior to their marriage when the call was made for volunteers for service in the war against Mexico, he enlisted, June 10, 1847, in Company E, Third regiment, Indiana Infantry, at Nashville, Brown County. Went with his company to Camp Whitecomb at New Albany, where the company was mustered into the service, June 18th. (For services of this company from this time to December 1, 1846, read pags 133 to 136, incl.)

At Camargo, Mexico, the Third Indiana was issued mules to transport their equipment and made ready to march on December 16th, toward Monterey, about 100 miles distant. They were the advance regiment of the reinforcements that were being sent to General Zachary Taylor, who was stationed at the latter city with a small company since its capture in September before.

They arrived at Monterey about December 25th and continued the march toward Saltillo on the 27th, another stretch of about sixty miles. This march they made in about three days, most of the way over a dry, hot and dusty trail. No water was to be had along the way and the men suffered greatly.

They went into camp about five miles from Saltillo at Camp Butler, where they remained till January 12, 1847, when they moved into and occupied this city together with the Second Indiana, upon orders from General Lane. Here they remained till about February 4th when General Taylor moved with a force of about 5,000 men, which included the 3rd Indiana, to Agua Nueva about 25 miles south of Saltillo. After a short time, for some reason, the Second and Third Indiana were moved back to Saltillo, where they were stationed on February 21st.

During this later period a strong Mexican army under General Santa Anna had been advancing from the south. It had reached General Taylor's station, 21,000 strong, by the 22nd, at which time all his available forces, about 5,400 men, were marched into position at an advantageous point near the rancho Buena Vista, five miles south of his camp.

By 10 o'clock of that day the Third Indiana took a position on the hill commanding the main pass. The Mexicans attacked upon their left flank, late that afternoon, but no serious attack was made till on the morning of the 23rd, when the Mexicans in strong force attempted to turn the left flank, and were making good headway when the Third Indiana was rushed into the thick of the conflict, after the Second Indiana had been thrown into confusion, by their Colonel becoming panic stricken and ordered a retreat,* and was given credit for saving the position. Later in the day the strongest effort of the battle was directed at the pass. Richard Goforth often related his experience during that charge.

His story as related was that a force of 2,500 Mexican dragoons made the charge in elegant array. Their bright uniforms and glittering sabers looked awe inspiring. The order was not to fire upon them till close range was reached. A very handsomely uniformed officer was advancing directly in front of Richard. A large bright buckle ornamented his belt. A splendid target! thought Richard, and he took aim. When the order was given to fire, the unwise officer fairly leaped from his saddle, so many were the bullets that struck him.

The fray surged back and fourth all day long. Distress reigned at times, on the right and then on the left of the gallant Third. They were ordered time and again into the thick of these faltering gaps and each time saved the point from breaking.

Finally the sun was sinking and the lines were holding. The Mexicans advanced a battery of artillery and planted it directly in front of Company E and began firing, and then charged with a column of infantry. Company E was forced to withdraw. During the maneuver, Captain Taggart was struck by a minney ball just above the kidneys and came out in front. He fell forward on his hands and knees and exclaimed: "I am a dead man!" His son-in-law, Stephen Kennedy lifted him up, but he did not live but a few minutes. His last words were: "Stephen, be a good soldier, never mind me, go on with your company!" He was buried on the battlefield.

This proved to be the last resistance of the enemy. Lieutenant Thomas M. Adams at once assumed command of Company E, and later was promoted to captain. The army bivouaced upon the field and was drawn up in battle formation on the next morning (24th) but it was found that the enemy had withdrawn during the night and was twelve miles away.

The Mexican loss was 2,000 killed and wounded, 1,600 prisoners, and about 3,000 deserters. General Taylor's loss was about 700 killed and wounded. The casualties of Company E were: Capt. Taggart, killed, Corporal Elias Weddle, privates James Brown and Mathew Mathis, severely wounded; Stephen Fread, Joseph G. Arter and Squire Steward, slightly wounded. General Taylor highly commended the Third Indiana for its conduct during the battle.

On May 24, 1847, the Third Indiana left Buena Vista for New Orleans. On June 24th, Company E was mustered out, probably at New Orleans. It was mustered in with a total of 90 men and mustered out with 55. Twenty-six had been previously discharged on account of disability, ten had died of disease and one killed in battle.

* Note 85. William A. Boles was Colonel of the Second Indiana regiment. Colonel Lane of the Third Indiana preferred charges against him but General Taylor refused to order a court marshal. Col. Lane then asked for a court of inquiry for his own conduct during the Battle of Buena Vista and in it put Colonel Boles on record as stated in above paragraph.

It is presumed that the regiment disbanded at New Orleans and that Company E made the trip to Madison, Indiana, pretty much in a body, from there they reached home near July 10th, where they were joyfully received by relatives and friends.

On November 23, 1847, Richard Goforth made cash entry on sixty nine acres of (el $\frac{1}{2}$, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 3, twp. 9, r3e) of government land in Hamblen Township, where later the first Turner log school house was built. Paid \$1.25 per acre or \$86.47 for the tract and later, February 1, 1849, was issued patent for 40 acres (nw, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 2) adjoining it. On the south end of the sixty-nine acres he built a log house and here he and his wife Mary first lived after their marriage.

He sold this land and bought land over south about three miles, on Big Salt Creek, where they lived till about 1852, when he sold this land to Mary's brother, Rev. William Hamblen.* They lived at other places in this community till 1856, when they moved to Shelby County, Illinois, and lived till the spring of 1858, when they moved back to Brown County, and lived on Big Salt Creek near where they had lived before.†

Their children, all born prior to this time were:

- | | |
|----------------------|----------------------|
| 182.* NANCY JANE, | born, Feb. 12, 1852. |
| 183.* DAVID PRESTON, | " June 5, 1858. |
| 184.* WILLIAM, | " June 5, 1858. |

They also had born, three infants who died unnamed and were buried in the Taggart Cemetery, Brown County, Indiana.

In a year or so he bought 120 acres (s $\frac{1}{2}$, nw $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 1 and se, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 2, twp. 9, r3e) about two miles up the creek where he built a house and moved to it. This land was heavily timbered with the Chestnut Oak, the bark from which was called "Tan Bark". This found a ready market at Taylorsville, about 16 miles northeast. For several years he hired help‡ and worked at peeling this bark and hauling it to market. It was said that he marketed 1,000 cords of tan-bark from this land.

They lived here till the spring of 1865, when they again moved to Shelby County, Illinois, on Robinson Creek, about five miles east of Shelbyville. Here he worked at "strip mining" coal for some time till

* Note 86. For location of this land, see paragraph 7, page 136.

† Note 87. A funny little story was an incident with a neighbor woman which showed her generous and outspoken manner. The woman came to her one day and asked to borrow a bell for her cow. Mary had only one bell and that was on her own cow. However, she replied by saying: "Why of course I will let you have it! I wouldn't give a cent for a neighbor who wouldn't take the bell off her own cow and loan it to a neighbor!" And she did let her have it.

‡ Note 88. John Markham of Lee County, Virginia, worked for a good while for Richard Goforth while this bark peeling work was going on. Markham's wife was either Martha or Margaret Hobbs, daughter of Elisha and Ruth (Campbell) Hobbs. For Campbell see note 33, page 97, paragraph 7.

they moved to Greencastle, Indiana, where he took a contract of furnishing cord wood for a railroad company. They lived at Greencastle for about a year when they moved back to Shelby County, near Tower Hill.

Here they resided and he again worked in the coal mines, which occupation he continued to follow till his death, November 17, 1878, which resulted from an attack of pneumonia. He was buried at the Cutler Cemetery, about two miles west of Shelbyville.

After her husband's death, she continued to keep house with her two sons for support, in Shelby County. In the spring of 1886, she made a visit to Indiana in company with her brother, David R. Hamblen. They got off the train at Edinburg and the aged couple walked the distance of thirteen miles to their brother's, the Rev. William Hamblen, over the spring's muddy, bad roads, without evil effects, so hale and hearty were the two.

She stayed in Brown County about a year and made her principal visiting place with her brother, the Rev. William. After the marriage of her sons, she made her home, most of the time during the remainder of her life, with her son, William, who lived in Pana, Illinois. She had gone to live with her son, Preston, at Princeton, Gibson County, Indiana, when her health failed and she died April 17, 1898. She was buried in that city.

[54] ELIZABETH HAMBLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, twin sister of Mary, September 7, 1818, in Lee County, Virginia, where she was reared to womanhood. Went by the name Betsey.

Married, about 1841 or '42, Pryor Sullivan, a native of the locality. They lived within the community, where she was reared.

Their children were:

185.* RUHEMA,	born, May 1, 1843.
186.* JOSEPHINE,	" " " " " "
187.* GEORGE,	" " " " " " 1847.

When George was yet a very small child Sullivan deserted his wife and left the country. She then moved with her children, into a small house on her father's land near his home and supported herself by working among her neighbors by washing, hoeing in the fields and other work. Her house took fire and was destroyed December, 1855. Her neighbors assisted her to build another house in the same place. They also contributed $11.50 to help refurnish it for her.

She lived at this place till her death which took place either the year 1860 or '61. She was buried in the Campbell Cemetery beside her brother, Williamson.

[55] WILLIAMSON HAMBLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, November 24, 1822, in Lee County, Virginia. Reared on his father's farm on Hamblen Creek. Received more schooling than the older members of the family. He was a very tall and well built man, stood six feet, six inches in height. Played the violin well and was a Democrat in political faith.

He chose as his trade that of a carpenter and millwright, at which he worked a great deal of his time. He was never married and continued to live at the home of his parents. He interested himself in other kinds of business besides his trade. He bought and sold some live stock and acted as pension agent for war veterans and their widows.

He associated with and worked for some of the most well to do citizens of the Rose Hill settlement. Among them were the Ewings, Bales, Overtons, Gibsons and Mahaffys. He had put in an application for admission into the Free Mason order which was pending at the time of his death.

He invented a cutting device of some kind for cutting sheaf oats, straw and other kinds of feed for live stock, which he made quite of and sold at a price of $5.00 each. The writer possesses the day-book in which he kept his accounts during the last three years of his life. In this book are notes of the sale of twelve of these "straw cutters" as he terms them. Other interesting entries in this day book are as follows:

"Rubin McDale was disposed out of my possession March 26, 1858."

The above may have been a prisoner arrested by him or it might have been a negro slave. It is traditional that he once bought a negro slave at a sale for the reason that he was selling cheap. He kept him a short time and sold him again, making quite a good profit on the owning a slave.

The last entry in this day book and the last job of work that he did before his death is entered, beginning with these words:

"I, Williamson Hamblen, commenced work on R. M. Bales Mill Dam, April 26, 1858."

Noted each week is the number of days worked, which were five weeks, with 25½ days worked. Following this he entered again:

"Commenced (work) on the Mill House, June 1st."

Fourteen weeks noted, with 79 days worked. This account was crissed out, and written across the face in a different hand write the words: "Settled, October 30th, 1858."

The wages he received is not stated.

For some time he had been acting as a constable or deputy sheriff in his locality. On September 18, 1858, he went with a warrant in search of one John Hobbs to make his arrest for some minor offence committed in Lee County. He took with him as deputies Jacob and John? Wolfenbarger. The state line of Tennessee was only a short way off and Hobbs was found over the line a mile or so in company with one John Stafford, an acquaintance, and as far as Williamson knew, a friend.

Williamson read his warrant to Hobbs, who after hearing it told Williamson that he would not go with him and that he could not force him to go for the reason that he was out of his own state and had no authority in the state of Tennessee.

The officers at once agreed with Hobbs' position and Williamson told him that he had not thought of that fact. After some little more talk about the matter, the officers turned and walk away to mount their horses. As soon as Williamson turned, Stafford drew a big knife and plunged it into his back, underneath the shoulder blade.

Williamson turned and knocked the man down, but was too badly hurt to do more. The men worked with him what they could and finally helped him on his horse and they started toward home. Powells River lay on their road, when they came to it at Harold's Crossing and started across Williamson told his companions that he could not go farther and asked that they help him off his horse on the opposite bank. This they did and after alighting he lived only a short time.

After his death, which was on September 18, 1858, he was taken on to his home. He had lived about two and a half hours after he was struck with the knife. He was buried in the Campbell Cemetery near his home.

Stafford was arrested and given a sentence of twenty years in the penitentiary. He served time till the Civil War came on when he was given a pardon provided he would serve in the Confederate Army. This he did and when the war was over he returned to the community where he committed the deed and lived to an advanced age. Was living July, 1919.

[56] SARAH HAMBLEN,⁴ (John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, May 5, 1825, on Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia, where she was reared to womanhood.

She had better opportunity for schooling than the older members of the family and received a fair common school education, sufficient that she taught school, some during her younger days. She was a seamstress and was quite skilled in making clothing.

Married, 1854, Absalom Y. Lankford, of Lee County. They lived within the locality of Rose Hill. In October, 1857, they were living not far from Rose Hill Church, west of Rose Hill village.

He enlisted, April 18, 1863, in Company I, 25th Regiment, Virginia Cavalry, Confederate States Army,* in which he served till December 9, 1863, when he was a prisoner of war to Rock Island Barracks, Illinois. Here he remained till February 20, 1864, when he died of variola (smallpox). Buried in Confederate Cemetery, at Rock Island.

After his death she, with her children, went to the home of her father to live. She lost three children from diphtheria, who were buried in Campbell Cemetery, Lee County.

Their other children were:

188.* MARY JANE, born during the 1850's.

189. WILLIAM,† " " " "

She moved, October, 1869, with her children, mother and brother George and family, to Brown County, Indiana, and resided in the locality near her brothers, David R. and Rev. William Hamblen, in Hamblen Township. While living here she worked at her trade as seamstress much of her time. At one time, 1870 and '71, she made coats for the merchant, Solomon Parsley, which he sold in his store in Hamblen Township.

She again moved, after the death of her mother, during the fall of 1873 to Shelby County, Illinois. Here she lived with her children in and around Shelbyville, for several years and it appears that she may have lived in Logan County, 1886. Later she moved to Chicago with her son, where she died April, 1901. Place of her burial not learned.

[57] PLEASANT HAMBLEN,⁴ (Uriah.³ Job.² George.¹) born, June 1, 1808, in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with parents to Jennings or Scott County, Indiana, about 1818 and three years later, 1821, to Bartholomew County. After the death of his mother he was taken into the home of his grandfather, Job, and his uncle, Eliakim Hamblen, and moved with them, 1825, to Hamblen Creek, western Bartholomew County (Now Brown County) where he grew to manhood.

Married, ~~about~~ 1831, Milly (Armilda?) Weddle, born January 21, 1811, daughter of ——— and Nancy Weddle, * b. May 31, 1773. d. Dec. 21, 1850.

Soon after marriage they established residence on upper Salt Creek, Hamblen Township, where he entered government land, (ne, nw $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 35, twp. 10, r3e) and later acquired another 40 acres adjoining.

* Note 91. The Weddles most likely came to Indiana from Kentucky and to there probably from Virginia or North Carolina. The elder Weddle, husband of Nancy, died before the family came to Brown County. Before coming she had married second to William Curry. Both are buried in the Taggart Cemetery,

He had been married before and had children: Elias Washington, Jane and Joseph. Her Weddle children were: 1. James, 2. Mordecaia, 3. Elias, 4. Pleasant, 5. Jane, 6. Nancy, 7. Milly, (Armilda?) above.

William and Nancy Cury had one son, Elijah, born, September 30, 1816.

(1). James Weddle moved to Illinois. Had one son, Elias, (8).

(2). Mordecaia B. Married Jane Marshall, sister to Robert Marshall, Company E, 3rd Indiana Infantry, Mexican War, also in army Civil War. They had children: 9. Irvén, 10. Robert, 11. Wesley, 12. James, 13. Lewis, 14. Franklin and 15. Nancy. About 1886 he married Mary (Richards) Curry, widow of his half brother, Elijah Curry. He moved before the Civil War to near Oconee, Illinois. Reared his family and died there.

(3). Elias, married, 1st, Anna Richards, born January 5, 1810, sister of Mary above and their brother, John Richards, prominent first settler of Jackson Township, Brown County. They both entered government land in Hamblen Township, and later the Turner school-house was built on part of the land e $\frac{1}{2}$, nw, & w $\frac{1}{2}$ ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 3, twp. 9, r3e, 160 acres.) First entry Sept. 26, 1844 and other parcels as late as Jan. 6, 1848. At this place they resided for several years.

He enlisted, June 10, 1846, in Company E, 3rd Ind. Infantry, Mexican War. (See roster of this company, page 134 and its services pages 133 to 136 and pages 148 to 150.) He took part in the Battle of Buena Vista, Mexico, Feb. 23, 1847, where he was severely wounded but recovered and was mustered out as Corporal June 24, 1847.

His wife Anna died, December 21, 1857. Buried, Taggart Cemetery. He married 2nd, Hester Ann, widow of Louis F. Raper, one of the first Associate Judges of Brown County, 1837. Hester Ann was Raper's second wife, widow of ——— Louthermilk. By first marriage Raper had children: Mathew Tipton, Julia, who married William Curry, and Mrs. Doan. By Hester Ann, children: Emery and Armilda, who married Kinzie B. Clark.

Elias sold his land (above) during the 1860's and moved to Bartholomew County, near Columbus, where he spent the remainder of his life. Children by his first marriage: 16. Nancy, 17. Charity, 18. Lucinda, 19. Armilda, 20. Jane, 21. Michael, who died, Feb. 1863, Murfreesboro, Ky. 82nd Indiana Infantry, 22. John, also of 82nd Inft. died Louisville, Ky., Oct. 1863, 23. Pleasant D., 22nd. Ind. Inft. Killed, Battle of Perryville, Ky. October, 1862, 24. James, 25. Mary, 26. Malcina, by 2nd marriage.

(4). Pleasant, married Anna Millsap. Children: 27. Samantha, 28. Sarah, 29. Saphrona, 30. Jephtha, 31. Robert, 32. Mordecai, born, Jan. 3, 1828, died, Aug. 9, 1852. Married Martha Susan Smith, 33. Elijah, 34. Nancy.

He he became a prosperous farmer and lived the remainder of his life. His wife, Milly, died September 29, 1846.

He married, second, about 1851, Angeline Murphy,* born, June 20, 1820. Politically, he joined the new Republican party about the time of the beginning of the Civil War and remained affiliated with it the remainder of his life. He was the first and only member of the Hamblen family, up to this time, that had left the ranks of the traditional Democrat party of the forefathers of Virginia and Tennessee.

Other members of the family attributed his leaving the party to the fact that he lived a close neighbor to several highly respected and influential citizens from the eastern states who had belonged to the old Whig party. When the Republican party was formed they went with it, which may have influenced Pleasant. In addition to this, two of which may have influenced Pleasant. In addition tot his, two of his his sons and one daughter, married into these same families. Hence, it is assumed that these associations brought about the change in his own political faith.

He died February 16, 1874, and was buried in Taggart Cemetery, beside his first wife, Milly (Armilda?). His widow, Angeline, continued to reside on the homestead till her death, October 14, 1903. She was buried in Unity Cemetery, northern Hamblen Township.

[58] JOHN HAMBLLEN,⁴ (Uriah.³ Job.² George¹) born, about 1810, probably in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with parents to Scott or Jennings County, Indiana, about 1817. His mother died when he was about eight years old. He was taken into the home of his grandfather, Job, where he lived till his father's second marriage.

Eleanor Taylor of Hamblen Township, remembered, 1919, a little story as told by his grandmother, Eleanor, about John while living at her home, thus: "One morning when awakened and told it was time to get up, he remonstrated by saying: "O! Why should I get up when I am so sleepy and it so soon?"

About 1830, he was taken by his father with the family to Jefferson County, Illinois. He married, February 21, 1833, in Jefferson County, Rebecca Hudlow, by Rev. Edward Maxey.

Their children were:

202. MARTHA,[†] born Dec. 1, 1836.
 203.* PLEASANT DANIEL, " July 15, 1839.

They were residing nine miles west of Mt. Vernon, Jefferson County, when Pleasant was born. Both John and his wife died when the children were yet very young, during the 1840's.

No record or memory of this John was found among any relatives during the time research for this work was being made except the above story by Eleanor Taylor, till a letter was received from Mrs. Elisa Belle Williams, Portageville, Ill., August 16, 1927, a daughter of Pleasant Daniel, above, in which she said: "My grandfather was John Hamblen." This ended a long and puzzling research for this man and identified his descendants.

[59] RUTH HAMBLLEN,⁴ (Uriah.³ Job.² George¹) born, October 12, about 1817, probably in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with parents, about 1817, to Scott or Jennings County, Indiana. After the death of her mother, she was taken into the home of her grandfather, Job, in western Bartholomew County (now Brown County). Here she lived till her father moved.

Moved with parents to the Haw Patch country, near Clifford, Bartholomew County, Indiana, and was living there May, 1821. From there moved to Hamblen Creek, western edge of Bartholomew County. (Later, 1836, became Brown County) in 1825.

Married, 1831, in same locality, Rachel Taggart, born November 5, 1813, daughter of James and Rachel Taggart.¶

* Note 102. This Isaac Hamblen (259) went to California, married, had children and died there. Wife's name nor children's names learned.

† Note 103. William Hamblen, went to Missouri, lived and died there.

‡ Note 104. Thomas Hamblen, went to Missouri, lived and died there. Had children but no names learned.

¶ Note 105. James Taggart, the founder of this family in Indiana, was born, December 12, 1774, in North Carolina. Rachel, his wife, born, July 13, 1773. He died, February 13, 1852, she, March 29, 1844. Both buried, Taggart Cemetery.

He was living in Bartholomew County, near Columbus, 1821, when the county was organized. On February 15, 1821, he was appointed a bailiff at the first meeting of the County Commissioners, and commissioned to notify a committee who were to locate the county seat of Bartholomew County. For which service he was allowed $10.00. The city of Columbus now occupies the site chosen.

He was appointed as the first sheriff of Bartholomew County, 1821, and served two years. Was then elected and served two more years or till 1825. November 15, 1828, he entered government land (e½, ne¼, sect. 36, twp. 10n, r3e) eighty acres, which was the first land entered on Hamblen Creek, in what is now Hamblen Township, Brown County. He moved his residence to this land.

Later, April 18, 1834, he entered the southwest quarter northwest quarter, section 36, and January 28, 1836, entered the southeast quarter of the same section, 160 acres in all. He took a leading part in the organization of Brown County. The first election for Hamblen Township was held at his residence, 1836. He served as the first assessor for the township, 1836, and was paid $5.00 for his services.

He, (Jesse) together with Elijah Curry and Elias Weddle were road viewers, about 1834 or '35 who selected the route of the Lowell Road, from Salt Creek, beginning at "Taylorville Hill" on this creek and extending to the Lowell Crossing on Drift Wood River in Bartholomew County. March, 1836, he was road supervisor in Hamblen Township.

June, 1836, he with Louis F. Raper, was elected Associate Judge of the Brown Circuit Court and served as such for two years. First term of court held, April 20, 1837, with Elisha M. Huntington, president judge. Township assessor again 1840 and '41.

In 1841, he killed an old timber wolf and her five young ones and received $3.50 bounty from the county auditor. Politically, he was a Democrat.

His children, as far as learned were: 2. James, born, 1801; 3. William, born, October 31, 1806; 4. Rachel, born November 5, 1813.

(2). James Taggart, born 1801, settled in Washington Township, Brown County. Entered government land in section 25, twp. 9, range 3e, March 22, 1828, and other land in section 23, 1836 and '37.

He was elected the first sheriff of Brown County and took office August 16, 1836, and served three years. June, 1846, he was made captain of Company E, 3rd Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and went to Mexico with his company. Commanded at the Battle of Buena Vista, February 23, 1847, and was killed in the last Mexican charge of the battle. (See pages, 133 to 136 and 148 to 150 for roster of company and its services.)

His wife was Jane Weddle, born, 1804. (For Weddle family see note 91, page 155.) Their children were:

5. Franklin P., merchant at Nashville, Ind.; 6. Dr. Captain T., born Dec. 28, 1846; 7. Nancy, married David L. Hamblen; 8. Susanna, married Stephen Kennedy; 9. ——— married Samuel Followell; 10. Patterson; 11. William H., who was Treasurer of Brown County, 1868 to 1872.

(3) Rev. William Taggart was quite prominent in public affairs and held many appointive and elective positions. He, with his father, James, and Daniel King, served as viewers and layed out the Martinsville Road from Columbus, by way of Salt Creek, Taggart and Hamblen settlement, and Georgetown to Martinsville, Morgan County. They completed their work and filed the report at Columbus, December 26, 1833.

He was elected the first Justice of the Peace of Hamblen Township, Brown County, June, 1836. By virtue of this office, he became one of the sixteen County Commissioners and served as such, several years. January 3, 1837, was appointed one of a committee of three to conduct the sale of town lots in Nashville, county seat of Brown County.

He was elected, 1840, as Representative to the State Legislature, from Brown County and served during the session, December, 1840, to February, 1841.

Served as one of three County Commissioners, 1845 to 1847. Politics, Democrat.

acres, on January 24, 1837. He established residence on this land and resided on it till his death. Later he entered another forty acres in the same section.

He built a water grist mill near his residence, which he operated for 8 or 10 years, during the 1840 s. Year 1856, he built a large dwelling. The best in the whole north part of the county. The ground plan was 20x40 feet, divided into two rooms with a large fireplace with brick chimneys in each room. Two rooms, second floor, same size. Plastered throughout. The finest of poplar, walnut and white ash timber used in its construction. Twenty feet to the eaves. Large kitchen, 16x18 feet with large fire-place. Built-in cupboards, made of solid walnut.

A large barn built of hewn logs and frame construction 48x72 ft.

About 1855, he became a minister in the United Brethern Church and became quite prominent as a preacher. Was instrumental in building Liberty Chappel, or Taggart Church, on his own homestead, (sw, ne $\frac{1}{4}$, sect. 36, twp. 10, r3e) west side of Hamblen Creek near where it flows into main Salt Creek.

He married, first about 1827, Sarah Mullis, born, January 15, 1808, daughter of John (?) and Gerlah (Barnes) Mullis. (For Mullis and Goforth, see note 65, page 132.) Their children were:

12. John, 12. Lucinda, 14. William Preston, 15. David, 16. Sarah Ann, 17. Thomas Jefferson, 18. Elizabeth, 19. James, 20. Rachel.

(12). John Taggart, born about 1828, married Nancy Hubbard, moved, 1874 to near Ft. Worth, Texas.

(13). Lucinda, born, May 29, 1830. Died February 1, 1847.

(19). James Taggart, born, 1841, married Nancy Hamblen, daughter of Pleasant.

(20). Rachel Taggart, born, July 29, 1843, married, John Hamblen, son of Pleasant.

Sarah, the wife, and mother of the above, died March 16, 1845. He (Rev. William) married second, Elizabeth Skidmore, born, March 1, 1820. They had three sons: 21. Jesse, 22. Hugh, and 23. Mayberry. The latter married, Hannah Craven, daughter of William and Mary (Burnett) Craven. (For Craven, see note 179, page 214.) Wife, Elizabeth, died, August 16, 1852.

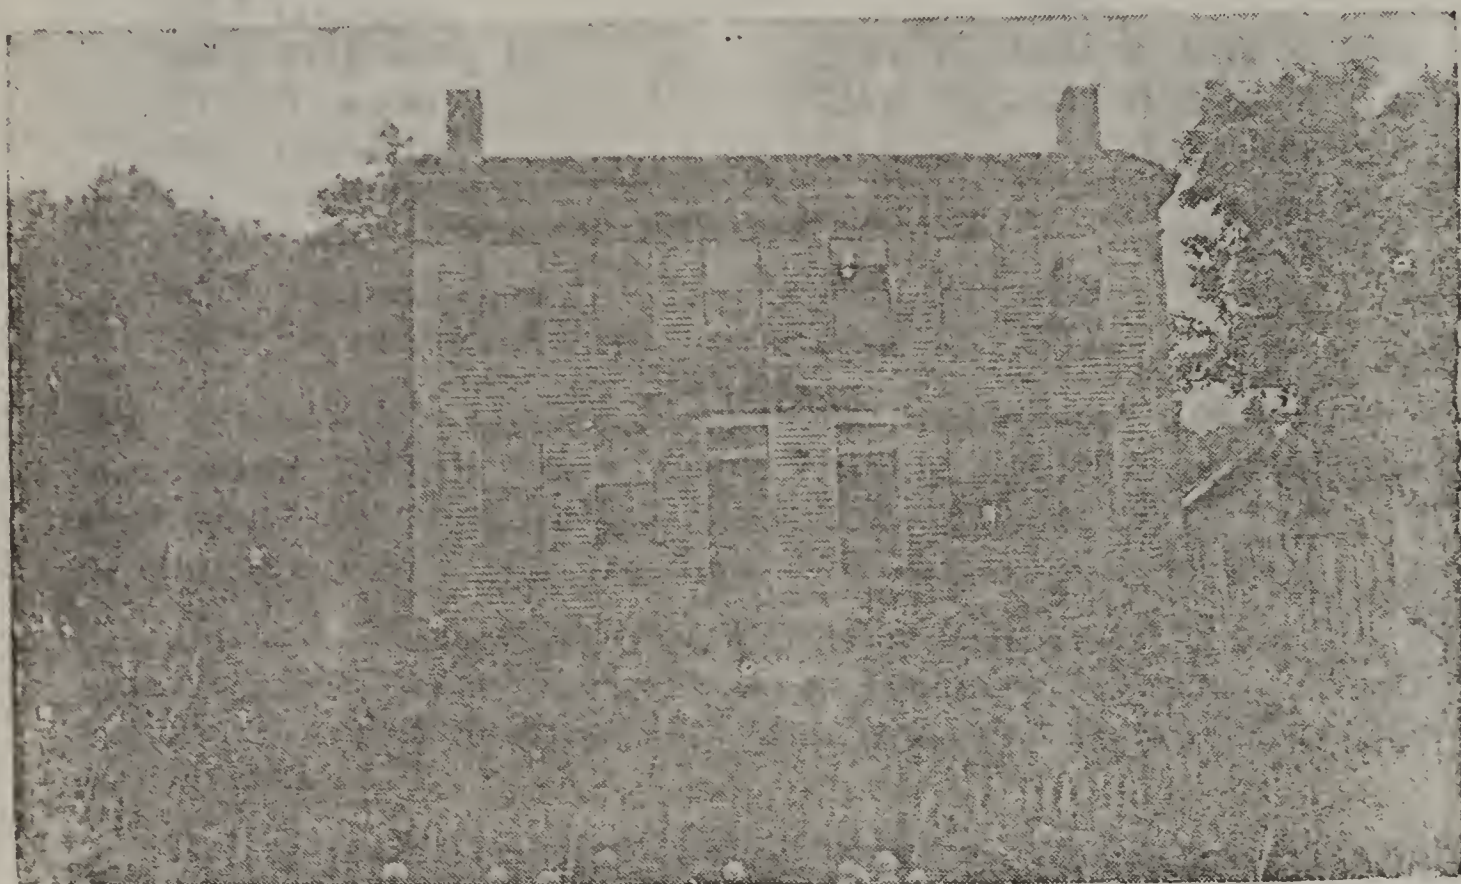

Rev. William, married, third, Leah Frances Gillaspy, born August 24, 1827, sister of George and William Edy Gillaspy. (For Gillaspy, see note 162, page 193. She died January 9, 1863.

[72] MARY (Polly) HAMBLEN⁴ (Eliakim.³ Job.² George.¹)
 born, about 18~~18~~¹⁸¹⁷, in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with parents to Bartholomew County, Indiana, near Clifford, about 1821. Later, 1825, to Hamblen Creek, now Hamblen Township, Brown County.

Married, January 18, 1837, Cornelius Washburn Tucker, by William Taggart, Justice of the Peace, in Hamblen Township. This was probably the first marriage that took place in this township after it was erected.

He entered government land, 40 acres, in Washington Township,
 Brown County, August 2, 1838, where they lived for several years.
 He was justice of the Peace and County Commissioner, 1839. (Justices of the Peace served as County Commissioners at this period.) He also served as Judge of the Brown Probate Court, 1838 to 1840. He died some time prior to 1859.

She, in her calderly years lived with her sister, Zerilda Taggart, till her death, after which she went to Indianapolis where she died about 1903, while living with a grand daughter, Sarah Young.

Their children were:

287. Malinda Ann. ^{b. 1842} 288. Sarah Jane. ^{b. 1846} 289. Elizabeth. ^{b. 1847}
 290. Benjamin. ^{b. 1843} who was a crippled boy.

Little has been learned whether any of these children were married or had families. Some of them died rather young, some information states. Sarah Young, mentioned above is the only descendant learned of, and she never definitely located.

[73] SARAH (Sally) HAMBLEN,⁴ (Eliakim,³ Job,² George,¹) born, September 16, 1815, probably in Lee County, Virginia. Moved with parents, 1821, to Bartholomew County, Indiana, and later, 1829 to Hamblen Creek, now Brown County.

Married, March 11, 1832, in Hamblen Township, Preston Goforth, born, June 11, 1807, son of William and Geriah (Barnes-Mullis) Goforth.*

He, 1834, with John Campbell and Abraham Chappell were appointed to make a survey of the Columbus and Martinsville Road which ran thru Brown County.

He entered government land (ne,ne1-4, sect. 28, twp. 10 r3e), 40 acres, January 20, 1835, and 40 acres adjoining in section 27, April 8, 1839. He resided on this land till after the death of her father, 1852, when he bought his homestead and moved on it.†

He was road supervisor in 1840. Was elected, as a Democrat, 1847, one of the three county commissioners of Brown County and served continuously till 1857.

He moved with his family, September, 1858, to the Haw Patch country, Bartholomew County, north-east of Columbus. They lived here till August, 1864, when they moved to Illinois and located near Bryant, Fulton County, where he engaged in farming.

Ill health overtook him and he died of dropsy of the heart, May 17, 1868. She lived under the care of her son Jesse till her death which took place, January 12, 1904. Both buried, as is also their son, Jesse, on their old homestead in Fulton County.

† Note 107. A story related by Williamson Hamblen,⁵ Preston Goforth and his brother-in-law, David Crouch, were watching in the twilight, for deer at a "salt lick". Mr. Deer, as they thought, put in his appearance. Goforth was selected to shoot, and down came the game. As they walked toward the spot, Crouch remarked, "Haven't we killed a big deer?" When they examined the animal it was discovered to be a calf belonging to Eliakim Hamblen. Goforth remarked, "Now, haven't we played whaley?" Crouch replied "Yes! You have played whaley!" When Mr. Hamblen was informed, he laughed and told the hunters to dress "the deer, give him the hide and some veal and divide the remainder between them.

1917. The American Medical Association has been organized since 1847. It is the largest and most influential organization of its kind in the world. Its purpose is to advance the science and art of medicine, to protect the public health, and to promote the highest standards of medical education and practice.

The Association has a long and distinguished history. It was founded in 1847 by a group of physicians who were concerned with the state of medical education and practice in the United States. Since that time, it has grown steadily in size and influence, and it has played a leading role in the development of the medical profession in this country.

The Association's activities are directed towards the improvement of medical education and practice. It publishes the Journal of the American Medical Association, which is one of the most important sources of information for the medical profession. It also sponsors a variety of other publications, including books, pamphlets, and reports.

In addition to its educational and publishing activities, the Association is also engaged in a wide range of other work. It has a large staff of physicians and other medical professionals who are responsible for the day-to-day operations of the organization. It also has a number of committees and subcommittees that are concerned with various aspects of the medical profession.

The Association's work is financed by a variety of sources, including contributions from its members, donations from the public, and income from its publications. It is a non-profit organization, and its funds are used exclusively for the advancement of the medical profession and the promotion of the public health.

The Association's efforts have been instrumental in the development of the medical profession in this country. It has played a leading role in the establishment of medical schools, in the improvement of medical education, and in the promotion of the highest standards of medical practice. Its work has been recognized by the public and by the government, and it has earned the respect and admiration of the medical profession.

The Association's work is a testament to the dedication and commitment of its members and staff. It is a testament to the power of organized action and to the importance of the medical profession in the life of the community. It is a testament to the progress that has been made in the science and art of medicine, and to the promise of a better future for all.

Married, first —————? Burkheart, but did not live with her but a short time. Enlisted, June 10, 1846, in Company E, Third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for service in Mexican War. Went into camp with his company at New Albany, Indiana.†

He took part in the hard fought battle of Buena Vista, Mexico, February 23, 1847. He often related this story as one of his experiences during this noted battle; ie, 'A small creek ran through the battle field. The fray was so fierce and the carnage so great that the stream was made red from the blood of the fallen men and animals. No other water being available, he along with other soldiers became so thirsty that they filled their canteens with this blood-colored water and drank of it.

He married second, about 1849, Nancy Colston, nee Taggart, widow of Thomas Colston, born January 10, 1825, daughter of Capt. James and Jane (Weddle) Taggart.‡

He made a visit among relatives in Brown County, Indiana, November, 1872. Married a third wife, name not learned, who survived him and married his brother, Dr. Franklin Lock. He died, probably latter part of the 1880's, at Good Hope, where he was buried.

[83] PEMBROKE SOMERSET LOCK,⁴ (Eleanor Hamblen,³ Job,² George.¹) born, September 22, 1823, probably in Scott County, Indiana. Moved, with parents to Hamblen Creek, now Brown County, about 1825, where the family resided till spring of 1830, when they moved to Adams County, Illinois, where he grew to manhood.

Married, January 25, 1844, probably in Adams County, Jane Wallace, born, April 10, 1828. They established a home, probably in Adams County, where they lived till 1859, when he sold his land and moved to Missouri, probably Grundy County.

Returned to Adams County, Ill., fall of 1861. May, 1866, he was living on rented land near Kinderhook, Calhoun County. He bought his father's farm near Plainville, Adams County, and moved on it, where he probably lived the remainder of his life. Their death dates not learned.

Their children were:

- | | | |
|-------|----------------------|------------------------------------|
| 361. | (infant) | born, Nov. 8, 1844. Died at birth. |
| 362. | SARAH CATHERINE, | " Nov. 29, 1845. d. Oct. 8, 1847. |

[84] HAMBLÉN AUBERRY LOCK,⁴ (Eleanor Hamblen.³ Job.² George.¹) born, December 10, 1825, on the Job Hamblen homestead, Hamblen Creek, Bartholomew County, Indiana, later, 1836, Hamblen Township, Brown County.

His name recorded in his father's Bible record same as written above. On the County Clerk record of his second marriage his name was written, "Hamlin A. Lock". It is probable that when he enlisted for army service, Civil War, his name was recorded erroneously "Hamden A. Lock." Being difficult to correct such an error, it was necessary thereafter for him to use the spelling, "Hamden" which he did. He bore the nickname "Dutch" Lock. (See his picture on page 112).

He moved with his father's family to Adams County, Illinois, 1830. Married, August 5, 1847, Nancy Wallace, born July 15, 1830, probably a sister of Jane, his brother Pembroke's wife.

In company with his brothers, Thaddeus and Nelson, he made a trip to California, probably attracted by the gold excitement of that period, returning to his home in Illinois a short time prior to September 21, 1851. His wife, Nancy, died, September 4, 1855.

* Note 129. David Lock was killed by a street car in St. Louis, Missouri, when yet a young man.

† Note 130. Eleanor Josephine Lock, married first, Robert Waggy and had one daughter, who died, age three years. She married, second, John Foster. They lived near Plainville, Adams County, where he died, about 1921, and she, 1924.

Levi was a famous story teller. One of his best stories is copied as remembered by Williamson Hamblen, father of the writer:

"PLOWING THE BEAR."

"Next spring after the harry-kane struck Brown County," related Petro at a shooting match one day, "I seen that I was gittin' mighty bad behind with my spring plowin', so I hatched up a scheme of ketchin' up. I got up bright and early one morning and thought I'd hitch up my kitter and plow while Sally was gittin' breakfast and gittin' the young'ens up. It was purty dark sailin' but I made it pretty good considerin' everything. 'Twernt long till Sally hollered for breakfast and I stuck the jumpin' shovel good and deep in the ground and left it and the hoss standin' hooked up while I et.

"I heoped up and got back to work as quick as I could. When I got back my jumpin' shovel and hoss both was gone. I follered the track where it drug till I got to the edge of the woods. I hered a racket up a big poplar stub that was broke off when the harry-kane, struck and behold! There hung my plow up there, by the trace chains.

I wondered what in the thunder was wrong. So I climbed up a saplin' to find out, and when I looked in the hole in that poplar stub, Law and behold! I seen right then and there that I had been plowin' a big brown bear which she owned 67 acres at the time of her death. She was appointed postmaster of the Cicona postoffice, November 16, 1895, a fourth class country office which was moved to her residence where it remained till discontinued, March 31, 1903, on account of rural route, No. 1 being established from Nineveh, within the territory of its patronage. Her service was satisfactory.

She was well versed on the family history and traditions. Had preserved many records and relics of Job Hamblen and his family. It was from her memory and records that the writer obtained a large portion of the information relative to the older members of the family. She remembered much of it as related by the grandmother Eleanor Hamblen, who lived in the Taylor home until her death, at which time, Eleanor, her granddaughter was 17 years old.

She took much interest in the Taylor Cemetery, located on her homestead and executed a deed, February 7, 1912, setting apart a lot containing one fourth acre for the cemetery proper, and named the writer as its custodian and specifying that he should designate his successor after his death.

She died, November 11, 1920, aged 85 years. Buried in above cemetery.

[97] CATHARINE TAYLOR,⁴ (Sarah Hamblen,³ Job,² George,¹) born, May 19, 1837, on the Job Hamblen homestead, Hamblen Township Brown County, where she lived her entire lifetime. Inherited part of this homestead on which she lived with her sister Eleanor.

She married, May 5, 1889, John J. Smith; Richard M. Henderson, J. P., officiating. They continued to reside at her home for a few years, after which he moved away. They were granted a divorce at Nashville, Ind. February 7, 1898.

She married second, January 16, 1902, her cousin, Hamden, (Hamblen) A. Lock,* their cousin, Rev. William Hamblen, officiating. They resided at her home. He went to Illinois to visit his children and died while there, July 15, 1910.

[104] WILLIAM M. LOCK,⁴ (Mary Hamblen,³ Job,² George,¹) born, probably in Indiana, moved with parents to Illinois, prior to 1830.

Most that has been learned about this man and his brothers and sisters is from a series of letters written to the Taylor relatives. He wrote a letter, September, 1855, from Barry, Pike County, Illinois in which he said: "Reuben (his brother) and myself are thinking of coming to see you * * * perhaps next spring and * * * want you to look out me a pretty girl. * * * I would speak for Reuben but he is the oldest, * * * Yours in haste, William M. Lock."

He was in Missouri, May, 1856. His father, March 4, 1857, wrote from, Palmyra, Missouri: "We think William will be able to come home next month."

He did make a visit, prior to the Civil War, to Brown County, Indiana, among relatives and stayed about a year. While on this visit he built a fancy spring wagon-bed for Rev. William Hamblen, to demonstrate his workmanship in wood.*

His mother wrote from Cincinnati, Ohio, June, 1868, saying: "Alonzo and William have steady work." Nothing further learned of him.

[105] JOHN LOCK,⁴ (Brother of William M.) About all learned about this man is from his father's letter written January 28, 1849. Extract: "John was taken with small-pox in St. Louis and labored under its influence for fourteen days and on April 28, 1848, departed this life. A dutiful boy when living." (Signed) "U. Lock."

It was learned that he had at least one son, from a letter written by his uncle, David Lock, dated February 14, 1859. He was a young man.

421. SAMUEL, who died, September 16, 1857.

[106] ZERELDA E. LOCK,⁴ (Sister of William M.) born, in Illinois. David Lock, her uncle, January 1, 1858, wrote: "Zerelda was married to Benjamin Maston, July 10, 1857. They went up north, about Narevoo (Ill.) to live."

Again he wrote, February 14, 1859: "Zerelda had married Ben Maston, a brother to David's (her brother) wife * * * David and Ben went up north from Scott County (Ill.) and we have heard nothing from them since." Nothing further learned about her.

* Note 151. The visit and the above mentioned work of William M. Lock, was remembered and related, 1918, by Williamson Hamblen, father of the writer.

[108] DAVID LOCK,⁴ (Brother of William M.) born and reared in Illinois. Married, ———? Maston, a sister of Benjamin Maston, his sister Zerelda's husband.

They lived at Palmyra, Marion County, Missouri, summer of 1856. Moved to Quincy, Illinois, winter of 1856. September, 1857 they moved from Scott County, Illinois, up north, probably about Narvoo, Illinois.

December, 1873, his mother wrote a letter from French Village, St. Clair County, Illinois, in which she said:

"I am living with David."

They had at least one child:

422. ———? (a son) born winter of 1856-'57 at Quincy, Illinois. Nothing more learned of him or his family.

[109] JORDAN J. LOCK,⁴ (Brother of William M.) born and reared in Illinois. All that has been learned about this man has been from old letters written by his uncle, David Lock, his mother and himself. His uncle, David, February 14, 1859, wrote: "Jordan came here and stayed over winter and spring, and then worked here in our neighborhood till last fall when he went with Thaddeus and Nelson (his sons) to Missouri."

His mother, May, 1867, wrote: "My son Jordan is married and has gone to St. Louis to live." Again she wrote, August 24, 1868: "Jordan's wife died last fall."

Excerpts of his own letter follows:

"On board Steamer Charles Bodman.
Cario, Illinois, August 22, 1872.

"Dear mother:

Cleona, Brown County, Ind.

I have been here five weeks and will be here three weeks yet. Alonzo went home a week ago. I have written him to draw money on my account and send to you. * * * Smallpox very bad. * * *

If I could leave my men I would leave right away. * * * Spencer hasn't come down as yet and I have just money enough to pay the men's board for this week. I can be fixed to take you home as soon as I get back to Cincinnati.

Your affectionate son, Jord J. Lock."

His mother writing, December 13, 1873, from French Village, Illinois, to her sister, Sally Taylor, said: "If you know anything of Jordan, don't fail to mention it." (See his picture, page 112). Nothing more learned about him.

[110] ALONZO W. LOCK,⁴ (Brother of William M.) born and reared probably in Illinois. His uncle, David Lock, February, 1859, wrote that he was living with his mother in St. Louis, Missouri. May 10, 1867 his mother wrote from Cincinnati, Ohio: "Alonzo is with me." She wrote again from Cincinnati, August 24, 1868, saying: "Alonzo is to be married in September, to Miss Lizzie Rall."

He wrote his mother, June 18, 1872, in Brown County, Indiana, from Cincinnati, 29 Race Street: "Mollie and baby are well." Nothing more learned about him. They had at least one child.

"Rosalie did considerable writing and some of her verses were published in Hendricks County papers. She and her sister Ollie, worked together on prose fiction. * * * * I saw several chapters of a story that was probably never completed as the girls both died young." She died of tuberculosis about the year 1887.

Several of her poems have been collected by the writer. Space will permit including only one short one, printed in a Danville paper that bore a preface of favorable editorial comment. The title:

THE OLD SMOKE-HOUSE

One by one the scenes of childhood, vanish from our sight away,
One by one they're gone forever, places where we used to play.

How we used to hang the meat there, and fan the smoke up high,
Then how we would wipe with pleasure, tears from each streaming eye.

Mark the change that comes o'er us, childish playmates, where are they?
Ah! they've vanished like the smoke-house, where we children used to play.

† Note 161. Robert Mann was a very small man. He was looked upon by the community as a hero on account of an unusual capture he made during his service as a soldier. One day he came into camp, marching in front of him, a handsomely uniformed British officer.

He had taken the officer's sword from him and buckled it on himself. So short was his stature that the sword dragged heavily on the ground. The capture created a sensation among the officers and men of the American camp. He was asked how he managed to take his man prisoner. He reply was: "Gad sir! I 'zrounded 'im!"

‡ Note 162. The founder of this branch of the Gillaspy family was William and his wife was Leah Catharine Connell. He was born in South Carolina. They moved with their family from Henry County, Kentucky, to Brown County, Indiana, 1839. Entered government land, (Sect. 5, twp 10, r1e) northeast Hamblén Township. 465.* Bartholomew Russell, born, April 2, 1864.

She died of tuberculosis, June 14, 1864. Buried in Taggart Cemetery, beside his mother. He took his infant son and lived with his father and mother.

The Civil War was in progress and his name was placed on the draft roll. His name was drawn but the required number of men were enrolled before his name was reached on the list. Fearing that he might be called at any time and not desiring to serve in the Union Army on account of his near relatives living in Virginia and Tennessee, he took his team and wagon and went to Edgar, Shelby Sangamon and Fulton Counties, Illinois, where he stayed till August, 1865. Then he sold his team and went to Appanoosa County, Iowa, where relatives lived and stayed till March, 1866. He then returned to his father's home in Indiana where he resided and assisted with the farm work.

Summer of 1874, with wagon and team, in company with John Taggart, Anderson Percifield and several others made a trip, 50 days, through Illinois, Missouri, Indian Territory and to Denton County, Texas. He had a bad sickness (White swelling in one leg), while in Texas, sold his team and returned to Indiana, winter of 1874.

Always an active Democrat, he was a candidate for office of Assessor of Hamblen Township, November, 1878. Jacob Perry Walker and a Republican were candidates against him. Walker defeated him by about 15 votes. He frequently served as riding baliff for the courts of Nashville.

He married second, June 11, 1882, Fanny Fox, born November 24, 1844, daughter of John and Eliza (Pike) Fox.*

Shortly after this marriage he bought the interest of his brother Williamson in their father's old homestead in Hamblen Township, which they had owned together for some time. About 1887, he moved from this place to the old Hunt farm adjoining.

Fall of 1888, made a trip by wagon and team to south-west Missouri with the intention of moving his family there, but did not like the country and returned to Indiana. Spring of 1891 or '92, moved to 80 acres he owned (sw,nw¼, sect.1, twp.9, r3e) adjoining his father's old homestead on the east. Here he lived the remainder of his life.

April, 1894 he entered the Democrat Primary Election as a candidate for assessor of Hamblen Township. The names of his opponents and the votes each received were as follows:

Robert M. Hamblen, 72 votes, Porter M. Groves, 67, Al McDaniel, 50, ((approx.) Samuel Oliver, 40, (approx.) Moses Stinson, 8 votes. In the general November election, 1894, he was elected over his Republican opponent, Asa Duncan, by about a two to one vote. This office he held till January 1, 1901. He made a popular official. Played the violin quite well.

He was of large stature, and possessed unusual strength. Six feet tall, weight slightly over 200 pounds. He died, December 13, 1913. In his obituary his sister-in-law, Eunice L. Hamblen wrote: "While he was not a church member, he was a firm believer in the supremacy of a Divine Ruler over all, and carried out the golden rule—loving his neighbor as himself—, for no one can say that he turned any one away without giving assistance, in whatever manner asked."

She (Fanny) died, April 3, 1930. Both buried in Taggart Cemetery. Their children were:

[147] BARTHOLOMEW HAMBLEN,⁵ (Brother of Robert M.) born, October 1, 1841, in Claiborn County, Tennessee. Moved with parents, 1845, to Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia. October, 1857, the family moved by wagon and team overland to Hamblen Township, Brown County, Indiana, where he grew to manhood on the farm. Played the violin.

September, 1864, he was drafted for service in the Union Army, Civil War. This service he could not think of performing for the reason that Tennessee and Virginia had been his birthplace and home only a short time before. Scores of his near relatives and dear friends still lived there and he saw no force strong enough that he should bear arms against them.

Draft officers left official notice of his having been drawn for service at his father's home on a day when he was absent. When he returned in the evening his mother, Ruth, informed him of the notice. He said to her: "Mother, I will not go! I will die first!" Her reply was: "I don't blame you!"

He went that night and met in council with his friend and neighbor, Cyrus Bailey, who had also been drafted, and resolved not to serve. They decided to attempt to leave the country. This they did on the next night following.

Each had a splendid horse on which they rode away. Unmolested, they made their way to Shelby County, Illinois, where both had a host of friends. Bartholomew changed his name to "Ben Ramsey" and stayed in the locality till in the fall of 1868, at which time he returned to his father's home in Brown County, Indiana.

Married, October, 1871 Lucretia Wendland, born, 1851, in Ohio. daughter of John and Sarah Wendland. *

He was a genius with machinery and from the time that he reached manhood he worked with sawmills, threshing machines and other machines. In the spring of 1873, he and John Gillaspay owned a sawmill which was located on Hamblen Creek, a short distance above where the creek forks above the original Job Hamblen homestead. He lived a short distance from the mill.

One evening in May, about 4 o'clock, a great cloud-burst took place about the head of the creek and the water began to raise rapidly. Bartholomew had a calf in a pen near the creek bank. He went to remove the calf and while he was doing so a mighty roll of water some 5 or 6 feet high came rushing down and caught him. He was rushed along with the waters and rubbish till he came to a large oak tree. This he caught hold of but it was too large for him to climb. By great effort

* Note 164. It was generally believed by the Hamblen relatives that this name was spelled "Windland" and so they spoke it. The Wendlands were of German descent. They moved to eastern Washington Township, Brown County, Indiana, during the late 1860's. John Wendland enlisted in the Union Army, Civil War, January 4, 1864, in Company D, 116th Regiment, Ohio Infantry. Discharged, Feb. 20, 1865. He died, Oct., 1886, Washington Township. Their children were: Susanna, m. Robert Mobley, had several children, Lucretia, (above) Mary Jane, m. Richard Eddy, Sarah, m. Albert Lister, and Prudence, d. 1886.

he held on to this tree till the water receded nearly an hour later, when a neighborhood woman, Mrs. Kate Scollard, rode to his rescue on a horse. He was faint from exhaustion and injury. It was many weeks before he recovered. The mill was entirely swept away by the flood.

After this misfortune he took employment in the wagon making shop of William P. Taggart and moved to the Taggart village. Here he lived and followed the wagon making trade till his health failed a few months before his death. He played the violin.

He died, December 12, 1881, cause tuberculosis. It was thought that the injuries he received in the flood mentioned above developed into the disease that caused his death. He was a member of the Methodist Church South. Voted Democrat. A man held in highest esteem by all who knew him.

Their children were:

- 469.* THOMAS BENTON, born, December 4, 1873.
- 470.* ODDY WILLIAMSON, " May 20, 1875.
- 471.* DAVID DUDLEY, " September 14, 1876.
- 472.* BARTHOLOMEW, " February 1, 1880.
- 473.* SYLVESTER BYRON, " July 20, 1881.

The mother, Lucretia, managed to keep her children in a home by living at different places in the community, Hamblen Township, till her health failed in the fall of 1885. At this time she gave up home keeping and went to her father's home to live. The four older boys were taken into the homes of other relatives to live.

She also died of tuberculosis, March 25, 1887. Buried beside her husband in Taggart Cemetery, Hamblen Township. Their graves are marked by a fine monument erected by their three older sons, about 1911.

[148] ELEANOR (Ella) HAMBLEN,⁵ (Sister of Robert M.) born March 22, 1844, in Claiborn County, Tennessee. Moved with parents, 1845, to Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia. October, 1857, moved with her family to Hamblen Township, Brown County, Ind.

Married, September 14, 1867, John Washington Satterthwaite, born, November 13, 1843, in Belmont County, Ohio, son of Richard and Ursula (Brock) Satterthwaite.*

* Note 165. The original Satterthwaite father was a native of Wales. He moved, about 1660, with his wife and four sons to England. The four sons who were Quakers, moved to the Quaker Colony of Pennsylvania, Bucks County, near Philadelphia, near the time of the founding of that city, 1682.

A descendant of one of these four brothers moved with his family to Belmont County, Ohio, when that county was first settled, about the 1820's. He established a salt making works there. One son, Thomas Satterthwaite moved with his family to South Bethany, western Bartholomew County, Indiana, 1849 or '50. Here he assisted in laying out a townsite and established a store. His sons were: Richard, (above) William, Mason and Levi; daughters, Martha, Nancy, and Gerusia. Richard married Ursula Brock in Ohio, came to and bought a farm on Salt Creek, about a mile east of the village,

Soon after their marriage they moved to Shelby County, Illinois, and lived five years. They then returned to Brown County, Indiana, and lived on a farm near her father till the fall of 1876, when he and her brother, Robert M. Hamblen, in partnership, bought the David R. Hamblen homestead. On this they resided till September, 1879, he sold his interest in the farm to her brother, Williamson, and moved by wagon and team to Shelby County, Illinois.

Here they resided the remainder of their lives. They owned a home in the town of Oconee and he operated a farm nearby. She died September 5, 1913. After her death he made his home, mostly, with his daughter, Wilma. He died at her home in St. Louis, Missouri, January 19, 1924. Both buried in Oconee Cemetery at Oconee, Ill.

[149] WILLIAMSON HAMBLEN,⁵ (David R.⁴ John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, October 3, 1846, on his grandfather's homestead, Hamblen Creek, Lee County, Virginia. Moved with his parents, October, 1857, by wagon and team * over what is now (1934) the Daniel Boone Trail across Kentucky to Hamblen Township, Brown County, Indiana. Here he grew to manhood on his father's farm. (See his picture, pages 197 and 279).

Received very little schooling but took more to music on the violin. This instrument he began to play when he was six years old. It was his daily companion till he became highly skilled at performing upon its strings. His services were much sought for all kinds of entertainments. He did not read the written scale of music, but learned it entirely from hearing others play and possessed a wonderful vocabulary of the best music of his day. It was said that he could play from memory more than 700 compositions. It was conceded by experts that his playing was of the highest order.

At the age of 37 he began making violins and made at odd times about 25 instruments. Several of these were pronounced by competent judges to possess real merit and showed remarkable mechanical skill.

Married, December 31, 1874, at the home of her uncle, Maurice M. Clark, in Hamblen Township, Eunice Lorena Collins, his uncle, Rev. William Hamblen, officiating. She was born May 25, 1856, in Ham[blen Town-

Gnaw Bone, Washington Twp., Brown County. Their children were: John W., above, Thomas, Daniel, Oddy and Wilma. Thomas and Daniel moved to Shelby Co., Illinois, and reared families. Oddy was a soldier in Union Army, Civil War. Died, June, 1864, in Andersonville Confederate military prison. Wilma married Cyrus Bailey and lived in Shelby County.

Richard, their father, died while his children were young, caused from over exertion while trying to extinguish fire in his stacks of wheat, set by the children at play. Ursula, his widow, married Rev. Joseph Rice, brother of Mily, wife of Jesse Hamblen. They lived in Shelby Co. Died there.

EXPLANATION OF PICTURES ON OPPOSITE PAGE.

Violins owned by Williamson Hamblen at time of his death, 1820.

1. "Betty," violin bought by David R. Hamblen, November, 1826.
(See page 124)
2. "Tilda," violin bought by himself, October, 1868. A lion's head on the neck. Of wonderful beauty and tone.
3. Made by Mr. Hamblen, 1883. His first effort, using combination in design of "Tilda" and "Betty". It was his desire to make a copy of the veteran Tilda, but he was fearful that he could not secure the neck to the body, owing to the slenderness of her design. So he fashioned that part from "Old Betty." Hence, an original model, one never before used in violin making.
4. Improved model over No. 3, made 1887. He and his father, David R., both worked on it. Something seemed lacking in his first model, so he added the extended corners, using the entire upper half of "Old Betty" for the design of this one; thus the shape was more pleasing.
5. Much to his delight, an exact copy of "Old Betty," built, 1912.
6. Model built, 1893, of wild cherry wood. Given as a reward to his son A. Porter, for learning to play it.
7. One of the most perfect playing of his own make. Built, 1904.
8. Built, 1888. He made it "fuller breasted" or deeper through, with the result of a very pleasing tone for the performer's own enjoyment, but not so loud.
9. Built about 1915. A beautiful model and plays well.
10. His last effort, built, October, 1919. A nice violin.
11. Considered the most perfect playing instrument of his whole lot. (own make). Built, 1913. Presented to his grandson, Jennings B. Hamblen.
12. He considered this one his masterpiece. Built, September, 1919, a short time before his death, at the age of seventy-three.

ship, daughter of Sardine Young and Cynthia (Clark*) Collins.† She grew to womanhood living, mostly in Franklin, Johnson County, Indiana, where she attended the public schools and Franklin College, receiving a fair education. (See her picture page 279).

He lived and worked in Shelby and Douglas Counties, Illinois, at different times before his marriage.

* Note 166. Tradition claims that the founder of this branch of the Clark family were of Virginia stock and moved from there to Maryland. One son, Abraham, moved, 1818, to Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and settled 25 miles from Philadelphia, where he reared his family. His children were: Thomas, Abraham, Benjamin, Solomon, Mary and Jane.

Benjamin, born, March 17, 1797, married in Bucks Co., Pa., Pheoba Ann Williams, b. Jan. 1, 1800. Their children born there were: Ann, Charles Yocum, Elizabeth, John, George and Cynthiana. Well to do and prominent. Democrat. served as Justice Peace, Twp. Assessor, Twp. Trustee, 9 years. Postmaster, 9 yrs. at Medaryville, 2nd class office, during Woodrow Wilson administration.

† Note 167. The Collins name originated in Ireland. Year 1001 A. D. the Irish King, Brian Born, issued a decree that every family or clan in Ireland should adopt a sir name. The prevailing custom was to adopt the name of some chief of their tribe. The Collins name stem was taken from the Chieftain O'Coilean, whose ancestor was Dorm, brother of King Brian.

O'Coilean must have been a distinguished warrior, for the word "Coilean"

They established residence in Hamblen Township and lived on different farms till fall of 1879 when he bought half interest in his father's old farm in partnership with his brother Robert M. Hamblen. Here they lived till the spring of 1883, when they bought 40 acres (sw, nw $\frac{1}{4}$, sect.2, twp.9, r3e) near by and moved to it. Later bought another 40 acres.

Spring of 1902, sold his personal property and moved to Roger Mills County, Oklahoma (Later Beckham Co.) where he entered 160 acres, government land. This he sold, May, 1903, and returned to their former home in Brown County. Here they lived till the spring of 1910 when they moved to Franklin, Johnson Co. Here they resided till his in Irish means, "a young war dog" and the prefix "O" signifies, of, or a "descendant of."

Dorm was descendant from Herber, eldest of three sons of the ruler Milesias, whose domain embraced Spain, Portugal and southern France as far as Galicia. Milesius invaded Ireland, 1699 B. C. and established his sons as rulers. Descendants of these three brothers ruled as kings of Ireland for 2871 years, till Henry 11 of England took over the Irish government 1170 A.D.

John Collins was the American emigrant, said to have been born in Wales, probably about 1750. Came to America when a young man, and after living at other places, settled in Washington County, Ohio, Christmas Day, 1802, with his family. His children were: Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah (Sally), John, Henry, James and Thomas.

Henry Collins married a widow, Frances Payton, whose maiden name was Ewart. The Ewarts were English. The late premier of England, William Ewart Gladstone was of the same family. Frances Ewart had a brother, Robert. His son, Thomas Ewart, was a prominent attorney of Marietta, Ohio. Thomas son was William D. Ewart, inventor of the sprocket wheel and endless chain, now used in all kinds of machinery. It made him wealthy. He lived in Chicago.

Henry Collins was born, 1777, died 1851. Lived with his wife, Frances, on a farm and reared their family in Washington County, Ohio. Their children were: Elliott, Sardine Young, Elizabeth, Francis Ewart, John Henthorn and Jerry William.

Sardine Young Collins, born December 12, 1815. Was appointed postmaster at Greenview, Washington Co., Ohio, April 1, 1839, and served till March 2, 1848. Conducted a general store in connection. Married, 1847, in Wash. Co., Mariah Hodgins. Had children: Alonzo Dean, Sabina Luessa, and Ulyses Elvitus. The mother died, 1853.

He moved, 1854, with his children, to Hamblen Township, Brown County, Indiana, and established a home on 240 acres of land that his three children inherited from their grandfather Hodgins. He married second, March 4, 1855, Cynthia Clark, born March 22, 1831, daughter of Benjamin and Pheobe Ann (Williams) Clark, (See note 166.) They continued to live at the above mentioned home, (ne, sw 1-4, sect. 34, twp. 10, r3e.)

He established the Cleona Postoffice at his residence, May 17, 1855, and served as its postmaster till September 5, 1862. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Nashville, Brown County. Voted Democrat. (Cont'd. next page.)

death January 4, 1920. Buried at Rest Haven Cemetery, Edinburg, Johnson County. He and his wife joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South, 1875. He was an enthusiastic church worker the remainder of his life. He was an active worker in the Democrat party. Especially well known over Brown County for his music on the fife as leader of fife and drum corps, during the old time political campaigns.

Their children were:

Moved with her parents, October, 1857, to Hamblen Township, Brown County, Indiana, where she was reared to womanhood. She possessed a wonderful fine voice as a singer during her youthful years.

Married, April 2, 1876, in Hamblen Twp., John Wesley Tull, born March 2, 1858, in Brown County, son of Lewis Jackson and Indiana (Williams) Tull. † They lived near his mother's homestead during their Children, second marriage: Eunice Lorena, (above) b. May 25, 1856, John Elsworth, b. December 13, 1864. He and his wife separated, spring of 1864. She moved to Franklin, Johnson Co. After a few years he went with his son, Alonzo, to Independence, Kansas, and later to Longton, where he died, September, 1881, and where he was buried by Masonic and Odd Fellows lodges.

She returned to Hamblen Twp., 1875, and bought 67 acres, adjoining land of her brother, Maurice M. Clark. Here she resided with her son, John Elsworth, till 1891, when he enlisted in 7th Infantry U. S. Army. He served eight years. Participated in the siege and capture of Santiago, Cuba, War with Spain, July, 1898. She married second, October, 1897, Jonathan W. Compton, who had served in Co. K. 1st Indiana Heavy Artillery, Civil War. He died, Nov. 1905, and she Nov. 12, 1910, at Edinburg, Ind. Buried there.

* Note 167a. Hetty A. Hamblen never married. Lived in Franklin, Indiana, latter part of her life.

† Note 168. Levan Tull was the founder of this family in Indiana. He was a native of North Carolina and came to Brown County, Indiana, a short time before the county was organized, 1836. His wife was Lurana Mathis, sister of Reuben Mathis, a prominent pioneer resident of near Nashville.

Levan settled with his family on government land, one and one-half miles east of Nashville, where he built a water power grist and sawmill. He sold this location and in partnership with John Huff, August 7, 1844, entered 45 acres (se. sw1-4, sect. 19, twp. 9, r3e) adjoining the townsite of Nashville and on it built a good water-power mill on Salt Creek, southeast of the town.

This mill they operated for a few years. He traded his interest for land (the Henry King farm of later years) on Greasy Creek. This he sold and moved to Missouri, where he died. Children by his wife Lurana were: Lewis Jackson, (above) born, 1821; John William, Isaac, Martin, Percilla, and twins, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison. The mother died when twins were six weeks old.

early married years. Then moved to Hamblen Township, where he worked in the timber for her brothers, Robert M. and Williamson. From there moved back to Washington Township and in July, 1889, moved to Newton, Harvey Co., Kansas, where they lived for three years. She often related her own experience when a young girl of how she determined if she were ever to be married. Going to a cross roads, one June morning, before sun-up, she recited the prescribed verses for a maiden on such occasion, the last lines of which were:

*"If I am to marry not,
Let me hear my coffin knock."*

She always declared that she heard three clear, distinct, "knock! knock! knocks!" come from the surrounding woods.

[153] ARMILDA RAMSEY,⁵ (Sister of Mary H.) born, May 21, 1838, in Claiborn Co., Tenn. (Later Hancock Co.) and was reared there. Married, January, 1859, Oliver Brewer, son of Marshall and Sarah (Light) Brewer † of Hancock County.

He enlisted in the Confederate States Army near the beginning of the Civil War. Came home on a furlough, October, 1862, with intention of moving his wife and baby to Lee County, Virginia, where Confederate military protection was stronger. Before he could accomplish his purpose a posse of men called "bush whackers"—Union sympathizers, but not enlisted soldiers—came in upon him. They took him a short distance from his residence, bound him to a tree and shot him to death. Seven bullets penetrated his body.

His wife and her sister, Lucinda, released his corpse, carried it to the house and prepared him for burial. They made his burial cloths from a piece of hand-made jeans cloth which was in their weaving loom at the time. They had one daughter:

[172] MARTHA ADLINE HAMBLÉN,⁵ (Sister of Elizabeth J.) born, February 15, 1854, on Big Salt Creek, southern edge of Hamblen Twp., Brown Co. Indiana. Rearer in the same township.

Married, Sept. 6, 1872, in Hamblen Twp., John Burnett Craven, b. Dec. 18, 1848, in Yorkshire, England, son of William and Mary (Burnett) Craven. * They lived in Hamblen Twp., all their married life.

He was an active Democrat and an ardent worker for his party's interests. He entered the Democratic primary election March, 1888, as a candidate for trustee of Hamblen Twp. Three other candidates were on the ticket. They were all related and each very popular. The pre-election canvass was waged by each with such vigor that as a result, the vote was close and tabulated as follows:

John B. Craven, 65 votes; John W. Barnhill, 60; William Samuel Walker, 55; George W. Hamblen, 50 votes. Craven becoming the nominee. The final election was held April 2, 1888. The Republican candidate against Craven was William W. Stockwell. So hotly had the Democrat primary been contested that the animosity had not

* Note 179. Thomas Craven was the father of William, lived and died in Yorkshire. William married, in Yorkshire, Mary Burnett, daughter of Thomas Burnett, also a resident of Yorkshire. Thomas Burnett served fourteen years in the British army. Was a drummer boy at the Battle of Waterloo, 1814.

William Craven emigrated, with his family, to United States of America, October, 1853. They lived a few years in Ohio and then moved to Hamblen Township Brown County, Indiana. Here he owned a good farm and reared his family. He was an expert blacksmith. Was elected and served as Justice of the Peace of the township for many years.

Their children were: John Burnett, (above) Hannah, m. Mayberry Taggart, (For Taggart see note 105, page 162) Thomas, m. Laura Gillaspy, daut. of William Eda Gillaspy. died during the short period between the two events, with the result that many Democrats voted for Mr. Stockwell and the following figures show the outcome:

	East Precinct.	West Precinct.	Total.
Craven, Dem.	60 votes	137 votes	197
Stockwell, Rep.	115 votes	101 votes	216

This was the first Republican official ever elected in Hamblen Township. Six years later, April, 1894, Mr. Craven was a candidate again in the Democrat primary election, with his opponents as, John Bisel, Thomas Anderson and John Petro. Bisel and Anderson received only a few votes and Craven won over Petro by 12 votes.

In the final election held November, 1894, Craven was elected by a good majority over his Republican opponent, William Teague. He made a competent and popular officer and served with such distinction that he was elected chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of Brown Co. in 1900 and served four years. He was also successful president of the Hamblen Township Fair Association which held agricultural and racing fairs at Sprunick for several years.

[173] REV. ISAAM WHEELIS.⁵ (Jane Hamblen.⁴ John M.³ Job.² George.¹) born, January 1, 1835, in Claiborne County, Tennessee. Moved with parents, spring of 1850, to Davis County, Iowa. * While yet a youth he became much interested in church work and began preaching as Cumberland Presbyterian, while yet in his teens.

Married, October 17, 1854, in Putnam Co., Missouri. Nancy Dye Bragg, born, November 11, 1835. They lived in Putnam County for about five years when they moved to Moravia, Appanoosa Co., Iowa. (Probably, 1859).

During the Civil War, while living at Moravia, he assisted in enlisting and drilling volunteers for service as soldiers. On account of tubercular symptoms, he was not permitted to enlist himself.

In the spring of 1863, an emigrant train was organized at Moravia to make an overland trip over the plains to the gold fields of California. Rev. Wheelis was elected chief in command of this expedition, which consisted of about thirty wagons and teams. A few horse and mule teams were in the train, but oxen made up the greater number. Several months were required to make the journey. The Rev. Wheelis and one other family stopped through the winter in the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

* Note 180. For account of this trip to Iowa read page 123.

and found employment working on a canal project. They completed the journey the next spring, being on the road one year. He settled with his family at Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, California, 50 miles north of San Francisco. After moving to California he continued actively engaged as a minister and as his work called him, lived at various places. For a time, soon after settling at Santa Rosa, he was living at Stockton, San Joaquin County, where he assisted with establishing and building a school, something in the nature of a college, and for a while was its president.

Later, between 1870 and '74 he was located at Santa Barbara and lived there till during 1876 he moved to San Louis Obispo. Removed 1880 from California to Goldendale, Klickitat County, Washington. Was living at Ellensburg, Kittitas County in 1888. In 1891 he was appointed to re-organize the church (United Presbyterian) at Rockford, Spokane County and while there also established a church at Fairfield, ten miles away, and one at Bonner's Ferry, Bonner County, Idaho, the northern most county of the state.

From Rockford, was transferred, about 1895, to Everson, Whatcom Co., very northwest county of the state of Washington. Here he organized a church and also one at Nooksack, a neighboring town. While holding services at Nooksack one evening, 1896. a curious and painful accident happened to him. The story as related by his granddaughter, Mrs. Willetta E. Connors follows: "During the delivery of his sermon, a kerosene lamp located above his head exploded and threw flaming oil over his head and shoulders. A lady in the audience ran forward and cast her coat or cape around him. He fell to the floor and she rolled him over and over till the fire was extinguished. He was badly burned but soon recovered."

He continued his labors in the above churches till during 1899. On account of ill health he resigned his position and went to California to rest and recuperate. At Redding, Shasta County, in company with some friends, while crossing a stream of water on the rocks, he slipped, fell, struck his head with such force that he never regained consciousness and died, May 19, 1900. His body was taken to Spokane, Washington for burial in Greenwood Cemetery. No tombstone, 1934.

His wife died, April 11, 1905. Also buried in Greenwood Cemetery. She was spoken of, very highly as an enthusiastic helper in the missionary work in which he spent his life.

[193] JAMES THOMAS HAMBLLEN,⁵ (Brother of Uriah) born December 23, 1837, on upper Salt Creek, Hamblen Twp., Brown Co., Ind. Nicknamed "Tanyard Jim" to distinguish him from the other James Hamblens of the community.

Married, January 25, 1859, in Hamblen Twp., Louisa Parmerlee, born Dec. 20, 1839, in Hamblen Twp., daughter of James and Mary (?) Parmerlee.† They probably lived at the "Tanyard" for a few years he converted into a well improved farm and on which they were yet living, 1934. Their children were: Armina, John Lewis, Thomas, Rueben, Ina, Mattie, Fay, Bessie and Jessie, twins, and Lois. He died September 11, 1936. Age 92.

John Wesley and Sarah (Hunt) Markwell had children: Abel, (above), James Houston, served 145th Indiana Infantry, Civil War. Married sisters Eliza Jane and Belle Campbell; Wallace, married Mary Rainwater, and Jaley, married William Rainwater. The Hunt and Markwell families were close neighbors and friends of many of the Hamblen families and most especially Henry C. Hunt and wife Ruthie who conferred exceptional parental love and favors upon this writer and family during their early struggle in the new territory of Oklahoma. Hence their names and pictures for which see page 124-25, are reverently recorded in this work. Also see their donation to John Hamblen monument fund page 81.

*Note 192. Elmer Markwell, wife Floe, was a printer on the Fort Worth Gazette (Texas) 1926. He had a twin sister who died in infancy.

†Note 193. James Parmerlee was a native of Rhode Island. Came to Hamblen Twp., Brown County, Indiana among the first settlers, during the 1830's. He bought land on Bean Blossom Creek (in se. ¼, sect. 28, twp. 10, r3e). Was an experienced tanner of leather and established an extensive leather business. Bought and tanned hides, into leather and manufactured, boots, shoes, harness and other leather products. Quite a village grew up, on his place, known as "Lee's Tanyard". He employed a number of workmen and did a flourishing business. Added to his (Continued on Page 224.)

During the Civil War he was appointed Provost Marshal for Hamblen Township and was instrumental in conducting the draft for soldiers for the Union Army when that measure was resorted to.

They moved about 1865, to the village, Georgetown, (P. O. Beanblossom) in Jackson Twp., where he operated a general store till about 1878. Was appointed postmaster at Bean Blossom, September 20, 1870, and served till April 29, 1872.

They moved about 1878, back to the Tanyard in Hamblen Twp., on part of the Parmerlee lands which his wife inherited. Here he operated a farm. She died, Dec. 15, 1883. This farm was sold about 1894 and he bought the original Eliakim homestead on Salt Creek, which he operated till his death, February 4, 1899.

He was a leading member of the Methodist Church at Gashen, near his Tanyard home. Voted republican. Both buried in the Goshen Cemetery. Thir children were:

It was after considerable effort that the writer secured the name and address of Mr. Elzia. His branch of the family had been lost from the Indiana relatives for more than forty years. Through this man's loyalty and kindness the Jefferson County kinsmen were relocated and a lot of their history secured. He has resided mostly in Jefferson Co., sometimes on a farm and some times in the city of Mt. Vernon. His life's history is best given by quoting his own words:

'I have moved from place to place and done a lot of hard work.
Worked for the Car Company in Mt. Vernon four or five times. I am their sewer man. Last season (1923), I laid four car loads of sewer pipe. Had 10 to 25 men. This summer I will run a gang on concrete and different things.'

Was living, 1930, on a farm again near Mt. Vernon. Plays the
lawn Lodge, No. 522, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

¶Note 248. The Walker family trace their lineage to ancient England. Their early ancestors found favor with the Royal government and were rewarded by being appointed caretakers of the royal forests. The ancient surname of the Walkers of Hertfordshire was De Forestier derived from their occupation in the royal forests, as forestiers, walkers or verderers, hence Walker signifies an officer whose duty consisted in walking over or inspecting a certain space of forest—royal forests. The name has appeared at different times in history as Le Walker, Walere, Walcker. Walkern and Walke. There was a Willi Waliker in the 13th century; a William Walkere in the reign of Henry III and a Nichs Walk in the time of Edward I. Hubert Walker was archbishop of Canterbury and Sir Walter Walker was advocate to Catherine, Queen of Charles II.

Peter Walker's father sacrificed his property in the cause of the house of Stuart, and fled from Cheshire into Ireland (about 1715). Isaac Walker, another supporter of the Stuarts, was forced to flee from England and found in France temporary security. Two brothers accompanied him and a reward of 500 pounds was offered for their heads. From France, Isaac sailed to America and landed in Maryland. He named his "large white-oak house, Toaping Castle", after the family stronghold in England.

The English arms of one branch of the Walker family are described thus:

"Erminois on a pile, embattled azure, a mural crown. Crest on the mural crown, or encircled by a wreath of laurel, an ostrich resting the dexter foot on a shell. The supporters are dexter, a lion, regardant, in the mouth a broken flagstaff; sinister, an ostrich. Motto: Nil Desperandum."

One tradition is that through the marriage of Hannah Walker to Samuel Evans the family is connected to Evans, or Evan-ap-Evan of Wales that trace their descent back to Marvyn Vrych, King of Mann (the isle) who married Essylt, daughter of the King of Wales.

Both Mervyn and Essylt were descended from Llud, King of Britain, brother of Caswallon, the chief who resisted Julius Caesar, 5 B. C.

The earliest known ancestor of the Brown County Walkers was Isaac Walker, who was born, lived and died in Virginia. (The Virginia Walkers may have migrated to Virginia from Maryland, as did George Hamblen and his family.) Isaac had several children. One son was Jacob, who left Virginia and moved to Henry Co., Kentucky, and from there to Johnson Co., Indiana, locating on the Nineveh and Edinburg road. This proved to be a malaria infected locality, so for health's sake he moved on to the hills of Brown County.

Seven sons of Jacob are known to have located in what is now Hamblen Township along with their father. Four of them, after a few years, moved away; James, superintendent of Sparksferry road, 1836, to Missouri; Arlanda, to Illinois; Zephaniah and Isaac to other localities.

Charles, second person to enter government land in Hamblen Twp., Dec. 24, 1829, in Sect. 23, Twp. 10, R 3e, west of Sprunica church, where he lived and died. His children were Sarah, m. Jasper Parsley (see note 235, page 245), Samuel, Trustee Hamblen Twp., 1883, Treasurer Brown Co., 1892. William, James Zephaniah and John M., merchant at Spearsville, Hamblen Township.

Franklin, lived in east edge of Georgetown (Bean Blossom) where he reared his family, and died. Children: Dudley, John and Suzan, m. John Turner.

Samuel, entered land about a mile east, on Salt Creek, in same section as Charles, 1833. The Walker school house built on his land. Wife was Nancy Young. Their children were: Franklin, (above) Jacob Perry, m. Cynthia White, Arlanda, m. Mary Kennett, William, m. Elizabeth Taggart (see note, 105, page 164), Harrison, m. Eliza Hurd; James K., m. Catherine Campbell; Scott, m. Clarissa Duhamell; Nancy, m. Samuel Tracy; Sarah Jane, m. William Fraker.

She died of paralysis, May 31, 1892. After several years he sold his homestead and moved to Nineveh, Johnson Co., where he lived till his death, January 8, 1922, age 92 years. Both buried, Spruncia, Brown Co. Their children were:

The first to describe the disease was the French physician, J. B. Baillou, in 1681. He observed that the disease was characterized by a high fever, a rapid pulse, and a general prostration of the patient. He also noted that the disease was often fatal. The disease was later described by other physicians, and it was eventually identified as a form of typhus. The disease is caused by the bacterium Bacillus typhus, which is transmitted to humans by the body louse.

*Note 321. Sylvester Satterthwaite with his ready Irish humor related a coal mine experience as follows: Being among those miners most trusted to work in the ever present gas areas, was sent one day to such a suspected part of the mine. He was driving a mine mule and accompanied by his mine "Boss". They unexpectedly ran into the gas region and without taking the lamps from their caps and holding them low out of the gas. A flash came. Both dropped to the floor and the mule was loosed. He was scorched and dashed away, running directly over the "boss". Vessie, unhurt, laughed at the incident. This angered the "boss" and he proceeded to give Sylvester a piece of his mind. More so, Vessie suspected, because he had escaped unscathed, while he, the boss, himself had been trampled by the mule.

UNCLE SI'S PHILOSOPHY

BY A. PORTER HAMBLÉN

(Is set to music)

Ole Uncle Si lib high on a hill,
Whar de Mockin' Bird sing and de Whip-poor-will,
Workin' in de rocks an' hoein' ob de co'n,
Lookin' foh a squahl an' de dinnah ho'n.

CHORUS:—

Dcn't weep Dinah! chil'n don't you cry,
Lis'n to yo foddah, hard workin' Ole Si,
He sho' tell de truth, he nebber tell a lie,
"De Lawd nebber made a 'possum,
- What 'E made a 'simmon tree close by!"

When de sun am gone an' dew on de grass,
Hangin' up his hoe, Si's gone at las'
Thinkin' ob his suppah an' de ole banjo,
Kickin' up a dust wid his heel an' toe. --

Peepin' round de connah dars Dinah in de doah, Shakin' ob 'er fist an' she almost swore,
Says Si, "W'ats de mattah! O! Dinah, heah me now-"
Quakin' in de jints, an' sweattin' on de brow.

"Si cle hubby! How does yo' Dinah feel Try'nah make a hoe-cake, dar aint no meal?"
'Dinah ole gal! Don't kick up sich a fuss, Let de hoe-cake go, make a big pot o' mush!"

Trained there till November, then sent to Camp Doniphan, Lawton, Okla. Assigned to Supply Company of 129th Field Artillery, April, 1918, and entrained to New York City.

Sailed from that port April 1st, on steamer Carpathia. Landed Liverpool, England, April 23. Took railway train to Dover. Transport from there to St. Nazarre, France. Rushed to Flanders front and went into action with the English Army. From this front, transferred to a French sector in the Vosger Mountains.

When the American First Army was organized his command was assigned to the 35th Division in which it served to the end of the war. He took part in the Battle of St. Mihiel, Sept. 12, 1918. Next came the Argonne Forest offensive, beginning on Sept. 26th. The 129th had its part in this drive and Daniel C. was in the thick of it. On one occasion all the horses of his battery were killed as were several of the men. Their guns were damaged and abandoned. As Dan himself put it: "We played leap frog with Rain Bow Division batteries. Reorganized, picked up some of their guns and wheeled them into action."

Was still in action in the Argonne when the Armistice was signed, November 11, 1918. After the armistice he served in the army of occupation in Germany. At one time was confined in a hospital in Lunenburg on account of severe gasoline burns about hands and face. His command was released from occupation duty and returned to St. Nazarre, from where it embarked, April, 1919, on steamship Rhine-dam. Landed at Newport News, Virginia, May 2nd. Entrained to Ft. 1937. In 1937, the American Medical Association (AMA) was founded. The AMA is a non-profit organization that represents the interests of physicians in the United States. It was founded in 1847, but the current organization was established in 1937. The AMA is the largest medical organization in the United States, with over 250,000 members. It is known for its advocacy on behalf of physicians and its role in setting standards for medical practice.

The AMA has a long history of advocacy and has been instrumental in many of the major medical reforms in the United States. It has been a leading voice in the fight for medical malpractice reform, the establishment of the National Board of Medical Examiners, and the creation of the Federal Food and Drug Administration. The AMA has also been a strong advocate for the interests of physicians in the workplace and in the community.

[1239] ORLEN CHANCEY BREWER,⁷ (Brother of Leonard L.) b. March 22, 1897, in Springfield, Missouri. Reared there. Enlisted, February, 1914, in Company K, 2nd Reg. Missouri State Militia. Served in Springfield till June 21, 1916, sent to Mexican Border. Stationed at Laredo, Texas, and did border patrol duty till Jan. 10, 1917, company was released and returned to Springfield. His company enrolled in National Guard. Was called into service, August 5, 1917, for World War duty and sent to Camp Doniphan, Fort Sill, Okla., where remained till April, 1918. At this time Chancey was transferred to Co. B, 130th Machine Gun Battalion and sent to New York City. April 6, embarked on S. S. Carpathia and sailed by way of Iceland and landed at Liverpool, England, April 23rd.

Transferred at once to the Flanders front and went into action with English troops. From hence to French sector in Vosges Mountains along Rhine River and saw considerable service on firing line. Transferred into 35th Division and sent into drive on St. Mihiel sector and took part in that noted battle, September 12, 1918.

From this action returned to Argonne Forest sector and about Sept. 25th entered into the drive there, near Verdun. On Sept. 30, about 3:00 p. m., while lying prone under heavy fire was struck by a bursting German shrapnel. Six pieces entered his body; one in right arm, three in right thigh, between hip and knee, one in right hip that passed to right nipple, was never removed, and one in the back that lodged in abdomen and was not removed. This one was three inches long and as large as a man's forefinger. Treated in Dijon Base Hospital No. 17 for three months. Surprisingly, recovered and rejoined his regiment.

Embarked on converted German steamship. Antigone, April, 1919 from St. Nazaire, France and landed, ten days later at Newport News, Va. Discharged at Camp Funston, Ft. Riley, Kansas, May 17, 1919. Returned to home in Springfield. Employed there, 1926, in shops of Frisco Railroad Co., where the writer saw him, apparently in good health and a fine specimen of manhood. Later went to Chicago, Ill., where employed for some time. Living, 1933, in Houston, Texas, employed as book-keeper with Humble Oil Company. Not married.

[1241] BENJAMIN FRANKLIN BREWER,⁷ (Brother of Kitty G.) b. Jan. 3, 1896 near Sneedville, Hancock Co., Tenn. Reared there, on a farm. Enlisted, under the selective draft, Sept. 20, 1917, at Sneedville, for service, World War. Trained at Camp Gordon, Ga., and Camp Sumner, Greenville, South Carolina. Assigned to Co. B, 117th Infantry, 30th Division. Sailed overseas from Long Island, New York, May 11, 1918 and landed in France on 28th. Was sent at once to Ypres, Belgium sector of battle front. Went "over the top" in a charge near that place on July 17, 1918.

On September 5, 1918, from a station near and to north of Aire, Flanders, he took part in the general advance made by the Allied armies from Ypres to Reims. At this time his Division was operating with the English. German army was driven back to near Armentiers after much hard fighting. About the middle of September his (the 30th) division was shifted south and placed in the all American army under General Pershing's direct command.

September 29th, his division went into action against the famous Hindenburg Line, north of St. Quentin, near Bellenglise. By all but superhuman effort they drove the Germans from what was considered an impregnable position in the St. Quentin Canal Tunnel. This action lasted two days and this division won immortal distinction by its accomplishments.

After this, in a few days, the 30th Division was again placed in co-operation with the English Army. On October 8th, in the darkness of a wild autumn night, an attack was made on the last defense of the Hindenburg line, with the result that it was completely broken on a twenty-mile front. About three o'clock in the afternoon, while charging across open country, Benjamin was struck in the face by a piece of bursting shell, which cut a wound about two inches long in his nose.

He was taken to a field hospital for first aid and in a few days transferred to a hospital in England. Recovered after about a month's confinement there. Armistice was declared while at this hospital. Soon afterward rejoined his regiment in France. On March 27, 1919, embarked at Dover, England, for the trip home. Landed at Charleston, South Carolina, April 8th. Discharged on 13th at Fort Oglethorp, Georgia. Returned to his home near Sneedville, Tennessee.

WILLIAM ALBERT WRAY

The high esteem held by Johnson County, (Ind.) voters for Mr. Wray's many years of service on the County Council (A board of seven members that appropriates all funds for county expenses) where he was dubbed, "The watch dog of the treasury", was shown at the Primary Election held May 7, 1940 when he received 2,274 votes while his honorable opponent received only 1,667 votes.

Thus he became his party's nominee for County Commissioner, Third District, at the November election, 1940. There is little doubt for his election. He should take office January 1, 1941.

I have been trying to forget that hideous nightmare for fourteen years. * * * I was honorably discharged and cited by three citations, U. S. medal by the late President Wilson for extraordinary effort, but I just can't talk about it. It actually scared my soul and robbed me of my own personality. I have never spoken of it to my own family.

"No statesman was great enough to stop that war and no soldier was strong enough to win it. There may be some strong characters who can thrust the horrors of such a conflict in the background, but its deteriorating influence upon ordinary humans can never be entirely effaced. So, I beg of you, dear relative, allow me to keep this a closed book!" He was discharged at Camden, N. J. late 1918.

Enlisted, May, 1918, U. S. Army, World War, from DeKalb Co. Sent, May 26, to Camp Gordan, Atlanta, Georgia. Assigned, Co. 39,

4th Infantry, Replacement Regiment. Made corporal about June 10th. Sent from Camp Gordon to New York City, about July 15th. Embarked for duty overseas from New York, July 22, on steam ship Orea. Destination, England. Next word from him was August 14th, when he wrote a letter from France. In it he said: "Will probably meet Fritz (Germans) soon." Still in 39th Company, Replacement Regiment. The following is copied from his next letter:

"Dear mother: Aug. 20, 1918. Now at the front, feeling fine. Have been riding so long I am worn out. Seems that I have time to toured the whole country. * * * Well, I don't know any news, so will ring off for this time. Hoping to hear from you soon, your son,
Don in France,
Cpl. Donald I. Ford.

28th Reg. Inf., Co. M, 1st Division, A. E. F. in France."

His next letter and his last to his home folks was dated: "August 30, 1918. Somewhere in France." He stated in these words: "I am well and feeling fine. Haven't got any mail lately. So you see it makes things rather dreary, though what can one expect at this time?"

The censor was so strict on writing letters from the battle front that very little could be written to home folks.

A personal letter to the writer, signed by Major General C. P. Summerall, who commanded the First Division at this time in France, explains the status of Company M, 28th Infantry, from the time Donald joined it till the time of his mortal wound. The letter follows:

'HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION. Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky.
April 10, 1920.

Mr. A. P. Hamblen, Franklin, Ind.

Dear sir:—Replying to your inquiry of the 5th instant concerning the activities of Company M, 28th Infantry, during the period, August 15-October 12, 1918, the following is submitted:

Very truly, C. P. SUMMERALL, Major General, U. S. A.
Camp and Division Commander.

A prior letter from General Summerall follows:

Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky., March 8, 1920.

Dear sir:—Your letter of March 3rd concerning the status of Corporal Donald I. Ford, formerly Company M, 28th Infantry, received.

The records of the 28th Infantry show him to have been killed in action October 12, 1918, near Very, France, and buried near there.

The records of his company were lost while in France, so nothing can be learned from them. Inquiry has been made among members of his company, to learn the particulars of his death, but no one now present can give any information. I regret my inability to give you further information, but the losses sustained by the Division, the movement of the troops engaged in battle, and the demobilization of those who might possibly be able to give further information prevent it."

Very truly, C. P. SUMMERALL, Major General, U. S. A., Camp & Division Commander.

His mother and family were given the option of having his body sent home for final burial, but they chose to leave him buried in the French cemetery at Very. A photograph of his grave and marker was sent by the government to his home folk.

Company M, was the first American company to be awarded the Fourragie of the Croix de Guerre by the French Government. This decoration is awarded only to units which have been cited twice for extraordinary service by the commanding general of an army in the field. Donald's family received this decoration and also a victory medal from the French Government.

A peculiar co-incidence was that the death of Donald's fiancée, Miss Helen Faber of Paw Paw, Lee Co., Ill., took place on October 30th following his death. Word of his death had not yet reached her. Her father, W. C. Faber, was a well-to-do fine stock breeder, who lived near where Donald was employed in DeKalb Co., for several years. Sic Vita.

A TEACHER'S GIFT

"What shall I bring? A lamb, some myrrh, some gold?

Ah, no, the gift I bring to Him no treasure box can hold.

A child I bring; He Christward grew, because I taught.

My gift is greater far, Than these the Wise Men brought.

My gift, a child; Good will to all shines from his eyes.

My teaching is the gift I bring; I, too, am counted wise."

At an early age developed exceptional musical talents. At age of 8 performed so unusually well while connected with a drum corps that Hon. William J. Bryan engaged his band to accompany his speaking tour of Illinois and other states while campaigning for the presidency. They became fast friends and George afterward appeared on chautauqua programs along with Mr. Bryan.

Drums and traps were his favorite instruments, although he played the xylophone with unusual skill and ranked as one of America's foremost performers on that instrument. He adapted himself to the study of military band instruments and by the time he was age twenty became a talented band director. From 1908 to 1930 he owned and directed his internationally famous Gold Band and orchestra organization. He, himself performed upon a snare drum that cost $250.00.

His Gold Band became a chautauqua favorite and he played chautauqua circuits from 1913 to 1928, fifteen summer seasons, in all parts of United States and Canada. Fall seasons of 1914-15, he played with world famous Sousa's Band on national tours. Summer seasons of 1916 and '17, he played with Ringling Brothers' Circus. During 1925 to 1927, was official band and orchestra conductor at radio station WLS, Chicago, Ill., under the name of "Corn Huskers."

Since 1930 to date, has been Director of Music at Illinois State Penitentiary, Pontiac, Ill. He stated, 1939 that he had a parade and concert band of 100 men, a very fine orchestra of 20 pieces and a beginner's band of 60 men at that institution.

During several years he used as his opening program number, "Culver Black Horse Troop March", written by his relative, John Marshall Gillaspy (See page 292). He stated: "I think it is the greatest march I ever heard or played and it never fails to go over big."
